MEANING OF TERMS

USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

- "APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- "APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- "CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- "DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- "DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- "EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- "EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.
- "FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- "NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- "OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- "REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- "MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

Part I.—Nature, Characteristics, Definitions and Classification.

SECT. 1.—NATURE AND CHARACTERISTICS.

1. Apart from statute—No existence apart from members.]—(1) Where a person has been, by the fraudulent misrepresentation of directors, or by their fraudulent concealment of facts, drawn into a contract to purchase shares in a co., the directors cannot enforce the contract against him, but he may rescind it, but he must do so within a reasonable time.

(2) Limited Liability Acts previous to 1862 do not destroy, but only restrict, the liability of a shareholder in a co. formed under their provision, & change the form of enforcing it.

(3) The direct remedy of a creditor of an incorporated co. is solely against the co., & not against its individual members as upon a contract with them. But though, as between the co. & the member, the member might have a good legal or equitable defence to a call upon himself, he may be liable to contribute to the assets of the co. required for the payment of the co.'s creditors.

(4) A member of a limited liability co. which is wound up, resembles, with respect to creditors, a member of a co. under 1844 Acts, or a partner in a partnership which has become bkpt. The only difference is as to the extent of the liability.

Where a memorandum of assocn., which was registered, differed from the prospectus on which it professed to be founded & on which, as setting forth the true objects of the assocn., A. had become a shareholder, though he, on discovering the difference, might have repudiated his shares, he could not after the failure of the co. relieve himself from liability to contribute to the debts of the assocn., on the ground that he had been ignorant of something, which, with proper diligence, he might have known.

(5) It is the duty of a person taking shares in a co. to use reasonable diligence in making himself acquainted with the provisions of the memorandum of assocn. He must take the consequences of neglect.

(6) The certificate of the registrar under 1862 Act, is conclusive that all previous requisites have been complied with.

A. applied, on the faith of statement in a prospectus, for shares in a limited liability co. They were allotted. His name was put on the register of shareholders. At the end of nine months the co. failed. It was ordered to be wound up. A. then applied to have his name removed from the list of contributories:—Held: (7) it was properly placed there.

(8) A variance between a prospectus & the memorandum of assocn. of a co. will not, necessarily & as of course, relieve a member of the co. from his liability as a contributory.

PART I. SECT. 1.

a. Under statute—As person.]—At a meeting of ratepayers held pursuant to 34 Vict. c. 54, the president of an incorporated co. was present, & tendered the vote of the co., which was refused, on the ground that above Act only gave "persons" the right to vote, & not corps.:—Held: the co.'s vote was improperly rejected, & the proceedings were quashed.—R. v. REID (1873), 2 Pug. 26.—CAN.

b. ———.]—ROYAL CANADIAN

(9) The genius of the law of England regarded with disfavour the notion of an incorporated co. having a persona distinguishable from its component members (LORD COLONSAY).

(10) I think it would be contrary to the tendency & scope of all the statutes to hold that cos. [under the Cos. Acts] are stripped of all the characteristics of mercantile partnerships & clothed with all the attributes of perfect corpns., without qualification (LORD COLONSAY).—OAKES v. 6. ———.]—(1) The rights of a co. under 1862 Act are not in all respects such as are by common law inherent in corpns. created otherwise than under that Act, but are limited by reference to the objects & purposes specified in the memorandum of assocn. as those for which the co. was established.

(2) The objects of a co. proposed to be incorporated under that Act, as stated in the memorandum of assocn. required by sect. 8 of the Act, cannot be departed from except so far as sect. 12 permits the change. The memorandum is the charter of the co. Consequently a contract made by the directors of such a co. upon a matter not included in the memorandum of assocn. is ultra vires of the directors, & is not binding on the co.

(3) A co. was registered under 1862 Act. Its objects, as stated in the memorandum of assocn., were to make, & sell, or lend on hire, railway carriages, & waggons, & all kinds of railway plant, fittings, machinery, & rolling-stock; to carry on the business of mechanical engineers & general contractors; to purchase, lease, work, & sell mines, minerals, lands, & buildings; to purchase & sell, as merchants, timber, coal, metals, or other materials, & to buy & sell any such materials on commission or as agents. The directors agreed to purchase a concession for making a railway in a foreign country, & afterwards, on account of difficulties existing by the law of that country, agreed to assign the concession to a Société Anonyme formed in that country, which société was to supply the materials for the construction of the railway, & to receive periodical payments from the English co.:—Held: this contract, being of a nature not included in the memorandum of assocn., was ultra vires not only of the directors but of the whole co. so that even the subsequent assent of the whole body of shareholders would have no power to ratify it.—ASHBURY RAILWAY CARRIAGE & IRON CO. v. 11. ——— Though virtually all shares owned by one member.]—Where a trader, who is solvent, converts his business into a limited liability co., & all the statutory requirements for the constitution of the co. are fulfilled, the ct. is not entitled to go behind the register & memorandum, & upon a speculative analysis of motives & the exorbitance of the price paid, to decide that the co. is not validly constituted on account of the non-fulfilment of conditions which are not found in the Cos. Acts.

The mere facts that the trader is virtually sole owner of the concern, the other shareholders having only a nominal interest & being members of his own family, & that he has received debentures secured on the business as part of the purchase-money, do not constitute the co. his agent or trustee, so as to entitle the company to an indemnity, or authorise the ct. to rescind the agreement for the sale of the business to the co. or to deprive the founder of his security so as to postpone his claim on the assets to that of the unsecured creditors.

When the memorandum is duly signed & registered, though there be only seven shares taken, the subscribers are a body corporate, "capable forthwith" to use the words of the enactment, "of exercising all the functions of an incorporate co." I cannot understand how a body corporate thus made capable by statute can lose its individuality by issuing the bulk of its capital to one person, whether he be a subscriber to the memorandum or not. 13. ——— Club.—The members of a club were formed into a joint stock co. incorporated under Cos. Acts for the purpose of carrying on the club. There was no rule in the memorandum or arts. of assocn. or constitution of the club which prevented other than members of the club from holding shares in the co., & in time, owing to the deaths of some members & the resignation of others who were shareholders, a few shares became the property of persons who were not members.

The co. in carrying on the club, among other things, sold by retail intoxicating liquors & tobacco to members of the club:—Held: the co. was a separate legal entity from the members of the club, & the sale of the intoxicating liquors & tobacco to members was not in law or in fact a distribution of the common property of the members among themselves, but the sale by retail of these articles by the co. to the members.—*NATIONAL SPORTING CLUB, LTD. v. 14. ———.—According to English law it is not possible for an individual corporator to be the legal owner of the whole of the stock of a co. so as legally to be the sole shareholder, inasmuch as the co. would by English law cease to exist if the number of corporators fell below a certain standard (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).

The acquisition of the whole of the shares of a corpn. by one individual does not of itself alter the nature of his relationship to the corpn. His de facto control when he possesses 98 per cent. is probably complete from a practical point of view, & although it is no doubt rendered more complete in theory when he possesses himself of the whole of the shares, it is still of the nature of a control exercised by corporators over the corpn., & does not make him & the corpn. in any sense identical. The directors of the corpn. do not become his agents. Their duties are still controlled by the rules & constitution of the corpn. itself (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—*GRAMOPHONE & TYPEWRITER, LTD. v. The deed then recited that such a co. had been registered, being that party to the deed, & that all its shares were taken & held by the partners in specified proportions; & it was thereby witnessed that, "in pursuance of the said arrangement, & for the purpose of giving effect to the said scheme, & of vesting the real estate of the partnership in the co.," the eight partners conveyed & assigned to the co. all the real estate & trade marks of the partnership:—Held: the deed was a transfer of property from individuals to a corpn. in consideration of "stocks or securities" within the meaning of Stamp Act, 1870 (c. 97), s. 71, & accordingly was a "conveyance on sale" chargeable with an ad valorem duty within the sched. to that Act, & was none the less so because the eight partners who conveyed the property were also the individuals who constituted the corpn.—*FOSTER (JOHN) & SONS v. 26. How determined—Registration according to English law—Though majority of shares held by alien enemies.]—An action was brought by a co. to recover the price of goods sold & delivered. The co. was registered in England under the Cos. Acts about eight years ago, having its office in London & its factory in Birmingham. Of its shares 380 were held by a naturalised German living in this country, & 1,435, being practically the whole of the remaining shares, were held by Germans resident in Germany. It was not disputed at the trial that the sum claimed was owing by defts., but the judge of the City of London Ct. decided that owing to the composition of pltf. co. it was not entitled, during the continuance of a state of war between this country & Germany, to sue in respect of the debt:—Held: when once the co. was registered according to English law, it became resident in this country, & was consequently entitled to judgment.—*AMORDUCT MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. fraud pltf. had been induced to take the shares, which proved worthless. The jury found that these contracts were material to be made known to the intended shareholders of the co.:—Held: (1) the contracts ought to have been specified in the prospectus, & defts. were liable; (2) the words “knowingly issuing” in sect. 38 mean intentionally issuing a prospectus without inserting the contracts which are required by that sect. to be specified, although they are omitted under the bonâ fide belief that it is unnecessary to specify them; (3) the prospectus was issued by the promoters as promoters within the meaning of the statute, notwithstanding they issued it after the co. had been registered, & after the prospectus had been settled by the board of directors.

At the trial the judge directed the jury that if the real damage occasioned to pltf. by deft.’s fraud was the price he paid for the shares, he was entitled to recover that amount. The jury assessed the damages at the price paid by pltf.:—Held: (4) the direction was right, & the shares taken by pltf. being worthless he was entitled to recover the amount paid by him for them.

31. — Question of fact not law.]—Defts., metal brokers, having previously sold ore of an American mine on a commission of 2½ per cent., arranged with a proprietor to assist in selling the mine to a co. to be raised by him in England. He was to procure the appointment of defts. as metal brokers of the co. at the usual rate of English commission, & he promised that defts. should be liberally remunerated to the extent at least of £5,000 for their assistance, & to compensate for the loss of the higher commission. They were, as he knew, acquainted with facts detrimental to the reputation of the mine, & he promised the liberal remuneration to ensure their silence respecting them. Defts. assisted him in his endeavours to sell the mine to a co. to be formed for the purchase of it, but left him to fix the price, get up the co., & manage all details respecting the sale. He procured the formation of pltf. co. & the purchase by it of the mine for £100,000, half to be paid in cash & half in paid-up shares. Defts. were appointed metal brokers of the co. at 1 per cent. commission, allowed themselves to be named in the prospectus as being ready to answer any inquiries relating to the mine, & answered such inquiries, but kept silence with respect to the detrimental facts known to them. Payment having been made for the mine to the proprietor, 250 fully paid-up shares out of those received from the co. were transferred by him to defts., & were subsequently sold, & the proceeds received by them. This transaction was not disclosed to the co. In an action to recover the proceeds as secret profits made by promoters, the judge left the question of promotorship, without any definition, to the jury, who found that defts. were promoters, & gave a verdict for pltf.:—Held: (1) there was ample evidence for the jury, & the judge was not bound to give them a definition of the term “promoter,” which had no very definite meaning, but involved the idea of exertion for the purpose of floating a co., & also the idea of some duty towards the co., imposed by or arising from the position which the so-called promoter assumed toward it; & defts. were in a fiduciary relation to the co., & therefore liable to refund the secret profits, even though the contract of sale was not rescinded; (2) the question of promotorship is one of fact, & not of law; (3) persons who get up & form a co. have duties towards it before it comes into existence; (4) there may be promoters of a co., even after it is registered & incorporated, other than its directors, so long as it is not in a position to perform the obligations imposed upon it by its creators.—EMMA SILVER MINING CO. v. G. & S. associated themselves together as promoters of a co. formed for the purchase of the works from G., & for the purposes of the negotiations for such purchase a contract, which the jury found to be a sham contract, was entered into between them for the pretended sale of the works by G. to S. for £20,000. The co. was ultimately formed, its directors being nominees of G. & S., & the works were conveyed by G. & S. to the co. for £20,000. It was agreed between G. & S. that G. should pay the sum of £3,000 out of the purchase-money to S., but this agreement was not communicated to the directors of the co. when the sale to the co. was effected:—Held: S., as a promoter of the co., was not entitled to secure any profit to himself out of the formation of the co. without the knowledge of the directors, & such being the case the co. were entitled to treat the agreement made between G. & S. as made by S. on their behalf, & to enforce it against G., & consequently they could recover from G. so much of the £3,000 which he had agreed to pay to S. as remained unpaid.

34. Particular cases—Solicitor profiting by formation of company.—T., a solr., acting for the promoters of an intended co., with an understanding that he should be its solr. when formed, entered into an arrangement with R., who had purchased property suitable for the co. as a speculation, that such purchase should be on their joint account, & that all negotiations relating to the property should be in the name of R. alone, & that the name of T. should not appear. The co., whilst T.'s interest in the property was concealed from them, & under the advice of the firm in which he was a partner, purchased from R. a portion of the property at a sum larger than the price paid by R. & T. for the whole, & the profit was divided between them. The co. afterwards discovered the circumstances under which the sale had been made to them:—Held: the co. were entitled as against T. to the benefit of his contract with R., so far as related to the premises sold to them; & T. was entitled to receive from the co. only the difference between the sum paid by him for his share of the property & the value of the portion of the property retained by him, & the surplus which had been paid by the co. to him must be repaid with interest at the rate of £5 per cent.

That T., & perhaps his partner, P., were original promoters of the bank appears from the minutes of the first meeting which is described as a meeting of the promoters of the scheme for establishing a new joint stock bank. At the meeting the only persons present were T., P. & S., & upon this occasion T. & his partner expressed their willingness to undertake the office of solrs. to the bank. From that time, therefore, T. stood in a relation to the present & future members of the co. which precluded him from deriving any private benefit to himself from any contracts or negotiations entered into by him on their behalf (LORD CHELMSFORD).—TYRRELL v. SUB-SECT. 2.—RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN PROMOTER AND COMPANY.

37. Nature—Neither agency nor trusteeship—Principles of agency & trusteeship apply.—(1) Although a promoter of a co. cannot be considered an agent or trustee for the co., the co. not being in existence at the time, yet the principles of the law of agency & trusteeship are applicable to his case, & he is accountable for all moneys obtained by him from the funds of the co. without the knowledge of the co.

(2) The fact that a promoter is acting as agent for the vendors in getting up a co. for the purchase of their property does not exonerate him from accounting to the co., when formed, for any secret profit made by him.

(3) In estimating the amount of the secret profit for which a promoter was accountable to the co. he was held entitled to be allowed the legitimate expenses incurred by him in forming & bringing out the co., such as the reports of surveyors, the charges of solrs. & brokers, & the cost of advertisements, but not a sum of money which he had expended in obtaining from another person a guarantee for the taking of shares.—LYDNEY & WIGPOOL IRON ORE CO. v. Syndicate for the purpose of purchasing part of the property of the syndicate, consisting of nitrate works. The directors of the syndicate prepared & signed the memorandum & arts. of assocn. of the co., the arts. nominating them as directors & stating specifically that they were also the directors of the syndicate. They also prepared the co.'s prospectus & purchase-contract, & affixed the seals of the syndicate & of the co. to the latter. The co.'s solrs. & secretary were also the same as those of the syndicate. Two years after the date of the contract & the completion of the purchase the shareholders of the co., believing that their property had been purchased at an over-value & that there had been misrepresentations in the contract & prospectus, appointed an independent board of directors who, after investigating the facts & with the sanction of a general meeting of the shareholders, brought an action against the syndicate & the directors for rescission of the contract & damages on the ground of misrepresentation, misfeasance, breach of trust, & concealment of material facts, but not alleging fraud. From the date of the contract & down to & also since the commencement of the action the co. had, first by its original directors & afterwards by its independent board, carried on business & worked the property the subject of the contract:—Held: the co. was not entitled to rescission or damages, for (1) at the date of the contract the co. had, by its memorandum & arts., notice that its directors were also the vendors or agents of the vendor syndicate, & the mere fact that its directors did not constitute an independent board was not a sufficient ground for setting aside the contract; (2) there had been no misrepresentation made to, or any material fact concealed from, any of the persons who were members of the co. at the date of the contract, those persons being the directors themselves; (3) although the contract & prospectus were, on the evidence, misleading in certain particulars which would have entitled the co. at the time to repudiate the contract, yet through the subsequent alteration of the property consequent on its being worked by the co., the position of the parties had been so changed that they could not be restored to their original position; (4) defts., the directors, had not been guilty of such negligence or breach of trust as to render them liable in damages in law for the loss occasioned to the co., or in equity to make good the loss.

(5) There is no duty imposed on the promoters of a co. to provide it with an independent board of directors, if the real truth is disclosed to those who are induced by the promoters to join the co.

(6) This appeal involves the proper application to a co. of a few well-settled principles of law. The first principle is that in equity the promoters of a co. stand in a fiduciary relation to it, & to those persons whom they induce to become shareholders in it, & cannot in equity bind the co. by any contract with themselves without fully & fairly disclosing to the co. all material facts which the co. ought to know. The second principle is that a co. when registered is a corpn. capable by its directors of binding itself by a contract with themselves as promoters if all material facts are disclosed. The third principle is that the directors of a co. acting within their powers, & with reasonable care, & honestly in the interest of the co., are not personally liable for losses which the co. may suffer by reason of their mistakes or errors in judgment. A fourth principle, not confined to cos., but extending to them, is that a contract can be set aside in equity on proof that one party induced the other to enter into it by misrepresentations of material facts, although such misrepresentations may not have been fraudulent. A fifth principle is that a voidable contract cannot be rescinded or set aside after the position of the parties has been changed, so that they cannot be restored to their former position. Fraud may exclude the application of this principle, but I know of no other exception (LINDLEY, M.R.).—LAGUNAS NITRATE CO. v. LAGUNAS SYNDICATE, [1899] 2 Ch. 392; 68 L. J. Ch. 699; 81 L. 41. ——— Distinguished from ordinary trusteeship.]—Whether promoters are acquiring any asset as trustees for a co. or intended co. is a question of fact. If the intention throughout is that they are to sell to the co., at a profit, the assets which they are acquiring, the natural inference is that they are not intending to be trustees for the co., but vendors only; & the fiduciary duties involved in that relationship are distinct from those of ordinary out-and-out trusteeship.

In Jan. 1912, defts. entered into negotiations for the acquisition of a lease of certain premises, with a view to selling them to a co. which they were promoting, & which was registered as a private co. in March, 1912. The arts. of assocn., which were prepared on the instructions of defts., provided that the co. should forthwith enter into the agreement for purchase; & this it did. The board of directors at the time was not an independent one, & defts. had not a legally binding agreement for the lease. The lease was, however, subsequently executed & assigned to the co. Outside cash shareholders were brought in, & ultimately an independent board was constituted.

the two-thirds of £1,100 as agreed. E. had not paid to C. his share of that sum. E. brought an action against the co., in which the co. by counter-claim sought to recover from E. certain moneys on the ground that E. as agent of the co. had received them as secret commission sales to the co. of mining leases, including the sale by B. of the lease in question, & alternatively, on the ground that E. as one of the promoters of the co. had received the moneys as secret profits on the sales by them to the co. of the leases. A decree was made, by consent, containing a declaration that E.

was a trustee for the co. of all money received from B. by way of commission or in respect of any profit received or made by E. on the sale by B. of the option or on the exercise of it:—Held: the declaration was limited to the claim against E. as agent of the company.—*ARDLETHAN OPTIONS, LTD. v. On Oct. 30, 1912, the co. commenced an action against defts. for a declaration that they were liable as promoters to make good to the co. such part of the purchase-money of the property as was attributable to the benefit of the lease agreed to be granted to them, with consequential relief:—Held: (1) the provisions of the arts. & the registration of the co. as a private co. did not protect defts. against claims by it; (2) the co. had suffered no loss; & while it might have been entitled to rescission of the whole contract the latter could not be apportioned so as to entitle it to a diminution of price without any counterbalancing equivalent; (3) defts. were not trustees for the co. of the lease or the prospect of obtaining it, & the action therefore failed.—*OMNIUM ELECTRIC PALACES, LTD. v. 44. — Purchase of property.]—In 1871 certain coal areas were purchased for £5,500 by six persons, of whom F. was one, & were vested in G. as a trustee for them without disclosing the trust. In 1873 a co. was formed for the purpose of purchasing these areas & other property. F. was one of the directors, & as such he concurred in effecting a purchase by the co. from G. for £12,000 cash, & £30,000 in fully paid-up shares, without disclosing the fact that F. was a part-owner. In 1875, the co. was ordered to be wound up. In 1878 a meeting of contributories was called, at which two rival schemes were brought forward, one for repudiating the purchase of the coal areas, the other for adopting the purchase & selling the property. The latter scheme was adopted, & was confirmed by the ct. The liquidator accordingly sold the property, but at a heavy loss. A contributory then took out a summons under 1862 Act, s. 165, to make F. liable for misfeasance as a director in allowing the co.'s seal to be affixed to the agreement for purchase by the co. The judge dismissed the summons, holding that though the co. would have been entitled to rescind the contract, yet as rescission had become impossible no relief could be given against F.; that as F. when he acquired his interest in the property was not a trustee for the co., he could not be treated as having purchased on behalf of the co. at the price he gave & therefore was not chargeable with the difference between the price at which he bought & the price paid by the co., & that he could not be charged with the difference between the price paid by the co. & the value of the property when the co. bought it, as this would be making a new contract between the parties:—Held: this decision was right.—Re CAPE BRETON Co. (1885), 29 Ch. The trustees bought up some of the charges upon the property for sums below the amount which the charges afterwards realised & thereby made a profit for the syndicate of £20,000. They bought the property for £140,000, formed a limited co. & resold the property for £180,000 to the co., of which they were the first & at that time the only directors. They issued a prospectus inviting applications for shares & disclosing the two prices of £140,000 & £180,000 but not the profit of £20,000. That some profit had been made by buying up the charges might have been discovered by a close examination of a contract which was referred to in the co.'s memorandum & arts. of assocn. & in the prospectus. Shares were issued & the co. afterwards went into liquidation:—Held: the trustees ought to have disclosed to the co. the profit of £20,000; they had not disclosed it; the fact that the co. could not now rescind was no bar to relief; & applt. as one of the trustees was bound to replace that portion of the

A provisional committee was afterwards formed, at a meeting of which A. was appointed secretary, & B. solicitor, to the co., & other persons a managing committee:—Held: A. could not merely upon these facts, recover against an acting member of the managing committee for services afterwards performed by him as secretary.—WILSON v. CURZON (VISCOUNT) (1847), 15 M. & W. 532; 5 Ry. & Can. Cas. 24; 16 L. J. Ex. 122; 8 L. T. O. S. 344; 11 Jur. 47; 11 J. P. Jo. 70; 153 E. R. 960.

60. — — — — — Recovery of money spent.]—The promoters of a co. are liable for the preliminary expenses, & any person who has acted as promoter cannot recover from other promoters or directors money which he has expended on the part of the co.—CAMPBELL v. PEPPER (1849), 13 L. T. O. S. 120.

61. — — — — — Provisional committee-men — Right to bind remaining members.]—The provisional committee of a projected railway are not partners. Therefore, each member of it can only be liable upon some personal contract with pltf., express or implied, or by some contract entered into by some other person on his behalf & by him duly authorised to act as his agent, or by some person assuming to be his agent, & whose acts are afterwards ratified by such member.—NEVINS v. HENDERSON (1848), 5 Ry. & Can. Cas. 684; 12 J. P. Jo. 802; sub nom. NEWINS v. HENDERSON, 12 L. T. O. S. 354, Ex. Ch.

62. — — — — —.]—In determining that the name of a party is to be placed on the list of contributories of a projected co., it must be shown either that he is liable to the creditors of the co. by having personally contracted with them or given his authority to those who contracted with them, or that he is bound to indemnify persons liable to creditors, this obligation resulting either from an express contract or from a contract implied from his conduct. The mere fact of a party having consented to his name being added to the provisional committee of a projected co. does not confer an authority on the committee to contract on his credit, & therefore gives rise to no liability to creditors or to indemnify the committee.

B. consented to become one of the provisional committee of a projected co. & was nominated as such accordingly. He shortly afterwards, however, desired his name to be withdrawn from the committee & declined to take any shares in the co. This request was acceded to, but through the neglect of the secretary no communication was made to B. on the subject, & his name in fact continued on the list of the provisional committee. It being found impracticable to establish the proposed co., the project was ultimately abandoned. Up to this time B. had not attended any meetings or done any other act than above mentioned; subsequently, however, he attended meetings of the committee & paid certain sums in order to free himself from liability:—Held: the acts done by B. previously to the abandonment of the scheme neither rendered him personally liable to the creditors of the co., nor liable to indemnify the other members of the committee, & no liability arose in either of these respects in consequence of the acts done subsequently inasmuch as they appeared to be done in ignorance of the fact that his application to have his name withdrawn from the provisional committee had been acceded to.—*Re DIRECT EXETER, PLYMOUTH & DEVONPORT RY. r. Right to contribution — Provisional directors—Debt recovered from one—Ascertainment of contribution.]—One of the provisional directors of a projected railway company, which was not carried into execution, was sued for services performed in surveying the line of the proposed railway; & judgment was recovered against him in that action. Upon a bill filed by him against his co-directors for contribution:—Held: (1) that the suit was properly framed; (2) the amount of the contribution of each director is to be ascertained by dividing the total loss by the number of directors who consented to act; & not by dividing it by the number of those who were named as directors in the prospectus, nor by reference to the number of shares subscribed for by each director.—*LEFROY v. PART III.—COMPANIES UNDER COMPANIES (CONSOLIDATION) ACT, 1908, ETC. 45

B. & C. suffered judgment by default, & D. recovered the amount of rent & costs against A. :—Held: A. was entitled to sue B. & C. for contribution; & that his remedy against B. was not affected by the circumstance of B.'s having ceased to be a member of the committee before the accruing of the rent in respect of which the action was brought.—*BOULTER v. 65. — Work ordered by committee—Bill paid by one.—Pltf., being a provisional committeeman, became with eleven others, including deft., liable for a debt contracted in respect of the scheme. The creditor sued pltf., who ultimately paid the whole debt. Two of the original co-contractors died before the payment. Pltf. sued deft. for contribution:—Held: (1) though there might be many cross liabilities amongst the provisional committeemen, in respect of the scheme, an action lay, at law, for contribution against such of them as were liable to pay this debt, provisional committeemen not being partners; (2) pltf. was entitled to recover only one-twelfth of the debt; the liability of a co-contractor to one who has paid the entire debt being, at law, to contribute an aliquot part according to the number of persons originally liable, without reference to the number liable at law at the time of payment.

Semble: an action would have lain at law, for contribution, against the representatives of deceased co-contractors.—BATARD v. HAWES, BATARD v. DOUGLAS (1853), 2 E. & B. 287; 22 L. J. Q. B. 443; 17 Jur. 1154; 1 W. R. 287, 387; 1 C. L. R. 812, 818; 118 E. R. 775.

66. — Conditions precedent.—A contract to take shares in a co. cannot be set aside because it was founded on a prospectus which contains exaggerated views of the advantages of the co., but does not contain any material misstatement of fact. Where, therefore, a prospectus stated that a certain invention which it was the object of the co. to work had been tested, & that according to the experiments the material could be produced at a specified cost, but that it was intended to test the invention further, & the invention turned out worthless, & it appearing that there had been some testing:—Held: (1) this was not such a misrepresentation as would enable a purchaser of shares to set aside the contract; (2) the shareholder having had the means of ascertaining the full truth of the matter, & having delayed for upwards of five years before he complained of the misstatement, he was debarred by laches from obtaining relief.

(3) A person who has taken shares in a co. which was provisionally registered under 1844 Act, & paid deposits thereon, cannot recover the deposit by a suit in equity, but must bring an action at law. (4) One of the promoters of a co. cannot maintain a suit against his fellow-promoters for contribution towards expenses incurred by him in promoting the co., unless he is willing that an account should be taken of the expenses incurred by all the promoters.—*DENTON v. B. accordingly, assuming the character of owner, gave to C. a conditional promise to sell all the land to him for $13,750, provided the offer was accepted within a certain time. A. wrote a letter, meant to be shown to, & which was shown to, persons intending to become members of the new co., & was proved to have influenced them, in which letter he recommended the purchase, not disclosing that he had any interest therein. A. & B. actively co-operated with C. throughout the whole transaction. 68. — Flaw in title.—Certain persons, who were owners of a concession from a foreign govt., combined together to form a co. to purchase the concession, knowing at the time that through their default it was voidable & liable to forfeiture. The owners & others who were promoters of the co. fraudulently sold the concession, being aware of the infirmity of the title, to trustees for the intended co., & it was transferred to the co. by the trustees, who were to be paid a portion of the purchase-money for their share in the transaction. The solrs. for the vendors, who were also solrs. for the co., concealed the invalidity of the title, & the trustees neglected to require evidence to establish the title. Upon a bill filed by the co. against the owners of the concession, the promoters, the trustees, the directors & the solrs.:—Held: the owners & promoters must repay the whole purchase-money; the trustees who received money in the nature of a bribe for neglecting their duty must repay what they had so received; & all the defts., including the solrs., must pay the costs of the suit.—*PHOSPHATE SEWAGE Co. v. The corp'n. then contracted to buy a licence to work a quarry for a small sum & promoted a co. to acquire the licence, & the usual contracts were entered into by means of a trustee for the co., whereby the corp'n. as vendors agreed to sell the licence to the co. for £10,500 in cash, £2,000 in debentures, & £5,500 in fully-paid shares of £1 each of the co. D. & G. then caused the co. to be registered & found the seven signatories to its memorandum of assocn. & its directors, all of whom were their creatures. The co. duly adopted the contract of sale & issued to the corp'n. 5,500 fully-paid shares & £2,000 in debentures. D. & G. then prepared prospectuses which were issued by the co. to the public inviting subscriptions to an issue of 2,000 debentures of £10 each, & as subscriptions came in the co. paid the corp'n. some £9,000 cash on account of the £10,500, which D. & G. then divided between themselves. The only shareholders of the co. were the seven signatories to its memorandum & the corp'n. as holders of the 5,500 shares. The contracts & prospectuses disclosed that the corp'n. was promoter & vendor to the co. & was making the profit, but did not disclose the fact that D. & G. were the real promoters & vendors & were receiving the profit through the corp'n. The co. went into liquidation, & subsequently D. & G. became bkpt. D. had assets; G. had none. PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 5.—A. (a) i.

a. Promoter acting as agent for vendors—Sale at fictitious prices.]—

the allotment of fully paid shares for £150,000: L. was to provide £30,000 in two instalments of £15,000, as security for which he was to receive the debentures for £30,000; he was also to receive 95,000 fully paid shares of £1 each, of which 20,000 were to go to D., who was to carry out the details of the promotion & formation of the co., acting therein as the agent of L., leaving 75,000 at L.'s disposal. The remaining 55,000 shares were to go to the owner of the property acquired. The co. was incorporated in 1920. The memorandum & arts. of assocn. of the co. were accepted & retained by the registrar on Jan. 6, 1920, but the certificate, though purporting to be dated on that day, was not in fact signed by the registrar until Jan. 8, 1920. On Jan. 6, 1920, the co., before filing any statement in lieu of prospectus as required by 1908 Act, s. 82, proceeded to allot fully-paid shares & debentures to the vendor, & their shares & debentures were transferred to L. & D. The debentures were worth about 90 per cent. of their face value. The shares were absolutely worthless. L. however not only realised the debentures at their proper market value, but sold his shares, partly for cash, partly for shares in other cos.

The co. was subsequently ordered to be wound up compulsorily & on a misfeasance summons taken out by the official receiver as liquidator, against L. & D. the alleged promoters:—Held: (1) L. was a promoter & as such stood in a fiduciary position towards the co. & was liable to account to it for any secret profit made by him in the purchase; (2) he was not exonerated from his liability by the fact that the co. as ultimately formed was of a different type from the co. he intended to promote, as by staying on as promoter he must be held to have acquiesced; (3) the profit made was secret & was therefore the property of the co.; (4) assuming that the allotment of shares & debentures on Jan. 6, 1920, was void by reason of their having been allotted before a statement in lieu of prospectus had been filed as required by 1908 Act, s. 82, L. was put by the co. in control of something out of which he made a profit, & that whatever it was, valid or invalid, he held it from his position of promoter on behalf of the co., & could not, when called upon to account for the profit, justify himself in keeping that profit by saying that the co. had no legal justification for bringing something into existence & entrusting it to him; (5) assuming that it could be shown that the allotment took place before the registration & incorporation of the co. (where, as in this case, the allotment & registration take place on the same day), L.'s liability as promoter for the secret profit was not affected; (6) Qu.: whether, in view of 1908 Act, s. 17, evidence is receivable in such circumstances (see (5), supra) to show that the allotment did in fact take place before registration; (7) L. having sold the shares as being validly issued by the co. could not disclaim liability for the profits made by such sale; (8) for the purpose of ascertaining L.'s liability the portion of the consideration for the sale of his shares represented by shares in other cos. must be taken not at their nominal value but at their real value.

(9) (WARRINGTON, L.J., agreeing with YOUNGER, L.J.) the allotment of the shares & debentures was illegal & void on the ground that it took place before the co. had filed a statement in lieu of prospectus as required by 1908 Act, s. 82.

(10) (LORD STERNDAL, M.R. & WARRINGTON, L.J., YOUNGER, L.J. expressing no concluded opinion on the point) the effect of 1908 Act, ss. 15, 16, 17, taken together was that the registration of the co. took place when the arts. of assocn. were accepted & retained by the registrar, & the certificate correctly stated the date, but even if that were not so, then under 1908 Act, s. 17, the certificate was conclusive evidence, amongst other things, that the registration & incorporation of the co. were duly effected on the day mentioned in the certificate & must have effect accordingly. The material date was that mentioned in the certificate, & not that on which the signature thereto was written.—JUBILEE COTTON MILLS, LTD. (OFFICIAL RECEIVER & LIQUIDATOR) v. LEWIS (1924), 40 T. L. 80. Bonus payable to one of five vendors—To effect sale—Unknown to remainder.]—Four out of five persons, who entered into a provisional contract to purchase a mine, which they agreed to sell for their joint benefit to a co., were deceived by the fifth who, assuring them that the vendors would not take less than £85,714, obtained secretly from the latter an agreement that, if the contract were perfected, & money paid, he should receive thereout a bonus of £20,000 for his pains in effecting the sale.

Two of the four, having absolute powers from the rest to sell to the intended co., then formed

A person agreed with the owners of oil lands to buy lots at stipulated prices. The purpose was to form a co. to buy at an advance. To facilitate this the real prices were to be concealed; one of the vendors was to write a letter purporting to offer the whole at an advanced price which he named; the interest of the other, whose judgment in such matters purchasers would be likely to rely on, was not to appear, & he was to write a letter recommending the transaction. The project was successful; the property was bought, & paid for. The shareholders before completing the transaction had notice that something was wrong, but they carried out the purchase, & did not object to the transaction until after oil lands had greatly fallen in the market:—Held: the co. was entitled to a decree for payment of the agent's profit, first against the agent himself, & in default of his paying, then against the other parties.—LINDSAY PETROLEUM OIL CO., v. themselves with others into a committee of management, & still ignorant of the surreptitious agreement, issued a prospectus stating that a contract had been entered into for the purchase by the co. of the entire property for £125,000 "including all preliminary expenses, & a premium to the parties who incurred the risk & responsibility of the original purchase." The co. having been established, the requisite capital paid up, & the provisional contract perfected:—Held: the £20,000 transaction was fraudulent & void, not only as against the four original purchasers, but also as against the co., notwithstanding the mine proved cheap at the price—£125,000—at which they became shareholders. It was not enough that the co. got the whole of their bargain. They had a right to the best bargain, which the two members of the committee of management, had they known the facts, would have been in a position, acting fairly & rightly, to give them.—*BECK v. 81. Agent acting on behalf of company—Afterwards becoming secretary—Commissions received while secretary—Liable under 1908 Act, s. 215.]—The owner of a mine, by an agreement adopted by a co., agreed with M., acting on behalf of the co., to sell the mine to the co. for a price partly in cash & partly in paid-up shares. By another agreement not known to the co., the vendor was to give to M. for his trouble 600 of the paid-up shares. The co. was formed, & whilst M. was secretary to the co. the shares were allotted to the vendor, & transfers of 600 of them by the vendor to M. were prepared. The 600 shares were afterwards transferred to M., & 500 of them remained in his name when the co. was ordered to be wound up:—Held: (1) M. had been guilty of misfeasance in relation to the co., & could under 1862 Act, s. 165, be made to contribute in respect of such misfeasance; (2) the measure of the damages to be contributed by M. was the highest value of the shares transferred to him, & as some of the shares had been allotted to solvent shareholders, the value must be taken to be the amount unpaid on the shares.

82. Promoter acting as agent for another—Sharing remuneration.]—Pltfs. were a joint-stock co., which was formed for the purpose of purchasing & working a colliery & ironworks formerly the property of B., deceased. Before the co. was formed B.'s trustees entered into negotiations with R., a financial agent, to get up a co. for the purchase of the property for about £300,000. R.

applied to C. & C. made an arrangement with G. upon the term stated below. Two contemporaneous agreements were signed, by one of which the trustees agreed to sell the property to a trustee for the co. for £300,000; & by the other, which was called in the pleadings the secret agreement, the trustees agreed with C. that he should bring out the co. or forfeit £20,000; & that they should pay £85,000 for commission & risk. On the same day C. agreed with G. that G. should take the whole risk of bringing out the co., & should receive £60,000 & C. £25,000 of this bonus. D. & Co., the vendors' solrs., were to receive £1,500 from the tenant for life of the property if the purchase was completed. The co. was established, the first directors being found by R.; D. & Co. became the solrs. of the new co. The prospectus & arts. referred to the agreement for the purchase of the property, but made no mention of the agreement between the vendors & C., or of any of the arrangements relating to it. The purchase-money was paid to the vendors, who paid out of it £85,000 to C., of which he gave £60,000 to G. & £10,000 to R. The directors were not informed by D. & Co., or any other person, of the agreement between the vendors & C.; but some time afterwards they discovered it, & thereupon called a general meeting of the co. to consider the subject. The result was that a bill was filed by the co. against the vendors & against R., C., G., & D. & Co., praying that the purchase might be rescinded, or that defts. might be held liable to repay all the profits which they had made by the transaction; pltfs. offering to allow expenses properly incurred & a fair commission. Before the cause came to a hearing, pltfs. compromised the suit with the vendors, receiving from them £31,000 as the price of not insisting on the purchase being rescinded:—Held: (1) the suppression in the prospectus of the agreement between the vendors & C. was unjustifiable; & defts., R., C., & G., were in a fiduciary relation to the intended co., & therefore could not be allowed to retain any profit which they had made without disclosing it to the co.; (2) the compromise with the vendors did not affect the claim of pltfs. against defts. R., C., & G., & the last-named defts. had no claim to any allowance in respect of the £31,000 paid by the vendors on such compromise; (3) defts., R., C., & G., were entitled to be allowed their expenses properly incurred in bringing out the co., & although they would not have been entitled to any commission unless pltfs. had offered to allow it in their bill, pltfs. could not retract their offer, & a fair commission must be allowed; (4) also, although D. & Co. had acted improperly in concealing from the co. the agreement between the vendors & C., they ought to have been dismissed from the suit when pltfs. elected not to rescind the purchase, & inasmuch as D. & Co. had acted in the matter with no fraudulent intent, the ct. dismissed the suit against them without costs up to the time of the compromise, & with costs as to all subsequent proceedings.—*BAGNALL v. 83. Promoter nominating agent for company.]—By an agreement between the vendors of a mine & G. a financial agent, the vendors agreed to sell the mine to a co. to be formed by G. for its purchase at the price named, & that G. should receive 20 per cent. of the amount of the allotted capital of the co. By a second agreement between P., the agent of the vendors, & D., a nominee of G., described as agent of the intended co., P. agreed to sell the mine to the co. for the price mentioned in the former agreement, but no reference was made to the percentage which G. was to receive. Shortly afterwards the co. was formed; the memorandum of assocn. & prospectus, which were settled by G., stated that its object was to carry out the second agreement & for the purchase & working of the mine, but they contained no reference to the first agreement, under which G. received the amount therein agreed upon. G. secured the services of the first directors, provided their qualifications, & launched the co. In an action by the co. to make him liable for what he had received without the knowledge of the co.:—Held: G. was liable for the amount of the secret profit which he had made; also, in estimating the amount of such profit he was entitled to be allowed all sums bonâ fide expended in securing the services of the directors & providing their qualification, & in payments to the brokers & officers of the co. & to the public press in relation to the co.—*EMMA SILVER MINING Co. v. 85. Fictitious lease from true vendor — One lessee becoming director—Liable in respect of fictitious interests created.]—P. & Q. were working a quarry in partnership. P. also owned an adjoining quarry, & had the option of taking a lease of S. Quarry. Wishing to form a co. for working the quarries they called in A. & B. to assist them. A lease of the S. Quarry was granted to P., Q., A., & B., & on the same day the four entered into an agreement with a trustee for the intended co. to sell to the co. the three quarries for a sum to be paid partly in cash & partly in paid-up shares, A. & B. to receive 120 shares each. The co. was formed. B. was one of the first directors; the agreement was confirmed, & A. & B. received their shares. The co. was ordered to be wound up, & it turned out that A. & B. had no interest in the property sold to the co. except their interest as lessees of S. Quarry under the lease of even date with the agreement, & B. admitted that he had no interest in the S. Quarry till that day, & had nothing to do with fixing the price. The arts. provided that the agreement for sale should not be impeached on the ground of the directors, or any of them, being vendors or being promoters of the co., nor should they be accountable for benefits secured to them. The judge held that B. was liable to contribute to the assets of the co. a sum equal to the nominal amount of the shares issued to him & to A. on the ground of his misfeasance as director in accepting the shares allotted to himself & in allowing A.'s shares to be issued to him:—Held: although if A. & B. had been bonâ fide owners of shares in the S. Quarry & had agreed to sell their interests for shares in the co. the transaction could not have been impeached, the insertion of their names as vendors when they had no real interest in the property sold was a device for enabling them to get fully paid-up shares for their services in the promotion of the co., & the issuing them was a misfeasance on the part of the directors, & as it was not known to the co. that A. & B. were not really vendors, the clause in the arts. did not protect B.—Re WESTMORELAND GREEN & BLUE SLATE Co., BLAND'S CASE, [1893] 2 Ch. 612; 62 L. 92. Abandonment must be proved.]—A railway co. was provisionally registered, & a prospectus was issued, which stated the proposed capital to be £2,000,000, in 80,000 shares of £25 each. Pltf. applied to the provisional committee for seventy shares, in a letter whereby she undertook to accept the same or any less number that they might allot to her, to pay the deposit of £2 12s. 6d. per share thereupon, & to sign the parliamentary contract & subscribers' agreement when required. To this letter she received an answer, signed by the secretary, stating that the committee of management had allotted to her thirty shares, & requesting her to pay the deposit of £2 12s. 6d. per share, amounting to £78 15s., into one of certain banks on or before a day mentioned. Pltf. accordingly paid into one of those banks, in due time, the deposit of £78 15s., & received the bankers' receipt for the same. She afterwards presented the receipt to the co., & made several fruitless applns. to the committee for scrip, & at length was informed that the directors had come to the resolution not to issue any scrip, & that the greater part of the deposits had been expended, & the balance would be rateably divided.

In an action by pltf. to recover back, from a member of the managing committee, the sum of £78 15s. so paid by her as deposits on the shares allotted to her:—Held: (1) there was sufficient evidence of the final abandonment of the project; (2) on its abandonment, under the circumstances above stated, pltf. was entitled to recover back, as money had & received to her use, the whole sum so paid by her.—*WALSTAB v. 95. — — — Subscribers' deed signed by allottee—Proof of fraud.]—The promoters of a projected railway co., in June, 1845, issued a prospectus stating the capital to consist of £3,000,000 in 120,000 shares of £25 each, & stating amongst other things, that appln. would be made for a bill to incorporate the co. early in the next session; & that, in case Parliament should not sanction the undertaking, the money deposited, deducting the necessary expenses attending the projection, would be returned to the shareholders. On Sept. 25, pltf. made appln. to the provisional committee of management for sixty shares, by a letter in the form prescribed in the prospectus, undertaking to accept the same, or such less number as they might appropriate to him, subject to the regulations of the co., to sign the necessary legal documents, & to pay, when required, the deposit thereon of £1 7s. 6d. per share. The committee by a letter dated Oct. 11, but not sent until some days after, informed pltf. that they had

92 i. On abandonment of project—Abandonment must be proved—Proof of receipt of money.]—To sustain an action for money had & received, against a person named as a director of a projected company, by a proposed subscriber, for his deposit, two things must be shown: first, that the money so paid came to the deft.'s hands or power, for the purpose of being applied to the objects of the projected co., & secondly, that the project failed by reason of no company, or no company conformable to the prospectus having been formed.—HAYES v. STIRLING (1863), 14 L. C. L. R. 277; 15 Ir. Jur. 308.—IR.

b. — — — Subscriptions paid into bank—Whether recoverable from bank.]—Where the object for which a co. had been started had failed, & no allotment of shares had been made:—Held: money paid into the bank in the usual way by a subscriber on application for shares was part of the co.'s assets, & could not be recovered in an action against the bank.—LYNCH v. PRO-

allotted him sixty shares, upon condition that the deposit of £1 7s. 6d. per share thereon was paid on or before the 18th, in default of which the allotment would be forfeited, & the shares disposed of to other appcts. This letter was headed "Not transferable," & as well as the letter of appln., described the concern as one having the amount of capital & the number of shares mentioned in the prospectus. On Oct. 17, the committee published an advertisement in The Times, stating that "they had completed the allotment of shares." There was evidence for the jury that pltf. saw this notice; & he paid his deposit on Oct. 22. On Nov. 4, pltf. signed the subscribers' agreement & the parliamentary contract, by which the committee were empowered, amongst other things, to apply the money received for deposits, in liquidation of the preliminary expenses of the undertaking. A meeting of the shareholders was held on Dec. 15, at which pltf. for the first time learned, that, although applns. had been made before Oct. 17, sufficient to absorb the whole 120,000 shares, 58,000 only had been allotted; & that, in consequence of the plans & sections not being duly deposited to comply with the standing orders, & the want of necessary funds, the committee were not in a condition to go to Parliament. At this meeting, resolutions were proposed expressive of confidence in the committee, & of a desire to proceed. Pltf. moved an amendment that, as 58,000 shares only had been allotted, the deposits already received should be returned to the parties who had paid them. The chairman declined to put the amendment; & the original resolutions were carried by a large majority. On Dec. 31, the committee came to the conclusion that to proceed with the undertaking would be impracticable, & on Jan. 6, pltf. brought an action for money had & received against deft., a member of the committee of management, to recover back his deposit.

At the trial, the judge told the jury that pltf. was entitled to a verdict, if deft. knowingly made a false representation which was a material inducement to pltf. to pay his money, & if pltf. executed the deed under the same belief that induced him to pay the deposit. The jury having found for pltf.:—Held: the direction was right, & the judge was not bound to tell the jury whether or not the letters of appln. & allotment constituted a valid & binding contract; the letter of allotment not being an unconditional acceptance of the offer made by the letter of appln., the two did not constitute a contract under which pltf. could have been compelled to pay the deposit; pltf. had not, by attending the meeting of Dec. 15, precluded his right to rescind the contract on the ground of fraud.—*WONTNER v. A., alone of defts., was a trustee:—Held: the action could not be maintained. Semle: to support such an action it is not necessary to show that pltf. was induced to pay his deposit by a fraudulent misrepresentation; it is sufficient that such a misrepresentation was made before pltf. paid the money.—WATSON v.

102. As member of provisional committee—General rule.]—I never could understand why it was considered a pure question of law, why provisional committeemen & allottees of shares, persons who stood in both capacities, were on that account to be liable as contributories. The law does not know what is the meaning of provisional committeemen. Yet they have been talked of in our cts., their liabilities have been considered & dealt with & their powers made the subject of discussion, & their liabilities treated of as aiming from their powers, as if they were as well known to the law as tenants for life or tenants in tail. I consider this is a matter of contract. A person to take shares & held said debts answerable for pltf.'s loss, & said debts ordered to pay pltf. amount paid by him for shares with interest less value of shares & directed inquiry.—DAVOREN v. WOOTTON, [1900] 1 L. R. 273.—IR.

PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 5.—B. (a).

102 i. As member of provisional committee—General rule.]—The mere fact that persons agree to become provisional directors of a co. does not render them liable for goods supplied on the order of the attorney or secretary of the co., & they are not necessarily rendered liable by allowing their names to appear as provisional directors on the prospectus. Whether they are liable depends on the terms of the prospectus. If it merely states that they are provisional directors they will not be liable. If it represents that the attorney or secretary is not merely to act as such when the co. is formed, can become liable as a contributory in respect of the contract he has entered into, not in respect of assuming a particular character. The question of contract will depend upon the facts of the case, not merely on the party being a provisional committeeman; & then the only question of law will be whether there is evidence to submit to the jury whether a contract has been proved (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—BRIGHT v. At a subsequent meeting of the provisional committee, at which T. attended, the committee of management reported that they had incurred such debts; & that, according to an opinion taken, all the members of the provisional committee were liable for the debts so incurred; when resolutions were passed adopting the report, & arranging, by a rateable contribution, for payment of the debts. T. was, at such meetings, appointed a member of a finance committee to arrange for the payment of the debts of the co., & was active in such committee, & he contributed several sums towards liquidating the debts. The Master, in winding up the affairs of the co. under the Winding-up Acts, placed T.'s name on the list of contributories:—Held: (1) T. was not a contributory; (2) the committee of management was a body of persons acting for themselves independently, & not as agents for, or on behalf of the provisional committee; & the committee of management was the committee of the intended co., & not of the provisional committee.—Re DIRECT EXETER, PLYMOUTH & DEVONPORT RY. 116. Allowing name to appear as provisional committeeman—Whether credit pledged—Question for jury.]—Deft. applied to become a member of the provisional committee, & also of the acting committee, of a certain railway. His request was complied with as to the former, but not as to the latter. A prospectus was issued with deft.'s name as one of the provisional committee, & deft. heard it read at a meeting at which he was present, & made no objection:—Held: it was a case for the jury.

The question would be, had deft., by agency or by his own act, given an authority to the co. to hold him out in their prospectus to the world as a person liable for the expenses of this undertaking. Pltf. had a right to see who was on the provisional committee, & if the jury should think that deft.'s name appearing on the list with his consent was enough to sustain this action, it would prove an awful lesson to all those who had entered into this sort of speculation, & authorised the use of their names as provisional committeemen (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—ALLEY v. GAIN (1846), 8 L. T. O. S. 216, N. P.

117. — — — — — What jury may consider.]—In an action against a member of the committee of a projected railway co. for work & labour, goods supplied, & money paid, the jury are to consider whether deft., by taking upon him the character of a committeeman, & afterwards acting in the affairs of the co., has authorised the co.'s solr. or secretary, or any member of the committee, to hold him out to the world as personally responsible for the reasonable & necessary expenses incurred in forming such a co., & on its behalf; & then, whether the credit was given on the faith of his being so personally responsible.

A committeeman by merely allowing his name to bond of a joint stock co. registered under Companies Acts has a good title to sue an action of damages against the promoter of the co., or the ground that by false & fraudulent representations of the promoter he had been induced to advance money to the co.—DUNNETT v. MITCHELL (1885), 12 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 400.—SCOT.

Sect. 1.—Promotion and flotation: Sub-sect. 5, B.
(b) i., ii. &

appear in that character in the ordinary form of prospectus issued by railway cos. incurs no liability to a tradesman who supplies goods to the co.; but the consent of a person to his name so appearing may be a fact of importance on a question of such liability, as showing that he took an interest in the proposed concern, whether merely as a patron & well wisher, or as co-operating in the measures preparatory to its formation. It becomes, therefore, material to know what the committee was doing when he joined it, & whether he knew what it was doing, & concurred therein. If advertising, printing & stationery are necessary to the working of the committee, & no fund has been raised to pay for such necessities, the tradesman may justly suppose that all who act on the committee have authorised him to supply them on their credit, although the individual committeeman has not specifically given such authority, & though the tradesman may know nothing more of the committeemen than that they are probably men of character & substance. The absence of the committeeman's intention to pledge his credit is immaterial, if he have given the authority beforehand.

If, however, the tradesman looked solely to the deposits on shares as the fund from which payment was to be made to him, he has no cause of action against the committeeman.

As the liability of the committeeman arises, not from his filling that character, but from his authorising the orders for goods or services, his admission of general liability may be evidence of his having authorised such orders before his name appeared on the committee.

The jury are to consider whether such an admission was made because the actual liability in law was questionable, & for the purpose of preventing litigation, or whether the admission is referable to his conscientious conviction that his acts have made him personally liable. In the latter case they may infer his general liability.—BAILEY v. MACAULAY (1849), 13 Q. B. 815; 19 L. J. Q. B. 73; 14 L. T. O. S. 104; 14 Jur. 80; 116 E. R. 1475.

118. — Insufficient without further evidence.]
 —A. sued C. & others being part of the provisional committee of an abortive railway scheme for his expenses, incurred on behalf of the committee. The evidence showed merely that debts. had allowed their names to be published as committeemen without objecting; but there was no proof of actual employment or of adoption by debts. of the contract:—Held: debts. were not liable.

121. — Under mistake—Question for jury.]—In an action against a provisional committeeman of a railway co., for work, etc., it appeared that deft. had authorised the pledging of his credit for a portion of the work, but not for the residue, & had subsequently admitted his liability for the whole. The judge directed the jury to consider the circumstances under which the admission was made, & the mistaken view under which deft. might at that time have acted in respect of the supposed liability of all members of provisional committees:—Held: the direction was right.—NEWTON v. BELCHER (1848), 12 Q. B. 921; 6 Ry. & Can. Cas. 38; 18 L. J. Q. B. 53; 12 L. T. O. S. 213; 13 Jur. 253; 116 E. R. 1115.

iii. By Attendance at Meetings.

125. Meetings preliminary to formation of committee—Evidence of liability for necessary expenses.]—Where persons meet together for the purpose of forming an assocn. for a purpose of public utility, & hold meetings preliminary to its formation, the attendance of any one of such persons at such meetings is some evidence to go to a jury to fix him with the liability for expenses necessarily incurred.—LAKE v. ARGYLL (DUKE) (1844), 6 Q. B. 477; 14 L. J. Q. B. 73; 4 L. T. O. S. 171; 9 Jur. 295; 115 E. R. 178.

126. Meeting when liability incurred.]—The managing committee of a railway co. resolved "that the solrs. should take the necessary steps for advertising the co., & preparing & circulating the prospectuses." A witness stated that "advertising the co." meant advertising the prospectus of the co.:—Held: the resolution authorised the insertion of the prospectus in the newspapers as an advertisement & the advertising agent was entitled to recover his charge for these advertisements from a member of the committee who was present when the resolution was passed.—BARKER v. COLLINS (1849), 13 L. T. O. S. 90.

Pltf. sent his bill of costs to the manager of the co., & on being refused payment, sued the debts.:—Held: all the promoters who were present at the meeting at which pltf. was retained were personally bound by their resolution.—DE LISSA v. ASHER (1875), 14 N. S. W. S. C. R. 173.—AUS.

127. — Subsequent modification at meeting from which absent.]—A. was, in his absence, chosen by the provisional committee of a provisionally registered railway to be one of the managing committee, to whom, by resolutions of the provisional committee then passed, power was given to allot shares & to apply the funds of the co. in payment of expenses. The scheme having proved abortive, the allottees recovered their deposits in actions against A. & other persons who had been appointed to be members of the managing committee. The members of the managing committee thereupon appointed a sub-committee, of which A. was one, to take measures to protect the members of the committee. A. was a constant attendant at the meetings of the sub-committee, & took an active share in providing for some of the demands on the committee of management & resisting others:—Held: he thereby sanctioned & adopted the former proceedings of the managing committee, in which he had not taken part, & was liable to contribute in respect of them.

B., who was appointed & acted as a member of the managing committee of a provisionally registered railway co., with power to contract with engineers for the requisite surveys, etc., was one of the members liable in respect of an order given to the engineers, who afterwards being unable to complete the contract by the required time, offered to forego it, & to substitute a contract for a part of the line only, on the terms that the completion of the latter within the time should not be required. At a meeting, at which B. was not present, the majority of the managing committee present resolved to accede to the proposal. B. at a subsequent meeting opposed the confirmation of the resolution. Afterwards he concurred in resolutions for providing means of satisfying the engineer's demand among others:—Held: the substituted contract was only a modification of the contract, in respect of which B. was liable, & under the circumstances B. was liable to contribute to the payment of the engineers' demand.—Re DIRECT BIRMINGHAM, OXFORD, READING & BRIGHTON RY. CO., SPOTTISWOODE'S CASE, AMSINCK'S CASE (1855), 6 De G. M. & G. 345; 3 Eq. Rep. 681; 25 L. T. O. S. 136; 43 E. R. 1267.

128. Meetings subsequent to meeting when liability incurred—Active part taken.]—Deft.'s name was placed upon a committee on Oct. 15. On Nov. 20 he signed a consent to act as director. On Jan. 22 a meeting was held, at which deft. was not present, but he afterwards called at the co.'s offices, & said he was ready to render any assistance in his power towards the settlement. On Feb. 12 he attended a meeting, & moved a resolution. He further interested himself in the matter, & asked for accounts, which he saw at a subsequent meeting on Mar. 5, & among them was that of pltf.

Upon these facts the liability of deft. was established.—NEWTON v. STEWART (1846), 8 L. T. O. S. 256.

129. — Proceedings at previous meeting confirmed.]—A member of the committee of management of an abortive railway co. attended many of the meetings, but he did not attend the only meeting at which the only unsatisfied debt of the co., being a debt to its engineer, was contracted; he, however, attended a subsequent meeting, at which the report of the engineer was received & adopted:—Held: prima facie, the claim of the engineer was a liability of the co. within the meaning of Winding-up Acts, 1848 & 1849; & that, although the member was not directly liable to the engineer, he was liable to the persons liable to the engineer to contribute rateably with them; & the members' name was retained on the list of contributories.—*Re MIDLAND UNION, BURTON-UPON-TRENT, ETC., RY. 130. — Proceedings at previous meeting read but not confirmed.]—Deft. was a brewer in Y., & the action was brought against him by pltf., an advertising agent, for work done & money paid for the use of deft. as a director of the Dutch Hanoverian Ry. Co., which began at the latter end of 1845. On Nov. 5, 1845, after the first meeting, £10 was agreed to be subscribed by each of the directors, deft. being one, to cover preliminary disbursements. On Jan. 1, 1846, a meeting of the directors took place, but deft. was not then present, & resolutions were then made which had been received in evidence in this case, to advertise etc., in the necessary papers. On Jan. 7, another meeting took place, at which deft. was present, when the proceedings of Jan. 7 were read, but not confirmed; but it was then agreed by a resolution, into which deft. had entered, to indemnify C. from liability in consequence of any advertisements ordered by the secretary. On Jan. 14 another meeting was held, at which deft. was present; & he never attended afterwards. On Feb. 25, deft. demanded back his £10 & received it; he had refused also, to take any shares. The secretary had ordered the advertisements in pursuance of the resolutions, & it was sought to make deft. liable on the resolutions come to on Jan. 1, at which he was not present, because they were read at the meeting on the 7th, at which he was present. Rule absolute to enter a nonsuit.—BARKER v. BRADLEY (1847), 9 L. T. O. S. 39, 229.

131. — Liability question for jury.]—On the trial of an action by an advertising agent against a member of the managing committee of a railway co., it appeared that on Oct. 13, deft. consented to become a member of the managing committee, & that an order for the insertion of some of the advertisements in question was given by the committee on that day, but that deft. did not attend a meeting of the committee until Oct. 18:—Held: the question of deft.'s liability was properly left to the jury.—MITCHELL v. MOORE (1848), 11 L. T. O. S. 124.

132. — Expenses incurred arising out of liability incurred at former meeting.]—At the same meeting at which deft. was appointed a provisional committeeman of a projected joint stock co., a resolution was come to that the solrs. of the projected co. should be instructed to prepare a deed of settlement. Deft. did not attend any meeting until two days after such meeting; & subsequently he attended meetings at which the solrs. were ordered to alter the terms of the deed:—Held: deft. was not liable for charges for preparing the deed; but he was liable for other business done by the solrs. pursuant to resolutions passed at meetings which he attended, notwithstanding the solrs. were retained before he became a member of the committee.—JENKYN v. FINDEN (1854), 2 W. R. 158.

Deft. had previously agreed to join that committee, & had forwarded applns. for shares, but whether before or after the meeting, was uncertain. An individual answering to deft.'s name was present at the meeting:—Held: there was no evidence to go to the jury of deft.'s identity with that individual.—GILES v. CORNFoot (1847), 2 Car. & Kir. 653, N. P.

C. Termination and Limitation of Liability.

135. Termination—Withdrawal of name—Consent of others necessary.]—One of several persons who have subscribed an agreement inter se, to promote a joint undertaking or common purpose cannot withdraw his name, & discharge himself from the engagement, without the consent of the rest of the subscribers. If an Act of Parliament has been passed for effectuating the purpose of the undertaking, by which certain obligations are created, such original subscriber is not exonerated from the liabilities imposed by the Act, by having, during the progress of the bill, renounced, before the committee, all further connection with the undertaking, & desired that his name might be, in consequence, omitted in the Act; nor can the circumstances of his name so being omitted, have the effect of disengaging him.—*KIDWELLY CANAL Co. v. His name was thereupon inserted in the list of the provisional committee; & he attended two meetings of the committee, but took no part whatever in the proceedings. At one of these meetings a committee of management was appointed. R. subsequently desired that his name might be struck out of the committee, & it was struck out accordingly:—Held: (1) in the circumstances, independently of the stipulation contained in his letter, R. having neither expressly nor impliedly assented to any act affecting him with liability, his name ought not to be inserted in the list of contributories of the co.; (2) the circumstance of R. having paid a sum of money under protest & causa pacis did not vary the case.—*Re DIRECT EXETER, PLYMOUTH & DEVONPORT RY. 139. — Company completely registered.]—Pltf., an engineer, sued deft. as the director of a railway co., for the expenses of surveys, etc. It appeared at the trial that deft. had been an active member of the committee, but that the co. had been completely registered:—Held: deft. was not liable; although the co. could not be sued, the contract not having been under seal.—STEVENS v. GREEN (1848), 10 L. T. O. S. 326.

140. — Release by co-promoters—On payment.]—At some of the meetings of the managing committee of a provisionally registered co., at which A., one of the committee, was present, it was resolved that certain proceedings should be advertised. At another meeting, attended by four of the body, but not by A., it was resolved, that a circular should be sent to the members of the provisional committee, which included the members of the managing committee, stating that, on payment of £160 each, they should be released from all liability. A. paid this amount & never attended any subsequent meeting. Meetings of the managing committee were afterwards held, at which some of these payments were referred to, & the terms of the circular were recognised & acted upon. The co. was wound up, & it appeared that one of the provisional committee had been compelled, by proceedings at law, to pay the bill of the advertising agent:—Held: A. was prima facie liable for some part of the demand, & was not exonerated by his payment of £160 & the subsequent conduct of his co-committeemen, but had been properly placed on the list of contributories.—*Re MIDLAND UNION, BURTON-UPON-TRENT, ASHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH & LEICESTER RY. 141. Limitation—Projector agreeing to look to deposits.]—The solr. who had projected, & at his own expense brought forward, a scheme for making a railway, entered into an agreement with the persons who became the provisional committee for prosecuting the undertaking, that the costs & expenses should be paid by such solr. & projector, & that the members of such provisional committee should not be personally liable to him for such costs & disbursements, but that the same should be paid out of the fund to arise from the deposits to be paid on the shares:—Held: this agreement was not illegal as between the provisional committee & the shareholders, regarded as trustee & cestui que trust, inasmuch as the trustee was entitled to be indemnified by his cestui que trust in respect of the costs & expenses properly incurred.

Qu.: whether the contract to pay future costs out of the deposits was illegal as between the solr. & client, attending to the fact that the client, being a trustee, might properly stipulate that he should not be personally liable for the costs to be incurred, but that the same should be paid exclusively out of the trust fund.—PARSONS v. SPOONER (1846), 5 Hare, 102; 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 163; 15 L. J. Ch. 155; 6 L. T. O. S. 344; 10 Jur. 423; 67 E. R. 845.

Annotation:—Reifd. Melhado v. Porto Alegre Ry. (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 503.

142. — Resolution passed in presence of plaintiff—Disclaiming personal liability for salaries.]—At a meeting of the provisional committee of a co., after certain resolutions appointing the engineers, the solr. & other officers of the co., the following resolution was lastly come to: "That the salaries remunerative of the above officers & promoter, be payable out of the deposits, & that the provisional committee be held not liable for the same." At that meeting A. was appointed engineer to the co., & B., being a provisional committeeman, & also in the acting committee, at a subsequent meeting assented to the above resolutions. In an action for work & labour, as an engineer, brought by A. against B.:—Held: the last resolution absolved B. from all personal responsibility.—GILES v. SMITH (1847), 11 Jur. 334.

See, also, No. 104, ante.

143. — Disclaiming personal liability for work done.]—In an action by an engineer against a provisional committeeman of a co., it appeared that, at a meeting of the committee, at which pltf. was present, it was resolved that the provisional committee should disclaim the intention of taking on themselves any personal responsibility as regards the expenses incurred or to be incurred in or about the co. & that no such responsibility should attach to them. At another meeting, at which pltf. was also present, a resolution was passed which contained a statement that the plaintiff had said that he would make no claim for his services until there should be sufficient funds of the co. to meet any demand he might be entitled to make. Pltf. stated in a letter that he never understood that, unless the project was successful, the engineers were to abandon all claim; but he did understand that the individuals comprising the committee were not to be held personally liable. At a subsequent meeting of the committee, it was resolved that the committee should bind themselves to be answerable to the extent of £1,000, to be applied to engineering & surveying purposes. The scheme was abandoned, & deposits to the amount of £4,168, which had been received by the committee, were returned to the shareholders:—Held: deft. was not responsible, the contract being that pltf. should be paid out of such funds as could be properly applied in satisfaction of his claim, & there were no funds of that description.—LANDMAN v. ENTWISTLE (1852), 7 Exch. 632; 7 Ry. & Can. Cas. 472; 21 L. J. Ex. 208; 155 E. R. 1101.

Annotation:—Refd. Caldicott v. Griffiths & Lowe (1853), 1 C. L. R. 715.

144. — Construction of deed.]—At the first meeting of the managing committee of a projected co. it was resolved that a deed of indemnity should be prepared. At the second meeting a solr. who was one of the promoters of the co., executed the deed of indemnity, which recited his appointment as solr. to the co., & an agreement by him that no member of the provisional committee, or director of the co. should be rendered personally or individually liable to him for any salary or other payment to be made to him for any services at any time rendered by him, but that the same should be chargeable upon such funds only as should be produced by the sale of, or subscriptions for, shares in the projected co.; & that no committeeman, or director, or shareholder, should be individually liable to pay the same to any greater or larger proportion than the amount of the share or shares subscribed for by him & unpaid from time to time. The deed then contained a covenant by the solr. not to sue any committeeman, director, or shareholder, save & except to the extent of the shares which should from time to time be subscribed for, or so much thereof as should remain unpaid by the committeeman, director, or shareholder, at the commencement of the suit; & declared that if any action or suit was commenced so as to render them personally liable to a greater extent, that deed should operate as a release. Shares were afterwards allotted by the committee, & deposits & subscriptions received to a certain amount, but not enough to comply with the Standing Orders of the Houses of Parliament, & the project was consequently abandoned. Some of the deposits were returned to the shareholders, & no funds remained in the hands of the committee. In an action by the solr. against a member of the committee who had paid his deposit & all calls which had been made upon his shares, for services rendered to the co.:—Held: the effect of the deed, as evidence of the contract between pltf. & deft., was to release deft. from individual responsibility, although the full amount of his shares had not been paid up.

All parts should be construed together, receiving as much effect as possible. The deed is the instrument of pltf., & therefore, in case of ambiguity, should be construed against him. Also it would be the duty of pltf., as the solr. of the co., to prepare & settle the deed, & on that account it would be inconsistent for him to derive any benefit from an ambiguity created by himself (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—SHERLOCK v. SPIERS (1849), 13 L. T. O. S. 424.

SUB-SECT. 6.—RIGHTS OF PROMOTERS.

A. As to Preliminary Expenses.

145. What are "formation expenses"—Include promotion-money.]—The prospectus issued by the promoters of a projected co. stated that the purchase-money to be paid by the co. to the vendors was £32,500, of which £15,000 was to be paid in 3,000 fully paid-up shares, & that "the remuneration of the directors will be paid by the shareholders, & it is proposed that they should be paid only by a commission on the profits made, no promotion-money whatever being paid to them by the co., & all formation expenses being paid by the vendors." The £32,500 was the real price originally agreed to be paid to the vendors. Shortly after the registration of the co. the vendors, who were two of the first directors of the co., transferred 800 of their vendors' paid-up shares to their co-directors in pursuance of an understanding which existed at the time the prospectus was issued, but which was not disclosed. The shares were so transferred as promotion-money, & in order to induce them to continue directors. In an action by a shareholder against the directors, claiming damages, on the ground that he had been induced to take his shares in the co. by the fraudulent misrepresentations contained in the above paragraph of the prospectus, & on the faith of which he had taken his shares:—Held: (1) the understanding was not a contract within 1867 Act, s. 38, & the omission to state it in the prospectus did not make the latter fraudulent within the statute; (2) although the transaction between the vendors & their co-directors might be ground for holding them liable in some other proceedings, it did not render the prospectus false or fraudulent, & the action must be dismissed with costs.

147. — Solicitor employed by promoter—No evidence of novation.]—P., a solr. employed by M. in the formation of a co. formed to purchase & carry on M.'s business, incurred costs & made certain disbursements in such formation. One of the arts. of asscn. of the co. provided that the directors should pay all “the costs incidental to the formation of the co.” An agreement between M. & the co. was approved & settled, one clause of which provided that all preliminary costs & expenses of & incidental to the co. should be considered as incurred & paid or payable by the co. The agreement was not executed, but the co. entered into possession of the property agreed to be purchased. On the winding-up of the co., P. sent in a claim for his costs & disbursements. The taxing master disallowed all the items prior to the date of the registration of the co.:—Held: (1) the certificate was right, & the solr. could not claim payment of the costs; the arts. of assocn. gave him no privity of contract; & the fact that the co. had had the benefit of his services was immaterial, as those services had been rendered on the retainer of M.; (2) on an examination of the minutes of the meeting of the co. & of the resolutions which were passed, there was no evidence of

148. — Amount agreed with promoter before registration—Payment without examination—Improper application of funds.]—E. agreed with S. that S. should get up a co. to purchase & work a colliery which E. had power to sell; that S. should sell to the co. for a certain price in cash & shares, & that the balance, after paying preliminary expenses, should be equally divided. S. promoted the formation of a co. to purchase the colliery for £25,000 in cash & £25,000 in paid-up shares, & induced six gentlemen to become directors, engaging that they should be at no expense. The arts. contained a clause empowering, but not binding, the directors to pay the preliminary expenses attending the formation of the co. Shortly before the co. was registered an agreement was made between S. & the directors that S. should receive £3,500 for preliminary expenses. On this occasion he produced a list of preliminary expenses, but did not produce vouchers, & no inquiry was made of him as to whether he was entitled to receive anything under his arrangements with E. S. received £3,200 from E., & received out of the funds of the co. the £3,500, out of which he paid the calls on the shares which the directors had taken to qualify them for the office. The co. having been ordered to be wound up:—Held: the directors were jointly & severally liable to repay to the co. the sum ordered to be paid to S. for preliminary expenses, on the ground that the money was paid in order to provide the directors' qualifications.

On appeal:—Held: this decision must be affirmed, for the directors had by their agreement with S. disqualified themselves for exercising a discretion as to the payment of preliminary expenses, & had not used due care & caution in examining into the propriety of paying them, & irrespective of the fact of their calls having been paid out of the money received by S., the payment to him was, under the circumstances a misapplication of the funds of the co., for which they were liable under 1862 Act, s. 165.—Re ENGLEFIELD COLLIERY Co. (1878), 8 Ch. The co. was formed, but proved abortive, & the purchase was never carried out, nor the £1,500 paid. The agreement had not been disclosed to the subscribers of the memorandum, who were the only contributories. In the winding up:—Held: (1) though a co. is generally bound in equity to pay the expenses of its formation, & though if the co. had adopted & carried out the purchase they might, notwithstanding the fraud, have been bound to discharge such expenses, & their only

The accordingly assigned the mine to a trustee; & then T. & M., the two principal shareholders, signed an agreement on behalf of the intended co. to purchase the mine of the trustee for £24,000, to be paid in shares of the new co., partly paid up & partly unpaid. The value of the mine at that time was about £6000. The co. was formed & registered with a nominal capital of £36,000 in 18,000 shares of £2 each, & T. & M. were two of the first directors. The agreement for purchase of the mine was sanctioned by the directors & carried into effect, & the whole of the shares in the co. were allotted to the shareholders of the cost-book mine, some as paid-up & others as partly paid-up shares, to the nominal amount of £24,000. Afterwards the co. was wound up, & the official liquidator claimed to make T. & M. account for the difference between the nominal value of their shares & the actual value of their interest in the cost-book mine:—Held: although the scheme, by which the mine was estimated much beyond its true value, might have been intended to deceive the public, there was no fraud upon the co., all the members of which were parties to the arrangement; & T. & M. were not accountable to the co. for any profit they had made or might have made by the transaction.

Semle: the transaction was intended to deceive the public by representing the co. as a valuable undertaking, & if any member of the public had bought shares on the faith of that representation, he would have a good right of action against his transferor.—*Re AMBROSE LAKE TIN & COPPER MINING CO., Ex p. 165. Nature of remedy—Dissolution—Alleged misfeasance—Sufficiency of pleading.]—(1) A subscriber to a projected railway co., by his bill filed on behalf of himself & all other shareholders except defts., alleged that the promoters, who were defts., in conjunction with the provisional committeemen, also defts., issued a prospectus representing the capital as £450,000, in 22,500 shares, on the faith of which pltf. & many others paid their deposits & signed the deed; that the provisional committeemen, however, never, as they ought, superintended the administration of the affairs of the co., but that, with their sanction, certain of their body acted as directors, & exercised the whole direction of the co., & that the other provisional committeemen sanctioned all their acts, without making any inquiry.

The bill alleged various acts of misfeasance on the part of the directors, &, in particular, that they did not allot all the shares, although they had many more than sufficient applns. for them; & the bill prayed for a dissolution, accounts, payment of the liabilities of the co., & distribution of the surplus among the subscribers. Some of the provisional committeemen, who were alleged by the bill to have applied for shares, but never to have paid any deposit or accepted them, demurred:—Held: the above charges against them were not sufficiently distinct or certain to support the bill.

(2) A deft., who was stated in the bill to be a shareholder, declining to concur with pltf., also demurred on the ground that the case stated by the bill entitled the shareholders to a return of the whole deposit, & that pltf. could not represent absent shareholders for the purpose of seeking a less extensive remedy. Demurrer overruled.

(3) One of the general body of shareholders, on whose behalf pltf. sued, had commenced an action at law against one of defts. to the suit, which continued & was pending after the bill filed. This deft. pleaded the pendency of the action, & that the sum sought to be recovered therein was a part of the monies which were the subject of the relief sought by the bill, & that pltf. in equity had not such a common interest with pltf. at law as to entitle the former to sustain a bill on behalf of himself & the latter:—Held: on appeal overruling the plea, the pendency of the action did not constitute a defence to the bill, as it must be assumed that pltf. at law repudiated the character of shareholder.

(4) A subscriber to a projected railway co., who had executed the subscription contract, filed a bill on behalf of himself and all the other shareholders, except defts., alleging misfeasance on the part of the directors, & seeking a dissolution & a distribution of the funds, after discharging the liabilities of the co. One of defts. pleaded that there were allottees who had not executed the deed. It appeared from the statements on the bill that the form of appln. for shares contained an undertaking to sign the contract when required. Plea overruled, without prejudice to same defence by answer.—SIBSON v. EDGORTH (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 73; 9 L. T. O. S. 293; 11 L. T. O. S. 23; 11 Jur. 626; 12 Jur. 279; 64 E. R. 34.

On his declining to do so they, by arrangement with a creditor of the co., brought an action against A. in the name of the creditor for the amount due to the latter. A. then filed his bill for & obtained an injunction to restrain the proceeding at law. On the coming in of the creditor's answer, admitting the above facts, but stating that the committee, who were suing in his name, would guarantee A. from all liability on his contributing £75, being his proportion of the expenses of the co., the ct. continued the injunction on the terms of A. bringing that amount into ct.—CUTTS v. The ground upon which the ct. goes, in enforcing, by injunction, a negative term in an agreement, the positive terms in which cannot be enforced by decree for specific performance is, that the injunction is dependent upon pltf.'s performing his part of the contract, & will be dissolved upon his failing to do so.

195. — Admissibility of evidence.]—In an action to restrain the registration of a co. with a name so nearly resembling that of an existing co. as to cause confusion, evidence is admissible for the purpose of ascertaining how the existing co. has used its name, & what, by reason of its connecting that name with its goods, the public have come to attribute to that name.—DAIMLER MOTOR CAR CO., LTD. v. BRITISH MOTOR TRACTION CO., LTD., (1901), 18 R. P. C. 465.

196. — Considerations affecting.]—On an application by a co. registered under 1862 Act, to restrain the registration of a new co. with a title alleged to be so similar to that of the old co. as to be calculated to deceive, it is material to consider (1) what business has been or is intended to be carried on by the old co., & what is intended to be carried on by the new co., & (2) what sort of name has been adopted by the old co.

A co. cannot, merely by registering as its title, or part of its title, a single word, whatever its nature, remove that word from the English language so far as regards its use in the title of subsequent cos.

A co. registered as “Aerators, Ltd.,” sought to restrain the registration of a new co. with the name “Automatic Aerators Patents, Ltd.” on the ground that it so nearly resembled the name of pltf. co. as to be calculated to deceive. The principal object of both cos. was the manufacture of apparatus for the instantaneous automatic aeration of liquids, but the patents & apparatus of pltf. co. were quite different from those of defts.:—Held: pltf. co. had no monopoly of the word “Aerator,” which was a word in common use in the English language, & the injunction was refused.—AERATORS, LTD. v. TOLLITT, [1902] 2 Ch. 319; 71 J. L. Ch. 727; 86 L. T. 651; 53 W. R. 584; 18 T. L. R. 637; 46 Sol. Jo. 451; 10 Mans. 95; 19 R. P. C. 418.

The writ of summons in an action against the directors was issued on the very day on which the royal assent was given to 61 Vict. c. 19, of which s. 4 suspended the operation of the Act of the previous session:—Held: the use of the abbreviation “Ltd.” was not a compliance with 52 Vict. c. 26, s. 2.—*HOWELL LITHOGRAPHIC CO., LTD. v. The registrar of Joint Stock Companies having refused to register the

B. Name Calculated to Deceive.

(a) In General.

See, now, 1908 Act, s. 8 (1), (2).

198. General rule.]—In considering whether the name of a registered co. so nearly resembles the name of another co. previously registered "as to be calculated to deceive" within the meaning of 1862 Act, s. 20, the principles to be applied are at any rate extremely analogous to those which are applicable in ordinary passing off cases in which the ct. has to consider whether a trade name, or a trade description, or a description of a particular class of goods, or the get-up of a particular class of goods, is or is not likely to deceive.

A distinction must always be drawn between cases in which the words complained of are words of common ordinary meaning & cases in which the words complained of more or less partake of the character of "fancy" words or primarily do not relate to the article, but to the person who makes it.

The onus of proving that words which are commonly & properly used as descriptive words have such a secondary or subsidiary meaning as to entitle the person who has used them to their exclusive use lies on that person, & is not easily discharged.—BRITISH VACUUM CLEANER CO., LTD. v. NEW VACUUM CLEANER CO., LTD., [1907] 2 Ch. 312; 76 L. J. Ch. 511; 97 L. T. 201; 23 T. L. R. 587; 51 Sol. Jo. 553; 14 Mans. 231; 24 R. P. C. 641.

199. Whole name of existing business—With addition of word "limited."]—Pltf. was the proprietor of an old-established library business at the West-end of London. Defts., being the promoters of a projected co., having for the principal object the carrying on of a library business in another quarter of the West-end, proposed to adopt as the title of their undertaking the same trade name as that which pltf. had used for a considerable period, but with the addition of the word "limited":—Held: defts. must be restrained from carrying on in or near London the business in question under the proposed title, or under any other title only colourably differing from the name of pltf.'s business, & also from advertising the intended commencement thereof under such title.—HOBV v. GROSVENOR LIBRARY CO., LTD. (1880), 28 W. R. 386.

200. —.]—A co. or trading concern is not entitled to adopt a name which incorporates the whole of the name of a pre-existing concern carrying on a like business.

Before 1897 two brewery cos. existed, resp. co., whose brewery was in Manchester, where they did a large business, & the "North Cheshire Brewery Co.," whose brewery was in Macclesfield & their business chiefly in that neighbourhood, although they had a certain amount of trade in Manchester. In 1897 the business of the North Cheshire Co. was sold as a going concern to a new co., who altered the name to "The North Cheshire & Manchester Brewery Co.":—Held: resp. co. were entitled to an injunction to restrain the new co. from using or carrying on business under their proposed name, as being calculated to deceive the public, though there was no evidence of a fraudulent intention, & the word "Manchester" was not used as the first word of the new name.—*NORTH CHESHIRE & MANCHESTER BREWERY CO. v. 198 i. General rule.]—In considering whether the name of a registered company as nearly resembles the name of another company previously registered "as to be calculated to deceive" within the meaning of Sect. 10 of Act 31 of 1909, the principles applied are substantially the same as those in passing off cases. s. — Question of fact—Difference between using existing name & adopting new name.]—A co. may be restrained from carrying on business under a name so similar to that of a competing co. with a well established business as to be calculated to deceive. It is a question of fact in each case whether the names of the two cos. are thus similar. While in the absence of fraud or false representation a man is entitled to carry on business in his own name in competition with a similar business notwithstanding that confusion & mistake may arise, yet if he has never carried on such business on his own account or in partnership with others, he cannot by promoting & registering a co. with a title of which his name forms a part, confer upon that co. the rights which he as an individual possesses in the use of that name, notwithstanding the absence of any fraudulent intention.—HOUSTON (W. M.) CO., LTD. v. HOUSTON (W. S.), LTD., [1920] 1 W. W. R. 463; 13 Sask. L. R. 143.—CAN.

t. Whole name of existing business—Already trading within province.]—There not being any express prohibition in British Columbia Fire Insurance Act, of the licensing of a co. with a name so similar to that of another co. already established in the province as to be likely to lead persons doing business with the new co. to think they are doing business with the old co., the ct. has no power to restrain the applt. for a license for the new co. from making or persisting in his application.—GUARDIAN ASSURANCE

203. ———.]—The Daimler Motor Co. (1904), Ltd., commenced an action to restrain a co., which had been recently registered under the name of the London Daimler Co., Ltd., from using the word "Daimler" either in its name or in connection with motor cars. In an action brought in 1901 by the predecessors of pltf. co. it was held that the word "Daimler" indicated a system, & that a "Daimler" motor indicated a certain form of motor; but pltf. alleged that that word had since acquired a secondary meaning indicating pltf. co. & its cars. About 37 per cent. of pltf.'s sales were effected in London, where they had show rooms. It did not appear what name defts. were going to give to their cars, but in a letter they said that their cars would be known as the "London Daimler," whereas pltf. were of Coventry. It was held at the trial, that the alleged secondary meaning of the word "Daimler" was not established, even only in connection with English cars; that the evidence showed that the name of deft. co. could be honestly used without suggesting connection with pltf. co.; & that as to the cars there was no evidence as to the name which defts. intended to give them. The action was dismissed with costs. Pltf. appealed:—Held: the word "Daimler" no longer indicated a type or system of motors, & the name London Daimler Co., Ltd., was calculated to deceive & to cause confusion between the two cos., & pltf. were entitled to an injunction as to the name of deft. co., although not in so wide a form as that claimed.—*DAIMLER MOTOR CO. 204. ———.]—In an action by the Electromobile Co. to restrain deft. co. from carrying on business under the name of the British Electromobile Co., upon the ground that the similarity of name was calculated to deceive the public, it was admitted by pltf. that the word "electromobile" was formerly a generic word, meaning a car propelled by electricity, but they contended that the evidence adduced by them showed that it had since acquired a secondary meaning denoting cars dealt in by them. The judge at the trial without a jury found in favour of defts. Upon appeal:—Held: the question was one of fact, & there was no ground for interfering with the decision of the judge.—ELECTROMOBILE CO., LTD. v. BRITISH ELECTROMOBILE CO., LTD. (1907), 98 L. advertising business, which he had since carried on under the name or style of the "Trade Extension Co." In 1909 defts. started a similar business, which was carried on under the name of "Expansion of Trade (Ltd.)":—Held: pltf.'s trade name had not acquired a secondary meaning as denoting pltf.'s business, & the name of deft. co. was not calculated to deceive.—*ELLIOTT v. In an action by the latter to restrain the former from using the same name:—Held: as the use of the name by defts. was bona fide, & as there was no competition between the two businesses, there was discretion in the ct. to refuse an injunction, & pltf. would be sufficiently protected by undertakings given by defts. to distinguish clearly their business from pltf.'s, & if required to disclaim connection with pltf. by notices displayed in their windows.—*BRIGHT (JOHN) & BROTHERS, LTD. v. In an action by a co. incorporated in 1821, & since that date carrying on a business of fire & life assurance at 11 L. "Sun Life Assurance Co."—"Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada."—A co. was incorporated in Canada under the title of the Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada:—Held: in the absence of fraud & dishonesty the co. were entitled to carry on business under their corporate name, provided it were without abbreviation, addition or other modification, in England, notwithstanding the existence of the Sun Life Assurance Co.—SAUNDERS v. 222. "Water Softening Materials Co. (Sofnol)"—"Water Softeners."—Upon an application under 1908 Act, s. 15, to the registrar of cos. to register a co. with the name "The Water Softening Materials Co. (Sofnol), Ltd." the registrar refused to register it upon the ground that the name so nearly resembled that of "Water Softeners, Ltd.," an existing co. already registered, as to be calculated to deceive within the meaning of sect. 8, sub-sect. 1 of the Act. Appcts. applied for a writ of mandamus to the registrar to register the co. with that name upon the grounds that he was required to do so under sect. 15 & that the name did not so nearly resemble that of any co. already registered as to be calculated to deceive:—Held: the mandamus must be refused as there was no ground for saying that the registrar, in exercising his discretion, had come to a wrong decision.

In order to displace the decision of the registrar & justify this ct. in interfering by mandamus, it would be necessary for appcts. to show one or more of three things: either that the registrar had not in fact exercised any discretion in the particular case, or that he had exercised it upon some wrong principle of law, or that he had been influenced by extraneous considerations which he ought not to have taken into account (AVORY, J.).—R. v. customers. In 1911 Thomas Kingston left his employment in the business & promoted deft. co., which was formed to carry on a business of the same character as that of pltf's., & to secure & turn to account Thomas Kingston's services as an expert in the business. He was shortly afterwards appointed managing director:—Held: the use of the name "Kingston" by defts. was likely to mislead & deceive the public into the belief that defts. were the same co. as pltf's.; even if Thomas Kingston could, by selling the goodwill of a business which he had carried on in his own name to a co., have conferred on it the right to use the name, he had nothing in the nature of a goodwill to transfer, & so could not give defts. the right to use his name; & defts. must be restrained from using their registered name or any other so nearly resembling that of pltf's. as to be calculated to deceive, & from carrying on a similar business under it.—KINGSTON, MILLER & Co., LTD. v. "Waring & Gillow"—"Gillow & Gillow"—Partial similarity of business.—Pltf's., Waring & Gillow (Ltd.) were a limited co. carrying on business in Oxford Street, London, as furniture manufacturers & dealers in furniture, carpets, & rugs, & as auctioneers & estate agents. The co. was formed in 1896 to take over two businesses known as "S. J. Waring & Sons" & "Gillow & Co." Defts., Gillow & Gillow (Ltd.), were a co. established in 1915 (inter alia) to hold auction sales of carpets, rugs, & mats, in St. James's Street, London. Before the formation of deft. co., C. L. Gillow, who was an auctioneer, had carried on auction sales of carpets, & deft. co., in which he was largely interested, was formed to continue this business. In an action by pltf's. to restrain defts. from carrying on business in the name of Gillow & Gillow (Ltd.) or any other name so nearly resembling that of pltf's. as to be likely to mislead the public into the belief that deft. co. was the same as pltf. co. or a branch or department thereof:—Held: on the facts deft. co. was not likely on any reasonable or legitimate ground to be mistaken for pltf. co., & therefore the action failed.—WARING & GILLOW, LTD. v. 228. "Dutton, Massey & Co. (Liverpool)"—"Dutton, Massey & Co."—Long before 1868 the business carried on by pltf. co. was founded at Liverpool for the purpose of carrying on the business of coal merchants, factors & dealers, colliery proprietors & shipping & forwarding agents. In 1868 the firm name of Dutton, Massey & Co. was adopted. In 1922 pltf. co. was formed & acquired that business. In 1906 a London branch was started for the purpose of carrying on the business of metal & general merchants in London. It became a separate firm, which continued under the old name & in 1921 it passed to a trustee of a deed of assignment. Early in 1922 the London business was sold & transferred to a co. registered under the name of Dutton, Massey & Co. (Eastern), Ltd. Subsequently the latter co., with the sanction of the Board of Trade, changed their original name by eliminating therefrom the word "Eastern" & in Oct., 1922, they opened an office in Liverpool under their name, Dutton, Massey & Co., Ltd., & advertised themselves in the "Journal of Commerce" as general export merchants, coal, shipping & forwarding agents. Pltf. co. commenced an action for an injunction restraining deft. co. from representing, or doing anything calculated to cause confusion & lead to the belief, that the business carried on by them was that formerly carried on by Dutton, Massey & Co. of Liverpool, & from using the name of Dutton, Massey & Co., Ltd., so as to induce such belief. Evidence of actual confusion was given at the trial:—Held: the word "Eastern" had been dropped by deft. co. for a fraudulent purpose & the sanction of the Board of Trade to the change had been obtained by fraudulent means; & deft. co. must, in the circumstances of the case, be restrained by injunction (1) from using the name of Dutton, Massey & Co., Ltd., or any other name of which the words Dutton, Massey formed a part, in the businesses of coal merchants, factors, & dealers, colliery proprietors, shipping & forwarding agents, & from in any other manner representing or causing or procuring to be represented or doing any other thing which was calculated to lead to the belief that they had been or were carrying on the business or were the successors in business of the late firm of Dutton, Massey & Co. of Liverpool, coal merchants, etc., & (2) from using in any business the name of "Dutton, Massey & Co., Ltd." or any other name of which the words "Dutton, Massey" formed part without in such name sufficiently distinguishing their name from the name of pltf. co.—DUTTON, MASSEY & Co. (LIVERPOOL), LTD. v. DUTTON, MASSEY & Co., LTD. (1923), 40 R. P. C. 413.

229. Business not previously carried on.—Pltf's. were a registered co. carrying on the business of a waxwork exhibition in London under the name of "Madame Tussaud & Sons, Ltd." Their exhibition was a very old established one. Deft., Louis Tussaud, was a wax-modeller, who had formerly been employed by pltf. co., but had never carried on any business on his own account. He promoted a co., of which he was to be manager, to carry on an exhibition similar to that of pltf's., but in another part of London. It was proposed to register the new co. under the name of "Louis Tussaud, Ltd." Pltf's. moved for an injunction to restrain deft. from proceeding with the registration of the new co. under the proposed name or any other name so nearly resembling that of pltf. co. as to be calculated to deceive:—Held: that an injunction ought to be granted in similar terms to the order in Hendriks v. Montagu, No. 194, ante.

Semble: if deft. had previously carried on an exhibition in his own name, & had sold it with the goodwill to third parties, who had transferred it to the co., registration under the proposed name might have been allowed.—TUSSAUD v. TUSSAUD (1890), 44 Ch. D. 678; 59 L. J. Ch. 631; 62 L. T. 633; 38 W. R. 503; 6 T. L. R. 272; 2 Meg. 120.

232. Business previously carried on—But goodwill parted with.]—William Edgcumbe Rendle, the patentee of an invention for glass-roofing, carried on business under the name of "W. Edgcumbe Rendle & Co." His son, John Edgcumbe Rendle, was taken into his father's glass-roofing business, & entered into an agreement not to carry on any opposition business. The father died, having by his will given the son an interest in the glass-roofing business. The son then started business on his own account under the name of "J. Edgcumbe Rendle & Co." He got into financial difficulties, & made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors of his business & of all his property. A co., of which he was the promoter & manager, was subsequently registered under the name of "J. Edgcumbe Rendle & Co., Ltd.," to carry on the business of glass-roofing in opposition to W. Edgcumbe Rendle & Co.

The trustees of the will of the father thereupon applied to the ct. for an injunction to restrain the co. & their manager from carrying on the business of glass-roofing under the name of "J. Edgcumbe Rendle & Co., Ltd.," or any other name calculated to mislead the public into the belief that such co. was carrying on or had succeeded to the business of W. Edgcumbe Rendle & Co.:—Held: an injunction must be granted as the son, who was not at the time carrying on the business of glass-roofing he having assigned all his interests to his creditors, had no right to lend his name to a co., which name from its being so like one already attached to an established business, would be calculated to deceive.—*RENDLE v. 235. —.]—L. M. Pinet, trading as Maison Pinet, who carried on a small & recently established business in boots & shoes made for a special purpose, sold that business to deft. co. One of the objects of the co. was, by its memorandum of assocn., stated to be "to carry on business in England & elsewhere as bootmakers & shoe-makers." Pltf's. had for over forty years carried on business in the manufacture & sale of boots & shoes, their goods being commonly known as "Pinet's."

They accordingly applied for an interlocutory injunction to restrain deft. co. from carrying on business as manufacturers or vendors of boots or shoes under the name of "Maison Pinet, Ltd.," or under any other name or description of which the name "Pinet" formed part, & which was so arranged or contrived as, by colourable imitation of pltf's. trading style or otherwise, to be calculated to represent or lead to the belief that deft. co. were carrying on pltf's. business, & from in any other manner representing or acting so as to lead to such belief as aforesaid:—Held: (1) although the business of L. M. Pinet was not the same as pltf's., yet the co. formed to acquire it had no intention of restricting their operations in any way, & would probably develop that business as far as possible, & develop it at the expense of pltf's., & therefore, a case had been made out justifying the interference of the ct. at the present stage of the proceedings; (2) the interlocutory injunction claimed went beyond what pltf's. required for their protection, & must be limited as in the form in Montgomery v. Thompson, [1891] A. C. 217.—PINET (F.) ET CIE v. MAISON PINET, LTD. (1897), 77 L. T. 322; 14 T. L. R. 2, C. A.

236. — Previous fraudulent change of name.]—In 1892 deft., who was then known by the name of Louis Lesser St. Leger Forbes Gower, took by deed-poll the name of Louis Marius Pinet. This deed was registered in 1894. In 1893 he began to carry on under his new name the business of manufacturing a contrivance for increasing the apparent height of short persons, & boots & shoes specially made for this purpose. In 1897 he sold this business to a co., incorporated under the name of Maison Pinet, Ltd. The memorandum of assocn. enabled the co. to carry on a general boot & shoe-making business. F. Pinet & Cie, of Paris, brought an action against Maison Pinet, Ltd., & on Oct. 26, 1897, the Ct. of Appeal granted an injunction restraining the deft. co. from carrying on business as manufacturers of boots & shoes under any name of which Pinet formed a part, without clearly distinguishing their boots & shoes from those made by pltf's. At this time it was supposed that Pinet was L. M. Pinet's original name. Deft. co. then entered into an agreement to sell their business to a new co., to be called Maison Louis Pinet, Ltd. F. Pinet & Cie. then brought this action against L. M. Pinet, both cos., & their directors, for an absolute injunction against the use of the name Pinet:—Held: deft., L. M. Pinet, having adopted the name Pinet for fraudulent purposes, pltf's. were entitled to an absolute injunction restraining him & both the cos. from using the name Pinet, or any description including that name, in connection with boots & shoes, & from purporting to sell to, or doing anything purporting to confer upon any other person the right to use that name in connection with boots & shoes.—PINET (F.) & CIE. v. MAISON LOUIS PINET, LTD., [1898] 1 Ch. 179; 67 L. J. Ch. 41; 77 L. T. 613; 46 W. R. 506; 14 T. L. R. 87; 14 R. P. C. 933.

237. — Partial similarity of business—Different locality.]—Previously to the year 1904 two brothers had carried on a small business at Kilmarnock, Scotland, under the style of R. & J. P. Dunlop, the principal business of this firm being that of selling & repairing bicycles, tricycles, & motors. In 1904 the two brothers registered a co. called the Dunlop Motor Co. with a capital of £500. This co. took over from R. & J. F. Dunlop the motor business, & the purposes of the co. were the sale on commission & the repairing of motors, motor cycles, & the parts thereof, the actual business consisting principally in executing repairs & selling petrol. Pursuers, the Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co., of Regent Street, London, who deal in tyres, pumps, & other adjuncts of motors & other vehicles, sought an injunction to restrain the Dunlop Motor Co. from carrying on its business under the name of the "Dunlop Motor Co." :—Held: on the evidence (1) there was no proof that any one would be misled into thinking that the two cos. were the same; (2) pursuers had no exclusive use of the name of "Dunlop."—*DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD. v. Restoration of original name—Name changed in pursuance of invalid resolution—Jurisdiction of court—Form of order.—An order was made altering the name of a limited co., & a certificate was issued by the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies that the co. had changed its name. It was then found that the resolutions upon which the order was based were bad. On motion to direct the registrar to restore the old name, & also to discharge the order:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction over the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, he being an officer of the Board of Trade, & not of the ct.

Order: It appearing (stating the defects plainly), discharge the order, & give the co. liberty to apply to the Board of Trade as they may be advised to vacate the existing registration & to restore the original name.—Re AUSTRALASIAN MINING CO., LTD. (1893), 68 L. The co. continued to carry on the business at the shop in the name of the former proprietor, & they issued invoices & signed receipts in his name, the co.'s name being also painted over the door of the shop:—Held: the co. had a right to trade under the name of the former proprietor so long as they complied with the Companies Acts; & though the co. had been guilty of a breach of 1862 Act, s. 41, they were not thereby precluded from asking for an injunction to restrain the use by another person of the name of the former proprietor so as to be calculated to deceive. On appeal the case was settled upon terms.—PEARKS, GUNSTON & TEE, LTD. v. THOMPSON, TALMEY & CO. (1901), 17 T. L. R. 354; 18 R. P. C. 185, C. A.

255. Association of more than twenty persons—Subscribers to fund vested in trustees—Subscribers more than twenty in number—Trustees less than twenty in number—Trustees not acting as agents or directors.]—Shares in a number of telegraph cos. of the nominal amount of £400,000 were purchased by subscription & vested in trustees. Each subscriber received for every £90 subscribed a certificate for the nominal amount of £100, & a deferred coupon for one 4,200th part of the funds, the number of certificates being 4,200. The trusts of the funds were declared by a deed between the trustees & a covenantee on behalf of the certificate holders. The trustees were to apply the income of the shares in payment of interest at 6 per cent. on the nominal amounts of the certificates, & apply the surplus in redeeming the certificates. It was provided that the trustees might at their discretion sell any of the shares if at a meeting of the trustees it was unanimously resolved to be for the interest of the certificate holders that shares to be specified in the resolution should be sold. The proceeds of every sale were to be applied in the redemption of certificates, unless the trustees, by an unanimous resolution confirmed by a meeting of certificate holders, determined to re-invest in submarine telegraph shares. Meetings of the certificate holders were to be held for the purpose of receiving reports from the trustees on the affairs of the trust, of appointing auditors, & of appointing new trustees in the place of trustees who should die, retire, or become incapable to act. After all the certificates had been redeemed the funds in hand were to be divided among the holders of the deferred coupons. The holders of the certificates were more than twenty in number:—Held: (1) the certificate holders did not form an assocn. within the meaning of 1862 Act, s. 4; (2) the object of the deed of settlement was not to authorise the carrying on of a business within the meaning of the above Act, but to provide for the management of a trust fund, & that even if the powers of selling the shares & reinvesting the proceeds could be considered to authorise the carrying on of a business, these provisions being merely subsidiary, & not forming any substantial part of the object, would not bring the case within the Act; (3) supposing the deed to authorise the carrying on of a business, such business was carried on only by the trustees, who carried it on as trustees, & not as agents or directors, & as they were fewer than twenty, the case was not within the Act.

(4) An ordinary partnership is a partnership composed of definite individuals bound together by contract between themselves to continue combined for some joint object, either during pleasure or during a limited time, & is essentially composed of the persons originally entering into the contract with one another. A co. or assocn., which I take to be synonymous terms, is the result of an arrangement by which parties intend to form a partnership which is constantly changing, a partnership to-day consisting of certain members & to-morrow consisting of some only of those members along with others who have come in, so that there will be a constant shifting of the partnership, a determination of the old & a creation of a new partnership, & with the intention that, so far as the partners can by agreement between themselves bring about such a result, the new partnership shall succeed to the assets & liabilities of the old partnership. This object as regards liabilities could not in point of law be attained by any arrangement between the persons themselves, unless the persons contracting with them authorised the change by a novation, or unless by special provisions in Acts of Parliament sanction was given to such arrangements (JAMES, L.J.).—*SMITH v. By the rules of the society its object was stated to be to purchase a freehold estate, & to divide it into lots, & to apportion them among the members ; but the right to get, win, sell, lease, or dispose of the coal or minerals was not to be conveyed, but to “ remain vested in the trustees, who shall have full power to sell, lease, get, or win the coals, at such price or prices, & in such manner as they may think best, the profits or proceeds of which shall be divided amongst the shareholders in the proportion,” etc. The trustees of the society were three in number.

Company formed for "any purpose of profit"—Land company.]—A co. was formed under a deed of settlement, stating that the co. was formed for the purpose of purchasing land & erecting thereon dwellings to be allotted to members of the co., & also of raising a fund out of which sums of money should be paid to or applied for the benefit of members being allottees of land. The deed provided that the directors should from time to time, & as the funds should admit of, purchase land for the purposes of the co. to be divided among shareholders who should have paid the full amount of their shares; the shareholders by whom the allotments of land should be taken, & the allotments which they should take, being determined by lot in a manner therein provided. Each allotment was to be conveyed to the shareholder entitled to it, charged with a rentcharge at the rate of £5 per cent. on the sum expended in the purchase & improvement of the land allotted, such rentcharges to be in their turn expended in the purchase of other land, to be allotted in a similar manner. There were powers for the directors, instead of allotting, to sell for the benefit of the co. any land which they might have purchased, & either to retain for the benefit of the co. or to sell or mortgage the rentcharges secured on the allotments as they might see fit. Whenever the funds of the co. should exceed the amount necessary to provide allotments for all the shareholders a dividend was to be declared out of the clear profits:—Held: this was not a co. established "for a commercial purpose or for any purpose of profit," within 1844 Act, s. 2, & it was not entitled to be registered under that Act.—*R. v. Association for acquisition of gain—Mutual Assurance Society.]—A fund was formed by a number of persons over 20 in number, the object being, according to the prospectus & rules to provide for the widows, children, & other relatives of the subscribers. The management was vested in a board of directors elected by the subscribers from amongst their own number. Subscriptions at fixed rates according to tables were paid by the subscribers to secure the provision of pensions for their widows, children, & relatives. The moneys so subscribed were invested in Govt. 4 per cent. securities, & in the course of management a large reserve fund was accumulated & so invested, the interest annually payable in respect of which amounted in the year 1888 to upwards of R.46,000, but there was nothing to show that such reserve was larger than sound principles of management required. The rules provided for abatements of subscriptions according to a graduated scale, which might be granted or withheld from year to year by the directors according to their opinion as to the condition of the fund. A subscriber to the fund was under no obligation to continue his subscription, but might stop it at pleasure, subject in certain contingencies to forfeiture of the benefit of past payments. 267. — Association for investment of members' subscriptions.]—A govt. securities trust, or combination of more than twenty persons, formed on the principle of investing the subscriptions of the members & dividing the capital fund & profits among themselves by means of certificates convertible by annual drawings by lot into preference dividend bonds bearing interest, with a bonus, is an "asscn. for the acquisition of gain," within the meaning of 1862 Act, s. 4, & is,

was carried on, having for its object the acquisition of gain by the asscn. or the individual members thereof. Where the substantial purpose of an asscn. is not to carry on a business for gain, the fact that gain may accrue incidentally or may arise from merely subsidiary provisions does not make registration necessary.—*KRAAL v. therefore, unless registered under that sect., an illegal assocn.

A member of such an assocn., which had never been registered under the above Act, but which was regulated by a trust deed, brought an action against the trustees named in the deed to have the trust administered by the ct., & to make the trustees liable for alleged breaches of trust whereby part of the trust funds had been lost. A demurrer by one of the defts., a retired trustee, was allowed, on the ground that the assocn. was illegal, & that the trust deed therefore constituted an illegal contract which the ct. would not enforce.—*SYKES v. 268. — Land society.—An assocn. consisting of more than twenty persons, was constituted by a deed & not registered under 1862 Act, s. 4. The object of the society was to purchase an estate, subdivide it into allotments & roads, & divide the allotments among the members according to certain rules, & was managed by a committee, consisting of two trustees, a president, & five other members, who were paid for their services such sum as the members in annual meeting should determine, & the total number of members was 21.

The allotments were offered by auction to the members who had executed the constitution deed, each allotment being offered at the proportion of the first cost of the estate, & allotted to the member bidding the highest premium above such proportion of first cost:—Held: the society was not an assocn. for the purpose of carrying on a business that had for its object the acquisition of gain within the meaning of the above Act, & did not require to be registered.—*WIGFIELD v. 269. — — — — ——In 1873 an assocn. of more than twenty persons was formed for the object, as stated in its deed of settlement, of purchasing a freehold estate & reselling it in allotments to the members of the assocn. The deed was executed by all the members, the name of each, the number of his allotment, the total amount he was to pay, & the amount of his monthly payment to be made in respect of it, being specified on a sched. to the deed. The property was vested in trustees, & its management was vested in a president, vice-president, treasurer, secretary & a committee. The deed contained provisions for the conveyance to the members of their allotments when they had paid up the whole amount payable in respect of them & for forfeiture & sale of the allotments of defaulting members. Powers were given to the committee to make roads, drains, etc., on the land & powers were given to the trustees of borrowing money on mtge. with the consent of a general meeting. When all mtges. had been paid off & all the allotments had been conveyed, the society was to come to an end. The society was not registered under 1862 Act:—Held: the society was not an assocn. formed for the purpose of carrying on any business that had for its object the acquisition of gain & was not made illegal by 1862 Act, s. 4.—Re SIDDALL (1885), 29 Ch. D. 1; 54 L. J. Ch. 682; 52 L. T. 114; 33 W. R. 509; 1 T. L. R. 209, C. A.

270. — Loan society.—Persons to a number exceeding twenty had formed themselves into a society, the object of which was to raise by monthly subscriptions & payments payable by the members in respect of their shares, a fund for the purpose of making advances to members. From the rules of the society it appeared that there were 400 shares in the society of £10 each, & that no member could hold more than twenty shares. From time to time as soon as the fund in hand amounted to a certain sum it was put up for sale by auction amongst the members, the highest bidder receiving the amount on loan from the society at interest. No member could receive on loan more than the nominal amount of the share or shares held by him, but ultimately every member, who did not withdraw his share under the rule providing for such withdrawal, was to have advanced or allotted to him out of the funds accruing to the society, the sum of £10 for every share held by him. This society was not registered under 1862 Act:—

Held: the society was illegal by reason of 1862 Act, s. 4, which prohibits the formation of any co., assocn., or partnership consisting of more than twenty persons for the purpose of carrying on any business, other than banking, that has for its object the acquisition of gain by the co., assocn., or partnership, or by the individual members thereof, unless registered as a co. under the Act.—*JENNINGS v. 270 i. — Loan Society.—Persons more than twenty in number paid each a certain sum monthly to a stakeholder. The sum total of the subscriptions was then paid over as a loan free of interest to one of the subscribers chosen by casting lots, & he was thereupon required to execute a bond with a surety obliging him to continue his monthly subscriptions to the end of the period for which the arrangement was agreed to hold good—that period being as many months as there were subscribers. The bonds in question were executed in favour of the stakeholder & the subscribers. The business was not registered. A suit was brought on one of such bonds to recover the amount payable for subscription on account of the period subsequent to its execution:—Held: (1) the obligees carried on business which had for its object the acquisition of gain within Companies Act, 1882, s. 4, & accordingly constituted an illegal assocn.; (2) the suit was not maintainable.—*RAMASAMI BHAGAVATHAR v. under Building Societies Act, 1874 (c. 42).]—A building society was established in 1868 under Building Societies Act, 1836 (c. 32), but had never been incorporated under any subsequent Act. In 1900 the society was found to be insolvent, & a petition was presented by two creditors to wind it up. Semble: although in a literal sense the society was, in the words of sect. 4 of 1862 Act, “formed in pursuance of some other Act of Parliament,” the word “formed” in that sect. means formed & having its existence recognised under the provisions “of some other Act,” & therefore the society, not having been incorporated under Building Societies Act, 1874 (c. 42), was an illegal society, & consequently the ct. had no jurisdiction to make a winding-up order.—Re ILFRACOMBE PERMANENT MUTUAL BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, [1901] 1 Ch. 102; 70 L. 274. — Friendly society — Not registered under Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (c. 25).]—The trustees of an unregistered assocn. of more than twenty persons formed for mutual insurance against death & accident sued the late treasurer for moneys of the society which he had converted to his own use:—Held: the society was not rendered illegal by 1862 Act for want of registration, & plffs. were not precluded from maintaining the action by reason of non-registration under that Act or the above Act.

I prefer to base my judgment on the fact that the society comes within the exception of a co. formed under another Act of Parliament. This is a friendly society for all intents & purposes, & it was intended to be a friendly society. I think that the Friendly Societies Acts do contemplate the existence of friendly societies which are not, in fact, registered (CHANNELL, J.).—MARRS v. THOMPSON (1902), 86 L. T. 759; 18 T. L. 275. Liability of members changed by registration.]—Bill by shareholders in an assocn., which, by its prospectus & statutes, professed to be a Société en Commandite, having its seat in Paris, but which was in fact carried on exclusively in England,—the naming Paris as its seat being merely colourable, & with a view to make the assocn. an English partnership with limited liability, similar to the partnership en commandite usual in France,—against the Conseil de Surveillance & the Gérant, for an account & payment, & to have the partnership property secured. The statutes contained the provisions usual with sociétés en commandite for the absolute limitation of liability of all members who should not compromise their character of simple commanditaires, & for making the shares payable to bearer. The number of shareholders considerably exceeded 25. It did not appear that the co. was registered under the 1844 Act. A demurrer was overruled, it appearing by the bill that defts. had obtained plffs.’ money upon the faith of the representations contained in the prospectus & statutes, & intended to misapply it.

Semble: such a co. could not be registered under 1844 Act, because registration would subject parties who had taken shares in it on the faith of the prospectus, & believing it was to be a société en commandite, to a totally different class of liabilities.—BUTT v. MONTEAUX (1854), 1 K. & J. 98; 3 Eq. Rep. 190; 24 L. J. Ch. 99; 24 L. T. O. S. 106; 3 W. R. 82; 69 E. R. 385.

276. Banking company constituted under statute—Registration after suspension of payment.]—A joint stock banking co., constituted under Country Bankers Act, 1826 (c. 46), became insolvent, & in Nov., 1857, stopped payment, but no resolution was passed for dissolving it. In the following month it was registered under Joint Stock Banking Cos. Act, 1857, in pursuance of a resolution come to after the stoppage:—Held: the registration was valid, for that in order to bring a co. within sect. 6 of the Act, it is not necessary that it should continue to carry on business up to the time of its registration.—Re NORTHUMBERLAND & DURHAM DISTRICT BANKING CO. (1858), 2 De G. & J. 357; 27 L. 277. Company proposing to do business in England—& to be managed in England—Though all subscribers & directors resident abroad.]—(1) Where the requisite number of persons & the requisite forms of appln. are presented to the registrar of joint stock cos. under the provisions of 1862 Act, though the persons applying for registration of a co. may be foreigners, & though there may be many circumstances tending to show that the co. sought to be registered is, in several respects, a foreign co., he is not bound to refuse it registration.

(2) If there are in it shares in conformity with the statute, though there may be others of a different kind, & though the principal business seems likely to be transacted abroad, he may still grant it registration.

(3) A co. having many of its shares transferable by delivery, but having also many “nominative shares,” i.e. shares which are the same as the ordinary joint stock shares in cos. in this country, applied for registration. The seven shareholders who made the application were all resident abroad, & the first directors nominated were foreigners, & only one of them appeared to have even a temporary residence in England. The arts. of assocn. referred in several places to the English law, & especially to 1862 Act. There was an office of the co. in Westminster, but it was doubtful whether any general meeting was intended to be held in London, or other place in England. The registrar granted it registration:—Held: he was lawfully entitled to do so, he was not bound to refuse the registration, & the registration having been thus actually made, the usual legal consequences of registration arose.

(4) A co. by its arts. of assocn. authorised the issue of two classes of shares, first "nominative" or ordinary shares, & secondly shares on which 50 per cent. having been paid, the holder should be entitled to a scrip certificate enabling him to pass the shares by mere delivery of such certificate:—Held: this was an irregular provision which would have entitled the registrar to refuse a certificate of incorporation, but which does not vitiate an actual incorporation.

(5) The memorandum of assocn. of a co. intended to be registered under the 1862 Act, may be signed exclusively by foreigners resident abroad, but they thereby contract to make themselves liable to the laws of England, & the Cos.' 280. — Private partnership.]—In 1887 C. & seven other persons formed a private partnership, & immediately afterwards C. conveyed to the eight partners certain real estate to hold unto & to the use of the grantees as part of the joint stock assets of the partnership. Shortly afterwards the business was converted into a limited liability co., & the registrar of joint stock cos. gave a certificate of incorporation as of the date of the formation of the partnership. There was no deed of conveyance of the property to the incorporated co., but in 1891, the co. conveyed it by deed to a new co., which in 1902 agreed to sell it to a purchaser. Upon the purchaser's contention that the legal estate was outstanding in the eight grantees:—Held: the partnership was not a "co. duly constituted by law" within the meaning of 1862 Act, s. 180, so as by sect. 193 of that Act to vest the legal estate in the incorporated co.; & the legal estate was therefore left in the grantees or the survivor of them in trust for the co.; but, the legal estate in the grantees was, in view of the undisturbed possession of the new co. since 1891, barred & extinguished by operation of the Real Property Limitation Acts, 1833 & 1874, & the vendors had therefore shown a good title.—Re CUSSONS, LTD. (1904), 73 L. 281. Whether a trade union—Regulation of trade not a main object of company.]—Sect. 1 of 1900 Act does not make the certificate of the registrar of companies conclusive that the co. in respect of which he has granted a certificate is validly registered & is not in reality a trade union. The section only deals with ministerial acts.

The mere fact that in its memorandum & arts. of assocn. a co. has power to enter into an arrangement for the regulation of the output of, & the price to be obtained for, goods—this not being one of the main objects of the co.—does not constitute the co. a trade union, & as such incapable of registration under the above Act.—*BRITISH ASSOCN. 282. — Society for acquisition of performing rights—No restriction on exercise of members' trade or business.]—Pltf. society, which was registered under Cos. Acts as a co. limited by guarantee, was formed for the purpose of enforcing on behalf of its members, being the composers, authors, publishers or proprietors of musical, literary or dramatic works, who alone were eligible as members, all rights & remedies in respect of the public performance of their works. By the arts. of assocn. every member who was a publisher undertook during the period of his membership to assign to the society his interest present & future in the performing rights of any works which had been or should thereafter be published by him, & invested the society with the sole right to authorise or forbid the public performance of any such works. In 1916 a firm of music publishers, being members of pltf. society, assigned by deed to the society the performing right of every song the right of performance of which they then possessed or should thereafter acquire, to be held by the society for the period of the assignors' membership. Subsequently a certain song was written, & the copyright in it, together with the right of performance, was assigned by the author to the firm. Defts., music hall proprietors, permitted this song to be publicly sung in their music hall without the consent of pltf. society, who sued defts. for infringement of their performing rights. Pltfs. claimed an injunction & damages, but they ultimately abandoned their claim for damages:—Held: pltf. society was not a trade union.

Beyond doubt applt. assocn. is not a trade union. "The imposition of restrictive conditions on the conduct of a trade or business & the provision of benefits to members" are not "the principal objects" of the combination which it has formed, nor is either of them. Neither is, in my opinion, even an incidental consequence of its operations (LORD SUMNER).—PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD. v. LONDON THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD., [1924] A. C. 1; 93 L. J. K. 286. Compliance with statutory requirements as to memorandum.]—The memorandum of assocn. of the E. Co. contained an objects clause with thirty sub-clauses enabling the co. to carry on almost every conceivable kind of business which the co. could adopt. Sub-clause 1 authorised the co. to acquire, take over, work, & develop any licences, concessions, estates, plantations, & properties, & in particular four specified licenses to collect rubber, balata, & other like substances from the Crown lands of a British Colony; & sub-clause 12 authorised the co. to buy or otherwise acquire in any way & hold, sell, or deal with or in any stocks or shares of any co.; & the objects clause concluded with a declaration that every sub-clause should be construed as a substantive clause & not limited or restricted by reference to any other sub-clause or by the name of the co., & that none of such sub-clauses or the objects specified therein should be deemed subsidiary or auxiliary merely to the objects mentioned in the first sub-clause.

The E. Co. underwrote & had allotted to it shares in the A. Co., & these shares were transferred to the L. Co. All three cos. being in liquidation, the liquidator of the A. Co., settled the L. Co. on the A. list of contributories & the E. Co. on the B. list in respect of these shares. On application by the liquidator of the E. Co., to vary the B. list by striking out that co.'s name, on the ground that the underwriting was ultra vires of the co.:—Held: the memorandum must be construed according to its literal meaning, & the underwriting was intra vires.

The objects of the co. & the powers of the co. to be exercised in effecting the objects are different things. Powers are not required to be, & ought not to be, specified in the memorandum. The 1908 Act intended that the co., if it be a trading co., should by its memorandum define the trade, not that it should specify the various acts which it should be within the power of the co. to do in carrying on the trade. The third schedule of the Act contains model forms of memoranda of assocn. These ought to be followed. Sect. 118, sub-sect. 1, enacts that these forms "or forms as near thereto as circumstances admit" shall be used in all matters to which those forms refer. There has grown up a pernicious practice of registering memoranda of assocn. which, under the clause relating to objects, contain paragraph after paragraph not specifying or delimiting the proposed trade or purpose, but confusing power with purpose & indicating every class of act which the corpn. is to have power to do. Such a memorandum is not, I think, a compliance with the Act.

The Act throws upon the registrar a great responsibility when it provides, as it does, that his certificate of incorporation "shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of this Act in respect of registration & of matters precedent & incidental thereto have been complied with." Before registering a memorandum of assocn. the registrar ought to consider whether the requirements of the Act have been complied with & to refuse registration if he conceives that they have not, bearing in mind that if he does not take that course he may put the ct. in the position in which your Lordships find yourselves in the present case — a position in which you must assume that all requirements in respect of matters precedent & incidental to registration have been complied with & confine yourselves to the construction of the document (LORD WRENBURY). — *COTMAN v. 295. — Legal rights in property.—Colliery cos. in any county of England may lawfully be carried on, without registration, on the cost-book principle.

If the co. is incorporated, it must be by a writing

under the statute made within a few years past, & a trade corp'n. under the statute differs from a corp'n. for public purposes & from a corp'n. by prescription, so that evidence admissible to prove the existence of such last-mentioned corpns. would not necessarily be admissible to prove a modern charter or a recent registration.

A co. intending to be registered may fail to fulfil some of the conditions required for a valid registration, & though they would violate 1862 Act by carrying on business without registration, the directors & shareholders would not lose their legal rights as owners of property, neither would that property be placed out of the protection of the law, because the imperfect registration failed to make them a corp'n.—R. v. 302. ——— Invalid alteration of memorandum.]—The memorandum of assocn. of a co., when brought to the office of the registrar of joint stock cos. for registration, was objected to by him as going beyond the prospectus, whereupon the bearer of it then & there, without any communication with the persons who had signed it, made alterations to remove the objections of the registrar, who at once registered it in the altered form:—Held: (1) although the conduct of the registrar, in knowingly registering a document which had been thus altered, was most censurable, the co. was duly constituted, the certificate of registration being, under 1862 Act, s. 18, conclusive evidence that the requisitions of the Act had been complied with; (2) a person who before the registration of a co. applies for shares on the faith of a prospectus ought to be treated as having become aware of any variations between the prospectus & memorandum at the earliest practicable time.

Therefore, where the prospectus of a co. stated that copies of the memorandum & arts. of assocn. could be seen at the office of the solrs. of the co., P., who applied for shares on June 27, 1865, the day on which the co. was registered, received an allotment on July 18, 1865, received a dividend on his shares in Feb. 1866, & took out a summons to have his name removed from the register of shareholders of the co. in Jan. 1867, upon the ground of a material variation between the memorandum of assocn. & the prospectus, on the faith of which he applied for his shares, was held to be too late in his appln., although he swore that he was, until Dec. 1866, more than six months after an order had been made to wind up the co., ignorant of the variation of which he complained.

Where the memorandum & arts. of assocn. are not in existence at the time of appln., I think that, at the very latest, when he [the appct. for shares] receives his allotment of shares, he ought to satisfy himself that there is nothing in the memorandum or arts. of assocn. to which he desires to make any objection (CAIRNS, L.J.).

310. ———.]—The Secular Society, Ltd., was registered as a co. limited by guarantees under 1862 to 1893 Acts. The main object of the co., as stated in its memorandum of assocn., was "to promote . . . the principle that human conduct should be based upon natural knowledge, & not upon supernatural belief, & that human welfare in this world is the proper end of all thought & action":—Held: assuming that this object involved a denial of Christianity, (1) it was not criminal, inasmuch as the propagation of anti-Christian doctrines, apart from scurrility or profanity, did not constitute the offence of blasphemy; & (2) it was not illegal in the sense of rendering the co. incapable in law of acquiring property by gift, & a bequest "upon trust for the Secular Society, Ltd." was valid.

It was argued before us that the society could not have been properly incorporated if its objects were illegal, & that as the certificate is conclusive to show that the co. is one authorised to be registered & duly registered, it follows that it cannot for any purpose be contended that the objects are illegal. In my opinion this argument is an attempt to extend the effect of these enactments beyond their fair meaning & manifest object. What the Legislature was dealing with was the validity of the incorporation, & it is for the purpose of incorporation, & for this purpose only, that the certificate is made conclusive (LORD FINLAY, C.).

By [1908 Act, s. 17] the society's certificate of registration is made conclusive evidence that the society was an association authorised to be registered—that is, an association of not less than seven persons associated together for a lawful purpose. The section does not mean that all or any of the objects specified in the memorandum, if otherwise illegal, would be rendered legal by the certificate. On the contrary, if the directors of the society applied its funds for an illegal object they would be guilty of misfeasance & liable to replace the money, even if the object for which the money had been applied were expressly authorised by the memorandum. The section does, however, preclude all His Majesty's lieges from going behind the certificate or from alleging that the society is not a corporate body with the status & capacity conferred by the Acts (LORD PARKER OF WADDINGTON).

Even if all the objects of the co. were illegal it would not follow that while the certificate of incorporation remained unrevoked the co. would be unable to receive money. If, by oversight, or by mistake a co. were incorporated for wholly illegal objects, the right course to follow, where its capacity to receive money was questioned in legal proceedings, would be to direct an adjournment till proper steps had been taken to revoke the incorporation (LORD BUCKMASTER).—*BOWMAN v. SUB-SECT. 3.—CONSTRUCTION.

322. Memorandum—General rule of construction.—I am called upon to construe this memorandum & also the articles of assocn. In doing so I must bear in mind the well established rule of law that no extension of the terms of the memorandum of assocn. can be permitted, that beyond those terms duly construed no lawful authority exists & nothing can be done under or in relation to the subject comprehended in the instrument. I wholly repudiate the notion that I am at liberty to adopt what has sometimes been called a "liberal construction." I have no more right to do that on the one hand than I am at liberty on the other hand to adopt a more rigorous or more strict construction than the express stipulations of the instrument require. What the law requires & what I am called upon to do is to put a just construction, & no other, upon these instruments (BACON, V.-C.).—LONDON FINANCIAL ASSOCN. v. KELK (1884), 26 Ch. D. 107; 53 L. 326. ———— Effect of name of company.—The name of a co. is important in construing the objects defined in the memorandum of assocn.

A co. was registered under the name of the Mid-Northamptonshire Bank, Ltd. In addition to wide & general objects, the memorandum of assocn. stated particularly numerous objects of diverse character in fifteen paragraphs. The first three paragraphs related to banking, discounting, & money-lending, & borrowing respectively; others referred to purchasing & developing land, investing & dealing in shares & securities, & promoting cos. The co. commenced business as a country bank in Northamptonshire, with an office in London. After a short time its name was changed to the Crown Bank, Ltd.; it gave up its country offices, ceased to do banking business, & carried on in London, in addition to some land speculation & business connected with promoting a foreign co., the business of investing in shares & securities. On a petition by a shareholder to wind up the co. on the ground that its main objects had failed:—Held: the co. was not carrying on a business authorised by the memorandum of assocn., & it was just & equitable that the co. should be wound up.—Re CROWN BANK (1890), 44 Ch. stated by its memorandum of assocn. to be "to borrow money by the issue of debentures, debenture stocks, bonds, mortgages, obligations, & other securities for money upon all or any part of the co.'s undertakings, revenues, & property, including uncalled capital." By the contemporaneous arts. of assocn. the directors were empowered to borrow for the purposes of the co. to a limited amount, & to "raise or secure the repayment of such moneys in such manner & upon such terms & conditions in all respects as they think fit, & in particular, but without prejudice to such generality, by the issue of debentures of the co. charged upon all or any part of the property of the co., including the uncalled capital thereof":—Held: although prima facie the word "issue," as used in the memorandum, suggested a written security, yet, having regard to the fact that some of the securities therein mentioned were not necessarily required to be in writing, the word was ambiguous in its meaning; the memorandum & articles being contemporaneous documents, the latter might be looked at to interpret the former.—Re TILBURY PORTLAND CEMENT CO., LTD. (1893), 62 L. 330. — Modification by articles—Confined to matter contained in 1862 Act, s. 12.]—By the memorandum of assocn. of a co. limited by shares it was stated that the objects of the co. were the cultivation of lands in Ireland & other similar purposes there specified, & to do all such other things as the co. might deem incidental or conducive to the attainment of any of these objects, & that the capital of the co. was £1,050,000, divided into 140,000 A shares of £5 each, & 3,500 B shares of £100 each. By the 8th of the contemporaneous arts. of assocn. it was provided that the capital produced by the issue of B shares should be invested, & that the income, & so far as necessary the capital, should be applied so as to make good to the holders of A shares a preferential dividend of £5 per cent. on the amounts paid up on the A shares. Subject to this the B fund was to belong to the owners of B shares. The profits of the co., after paying the £5 per cent. dividend to the A shareholders were to be applied in payment of a non-cumulative dividend of £5 per cent. to the B shareholders, & the surplus was to be divided rateably between the A shareholders & the B shareholders according to the amounts paid up on their respective shares:—Held: art. 8 was invalid, as it purported to make the B capital applicable to purposes not within the objects of the co. as defined by the memorandum of assocn., & in a way not incidental or conducive to the attainment of those objects, & the directors must be restrained from acting upon it. The arts. of assocn. of a co. cannot, except in the cases provided for by 1862 Act, s. 12, modify the memorandum of assocn. in any of the particulars required by the Act to be stated in the memorandum.

In 1872 the co. passed special resolutions, altering the priority as between the preference & ordinary shares. The resolutions were acted upon until 1883, dividends were from time to time paid in accordance with them, & no question as to their validity was raised by any of the shareholders. In 1883 the co. passed a resolution restoring the appln. of the capital as originally prescribed by the memorandum of assocn.:—Held: assuming the resolutions of 1872 to have been ratified by every member of the co., as to which there was not sufficient evidence, yet the resolutions were invalid, inasmuch as they altered a condition contained in the memorandum of assocn. within 1862 Act, s. 12, & therefore the net revenue should be applied in the manner prescribed by the memorandum.—ASHBURY v.

The leading object of the co., as stated in the proposed memorandum, was to purchase, hire or build ships, & employ them in carrying passengers, goods, etc., between Leith & London. In addition to the leading object, twenty-one other objects were mentioned & the last art. provided that the various businesses or objects specified shall be regarded as independent objects & in no wise restricted by reference to the name of the co. or to the businesses or objects contained in any other paragraph.

341. Whether constitute contract—General rule.]

—The true interpretation of the apparently conflicting decisions & dicta on sect. 16 of 1862 Act, re-enacted by sect. 14 (1) of 1908 Act, is that though arts. of assocn. can neither constitute a contract between a co. & an outsider nor give any individual member special contractual rights beyond those of the members generally, they do in fact constitute a contract between a co. & its members in respect of their ordinary rights as members.

342. — In writing—1867 Act, s. 25.]—By the arts. of assocn. of a mining co. it was provided that the co. should, immediately after incorporation, enter into an agreement with the vendor of the mine for the purchase of the mine; the price to be £2,000 in cash, & 3,200 fully-paid shares to be allotted to the vendor or his nominees. The arts. were signed by the vendor & six other persons, & were duly registered.

The directors allotted the 3,200 shares to the vendor or his nominees, & for a short time worked the mine, but no further agreement was made with the vendor. The co. was then ordered to be wound up. A firm to whom 10 of the vendor's shares were allotted had requested that they might be registered in the name of one of the members of the firm, which was done; & he was afterwards placed on the list as a contributory in respect of 10 shares not fully-paid:—Held: the arts. of assocn. did not constitute a contract in writing between the vendor & the co. within the above Act, & the 10 shares could not be considered as fully-paid.—Re TAVARONE MINING CO., PRITCHARD'S CASE (1873), 8 Ch. e. — *Petition to confirm memorandum—Unlimited company becoming limited—Registration necessary to give jurisdiction.]—*A co. registered as an unlimited co., passed a special resolution that the co. should be registered as a limited co., & approving a memorandum of assocn. altering its existing constitution. The memorandum was headed "Company Limited by Shares"; it set forth the name of the co. as concluding with the word "Limited"; & it expressly provided "The liability of the shareholders is limited." In a petition for confirmation of this memorandum:—Held: the petition was premature; the co. must be registered as a limited co. before the ct. could confirm a memorandum embodying the limitation of liability.—ROYAL EXCHANGE BUILDINGS, GLASGOW, PROPRIETORS, [1911] S. C. 1337.—SCOT.

344. —.]—The accounts of a co. showed an excess of receipts over expenditure to a large amount which was said to be available for payment of a dividend, but this profit had been applied in extending the co.'s works, being purposes for which the capital & not the revenue of the co. was applicable. An ordinary general meeting called to receive a report of the directors, "to declare a dividend & to transact the ordinary business of the co.," confirmed certain resolutions passed by the board of directors, the effect of which was to authorise the raising of further capital, & the payment of the dividends already earned, not in cash, but by means of the issue to the shareholders entitled to the dividends of debentures charged on the co.'s property to the amount of the dividends. The arts. of assocn. did not authorise the payment of dividends in this manner. On motion by a dissentient shareholder for an injunction to restrain the co. from paying the dividends by means of debentures:—Held: as the arts. constitute not merely a contract between the shareholders & the co., but between each individual shareholder & every other, & as by these arts. the payment of dividends should be in cash, & no steps had been taken under sect. 50 of 1862 Act, to alter the arts. so as to enable the payment to be made in the manner proposed, it was beyond the power of the majority of the shareholders present at a general meeting to bind the minority to accept payment of their dividends otherwise than in cash.—WOOD v. ODESSA WATERWORKS CO. (1889), 42 Ch. D. 636; 58 L. J. Ch. 628; 37 W. R. 733; 5 T. L. R. 596; 1 Meg. 265.

The question is, what was the effect of those articles? It is agreed by them that £50 per annum shall be given to the director, & that amounts to a contract between the director & the co. (MARTIN, B.)—ORTON v. CLEVELAND FIRE BRICK & POTTERY CO., LTD. (1865), 3 H. & C. 868; 11 Jur. N. S. 531; 13 W. R. 869; 159 E. R. 776.

346. —.]—A co. whose arts. of assocn. provided that the directors' remuneration should be at a certain rate, altered these arts. by special resolution, which purported to make the altered rate of remuneration effective from a date prior to the special resolution:—Held: though the arts. did not constitute a contract between the co. & the directors but only pointed out the terms on which the directors were serving, & though these terms could be altered by a special resolution altering the arts., still the alteration could have effect only for the future, & the directors were entitled to remuneration at the old rate until the arts. were altered.

The arts. do not themselves constitute a contract, they are merely the regulations by which provision is made for the way the business of the co. is to be carried on. A person who acts as director with those arts. before him enters into a contract with the co. to serve as a director, the remuneration to be at the rate contemplated by the arts. The person who does this has before him, as one of the stipulations of the contract, that it shall be possible for his employer to alter the terms upon which he is to serve, in which case he would have the option of continuing to serve, if he thought proper, at the reduced rate of remuneration. Those terms, however, could be altered only as to the future. In so far as the contract on those terms had already been carried into effect, it is incapable of alteration by the co. (LORD HALSBURY, C.).

It would be absurd to hold that one of the parties to a contract could alter it as to service already performed under it. The co. has power to alter the arts., but the directors would be entitled to their salary at the rate originally stated in the arts. up to the time the arts. were altered (LORD ESHER, M.R.)—*SWABEY v. 347. —.]—N. was one of the seven first directors of a limited co., the arts. of assocn. of which provided as follows: "The qualification of a director shall be the holding of shares of the co. of the nominal value of £250. A first director may act before acquiring his qualification, but shall in any case acquire the same within one month from his appointment, & unless he shall do so, he shall be deemed to have agreed to take the said shares from the co. & the same shall be forthwith allotted to him accordingly. The board shall be entitled to receive by way of remuneration in each year £5,000, to be divided among the directors in such proportions as they shall from time to time agree, or in default of agreement, equally. The office of a director shall be vacated if he cease to hold the due qualification."

The co. was wound up within a year & a half of its incorporation. During that time N. attended meetings of the board of directors, but never acquired any qualification shares. In an action by N.'s assignee for the remuneration due to N.:—Held: (1) N. had not vacated the office of director, as he could not be said to have ceased to hold a qualification which in fact he never possessed; (2) the contracts implied by the arts.—on the part of N. to take the qualification shares, & on the part of the co. to pay remuneration—were not interdependent, & N. having acted as director, was entitled to remuneration; (3) the remuneration was not apportionable, & could not be claimed except for a whole year.—*SALTON v. By the arts. of assocn. it was provided that deft. should be managing director for five years at the yearly salary mentioned in the agreement, payable quarterly. Afterwards the co. by a written instrument adopted the agreement between the promoter & deft. Deft., on behalf of the co., contracted for the construction of certain fishing-smacks, & unknown to the co., took a commission from the ship-builders on the contract. Several months afterwards pltf. co., at an extraordinary meeting, passed a resolution dismissing deft. from his office on the ground of other alleged acts of misconduct, which they were not able to substantiate in the action, being at that time ignorant of his receipt of the commission from the shipbuilders. Deft. was a shareholder in an ice co. & a fish-carrying co., which paid, in addition to the ordinary dividends, bonuses to shareholders who were owners of fishing-smacks & who employed the cos. in supplying ice & carrying for them. Deft. employed these cos. in respect of pltf.'s smacks, & received bonuses as if the smacks were his own. Pltf. co. brought an action against deft. for an account of commissions & bonuses received by him, & for damages for alleged breaches of duty; & deft. counterclaimed for wrongful dismissal & for the salary for the quarter which had expired before his dismissal:—Held: (1) the receipt of a commission from the shipbuilding co. was good ground for dismissal, although it was not discovered till after the dismissal had taken place, & although it happened several months previously, & might have been an isolated act; (2) deft. must account to pltf. for the bonuses received from the ice & carrying co., as they had been paid in respect of pltf.'s smacks, although pltf. could not themselves have received the bonuses, not being shareholders of the cos.; (3) the contract between pltf. & deft. was contained in the agreement between the promoter & deft. as adopted by the co., & was not modified by the arts. of assocn.; (4) the salary was consequently payable yearly & not quarterly, & therefore, deft. having been dismissed for misconduct, was not entitled to any part of the unpaid salary for the current year of his service. Qu.: if pltf. co. had not formally adopted the agreement by a separate instrument, whether the arts. might not have been taken as evidence that the parties had agreed to a modification of the agreement by making the payment of the salary quarterly.—BOSTON DEEP SEA FISHING & ICE CO. v. 355. — Undisclosed principal—Partner of member.]—T., the manager & part owner of a ship became a member of a mutual insurance assocn., & took out a policy with such assocn. in respect of the ship. The arts. of assocn. gave power to the committee, in order to provide funds for the business of the assocn. from time to time to direct sums to be paid by the members rateably. By the policy which was made by the assocn. under their seal, the assocn. agreed with T., that the members thereof should according to the arts. of assocn. pay & make good losses & damages to the ship occasioned by the risks insured against, subject to a proviso that the assocn. should be liable only to the extent of so much of the funds as they were able to recover from the members liable for the same & which were applicable for the purpose of paying claims under the policy. i. In General.

363. By allotment of directors' qualification shares.]—Before the formation of a co., at a preliminary meeting, certain persons "agreed to hold 100 shares each, & also to execute the arts. & memorandum of assocn., when ready, & act as directors of the co." A few days afterwards they signed the memorandum of assocn. for 21 shares each, & they also signed the arts. of assocn. By two of the clauses of these articles it was provided that the subscribers of the memorandum should be directors, until directors were appointed, & that no shareholder was entitled to be a director unless he held at least 100 shares in the co. The co. was afterwards wound up in bkpcy.:—Held: considering the aforesaid resolution & the arts. of assocn., they were liable to be placed on the list of contributories in respect of 100 shares each, in which number, however, the 21 shares for which they had subscribed the memorandum of assocn. would be included.—Re GREAT NORTHERN & MIDLAND COAL Co., LTD., CURRIE'S CASE (1863), 3 De G. (2) The same rules as to false or deceptive representations which are applicable to contracts between individuals are also applicable to contracts between an individual & a co., though allowance must be made for exaggerations. No mis-statement or concealment of any material facts or circumstances ought to be permitted in a prospectus issued to invite persons to become shareholders in a projected co. The public are, in such a case, entitled to have the same opportunity of judging of everything material to a knowledge of the true character of the undertaking as the promoters themselves possess.

(3) The expression of a fact will often amount to misrepresentation.

(4) Where there has been fraudulent misrepresentation, or wilful concealment of facts, by which a person has been induced to enter into a contract, it is no answer to his claim to be relieved from it, that he might have known the truth by proper inquiry.

(5) The phrase "available capital of the co." is not a true, but is a deceptive description of capital which may be raised under the borrowing powers conferred upon directors.

(6) Where a prospectus described a contract for the construction of a line of railway as entered into at "a price considerably within the available capital of the co.," & the facts were, that from the nominal capital of £500,000 were to be deducted £50,000 as the price of purchasing the concession to make the railway, & the contract price for making it was £420,000, the representation was held to be untrue & deceptive.

(7) A prospectus of a railway co. stated that "the engineer's report, maps, plans, etc., may be inspected, & further information obtained at the offices of the co." An applt. for shares signed the printed form of appln. in which as usual, it was stated that he agreed to be bound by the conditions & regulations contained in the memorandum & arts. of assocn. An examination of all these papers would have afforded him the information, the want of which he alleged as a ground for rescinding his contract. Trusting to the representations he did not examine all:—Held: his neglect to do so was no answer to his demand to be relieved from the contract.

(8) A bill was filed to rescind the contract on the ground of there having been misrepresentations of facts. Relief was given in the ct. below on only some of the alleged grounds. An appeal was brought against the decree:—Held: it was open to resp. to sustain the decree on any or all of the grounds stated in his bill.

(9) A prospectus omitted to state that a deposit of £20,000 out of a capital of £500,000, had been made, & was liable to forfeiture if the works were not commenced by a certain day:—Held: this was no ground for a charge of improper concealment.

(10) A grant from a foreign govt. of the right to make a railroad reserved to the concessionnaires a certain number of shares. This was not mentioned in the prospectus. The concessionnaires having sold their rights to the co.:—Held: this was no improper omission.

(11) The prospectus stated that the foreign govt. had promised a free grant of 30,000 acres to the contractors of the railroad, but it omitted the qualification that the grant only extended to lands in the province through which the lines should pass not belonging to private individuals:—Held: not to be an unfair statement, because such a qualification must be implied.

(12) For the same reason, a statement was held to be not unfair, that the foreign govt. had guaranteed £9 per cent. on the money expended on the railroad, though the qualification was omitted that the guarantee was limited to the event of the railroad not producing that amount without default of the co.

(13) A statement that the contractor agreed to pay £2 10s. per cent. on paid-up capital, but which omitted to mention that his liability was limited to £20,000:—Held: to be an improper statement.

(14) Seem: several mis-statements taken together may give a right to relief, which none of them standing alone would have been sufficient to warrant.—CENTRAL RY. CO. —Notice of registered deed of settlement.—By the deed of settlement of a joint stock company, the directors were authorised to borrow, under the common seal of the company, such sums as should from time to time, by a resolution passed at a general meeting of the company be authorised to be borrowed, not to exceed a certain sum. At a general meeting the directors were authorised to borrow such sums & at such interest for such periods as they might deem expedient, in accordance with the provisions of the deed of settlement & the Act of Parliament. The directors having borrowed £1,000 on bond, under the common seal of the company, it was held, that the company were liable to repay the amount, whether the resolution was or was not a sufficient authority to the directors to borrow, for though parties dealing with joint stock companies are bound to take notice of any limitation of the authority of the directors in the deed of settlement, yet, where the directors, as in this case, have power to borrow, the lenders of the money have a right to presume that the company which put forward their directors as authorised to borrow, have taken every step requisite to empower them to do so.—ROYAL BRITISH BANK v. 407. ———.]—There can be no remedy against a co. registered under 1844 Act, on any contract, in which a director of the co. was a party, & in which he was interested, unless the provisions of sect. 29 have been strictly observed.

A contract by the directors of one co. to purchase the trade of another co. is not binding, unless it is authorised by the deed of settlement of each co., & is made according to its provisions.

Qu. : whether when directors have entered into J.—VOL. IX.

a covenant which is void, their co. can be liable for acts done in consequence of such covenant.

The legislature devised the plan of incorporating cos. in a manner unknown to the common law, with special powers of management & liabilities, providing at the same time that all the world should have notice who were the persons authorised to bind all the shareholders by requiring the co-partnership deed to be registered, certified by the directors, & accessible to all, & besides including some clauses as to the managers in 1844 Act, s. 7, etc. All persons therefore must take notice of the deed & the provisions of the Act. If they do not choose to acquaint themselves with the powers of the directors, it is their own fault; & if they give credit to any unauthorised persons, they must be contented to look to them only, & not to the co. at large. The stipulations of the deed which restrict & regulate their authority oblige those who deal with the co.; & the directors can make no contract so as to bind the whole body of shareholders, for whose protection the rules are made, unless they are strictly complied with. The contract binds the persons making it, but no one else. Those provisions which give to the directors discretionary powers of management do not affect strangers, & the co. is bound by the exercise of the discretion which they have consented to give. Other stipulations are directory merely, & do not constitute conditions to the exercise of the power, but they form the subject of an action against the directors for the breach of their contracts expressed or implied in the deed. The great body of shareholders, for whose protection these limitations of authority are provided, cannot be affected unless they are complied with. They can act & contract only through their directors, & the acts of the individual shareholders have no effect whatever on the co. at large (LORD WENSLEYDALE).—ERNEST v. NICHOLLS (1857), 6 H. SUB-SECT. 8.—VALIDITY.

A. Memorandum.

411. Validity of objects—Purchase of company's own shares.]—A co. incorporated under the Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), was empowered by its memorandum of assocn. to acquire & carry on a particular manufacturing business, & any other businesses which the co. might consider to be in any way conducive or auxiliary thereto or in any way connected therewith. The arts. of assocn. purported to authorise the co. to purchase its own shares. The co. bought & partly paid for certain shares of one of its members. On a claim made in the winding-up of the co. by the member for the balance of the purchase-money:—Held: the purchase was void because it was a trafficking in shares not within the objects of the co. as defined by the memorandum, & because such a purchase, even if it had been expressly authorised by the memorandum, was not a "lawful object" for which the co. could have been incorporated under the Cos. 1862 Act, & also was a mode of reducing capital impliedly prohibited by the 1867 & 1877 Acts.—TREVOR v. B. Articles.

(a) In General.

414. Articles conforming in principle with Table A.]—The directors of a co. limited by shares may receive payment from a shareholder of any amounts remaining unpaid on his shares, & may pay out of capital interest on sums so paid up in advance of calls, either under Table A of 1862 Act, if applicable, or under provisions to the same effect in the co.'s arts. of assocn., provided they do so in good faith, & in the honest exercise of the discretion confided to directors.

Whatever might have been argued with reference to what has been called the general law without Table A, or without that portion of it to which reference has been made, I confess I do not think it very material to consider; because the insertion of Table A with the 7th sect., giving a sanction by the Legislature to an arrangement which is exactly the same as the present arrangement in principle, & indeed almost in words, seems to me to remove all doubt whatever from this matter. Whatever may be the meaning of it, or whatever cause the Legislature may have had for placing it there, there it is, & to argue that it is ultra vires to do that which the Legislature has expressly sanctioned in the example it has cluding the payment of directors' salaries, the profits of the company shall be applied" in payments to shareholders:—Held: Article 12 was inconsistent with clause 99 of Table A & therefore excluded it by implication.—PATERSON v. PATERSON & SONS, LTD., [1917] S. C. (H. L.) 13.—SCOT.

415. Provision for calls on shareholders—In excess of capital stated in memorandum—Though shares fully-paid.]—The P. Co. was registered as a co. with limited liability under 1862 Act. The memorandum of assocn. stated the capital to be £100,000, divided into 100 shares of £1,000 each. All these were allotted, & had been fully paid-up. The co.'s arts. of assocn. provided that in case increased funds should be necessary for the purpose of the undertaking, the same, to an extent not exceeding £200 per share, should be contributed by the holders for the time being of the 100 shares rateably in proportion to the number of their shares, & that such increased funds should be treated as a debt from the co. to be repaid with interest previous to the division of any profits at such rate of interest & in such manner as the committee might think fit. Increased funds became necessary for the purpose of the undertaking & thereupon a resolution was duly made by the proper representatives of the co., that in accordance with the above arts. a call of £200 per share be made; that the amount be treated as a debt from the co. to be repaid with interest at the rate of 7½ per cent. previous to the division of any profits. This resolution was duly notified to deft., who at the time was the registered holder of four shares in the co. Deft. refused to contribute any money which he was thus called upon to contribute to the co., & thereupon this action was brought to enforce the payment of £200 per share be deft. as a debt due from him to the co.—as a member thereof—under 1862 Act, s. 16:—Held: (1) this mode of raising contributions from the shareholders by way of loan was not an alteration made by the co. in the conditions, as to the amount & limit of its capital, contained in its memorandum of assocn., so as to be illegal within 1862 Act, s. 12; (2) the passing & service of the above resolution made the sum of £200 per share payable by the shareholders, & recoverable from them by the co. by action under 1862 Act, ss. 16 & 17, as a debt due from the members to the co. in the nature of a specialty debt.—PENINSULAR CO., LTD. v. FLEMING (1872), 27 L. T. 93.

416. Restraint of right of action.]—Defts. were a limited co., for the mutual insurance of ships belonging to members. In Dec. 1868, pltf. became equitable mortgagee of the ship H., D. being registered owner. No copy of the rules were ever given to pltf., & he had no knowledge of the provisions until after the loss of the vessel:—Held: in the Ct. of Queen's Bench (1) the policy sufficiently specified the particular risk or adventure within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 23, s. 7; (2) defts. were precluded from saying pltf., who was the owner of the ship, was not a member of the society, after having accepted an insurance & taken premiums & other payments from him; (3) the fact that pltf. turned his equitable interest into a legal interest after the policy was renewed by him did not bring the case within art. 63; but (4) defts. were entitled to judgment: for the contract was contained in the policy, & any of the arts. applicable; & art. 39 which regulated the manner of the payment under the policy did not exclude the jurisdiction of the courts of law, but made it a condition precedent to bringing an action that the loss of the particular member should have been first decided upon by the directors, subject to the appeal given by art. 84. The Exchequer Chamber reversed the judgment of the Queen's Bench.

By AMPHLETT, B., on the ground that, if the investigation by the directors had been properly conducted the action could not have been maintained; but that the conduct of the directors, by adjudicating against pltf.'s claim without hearing him, or giving him an opportunity of being heard, was not binding on pltf.; & that, under the circumstances, defts. could not take advantage of the wrong done by their agents by setting up as a defence that the determination of the directors in favour of pltf. was a condition precedent to bringing the action, & that an actual loss being admitted, pltf. was entitled to recover the amount. By KELLY, C.B., & BRETT, J., on the ground that such of the arts. as were applicable must be read with the policy, & that arts. 39, 83, & 84 were intended to prevent the insured from maintaining any action or suit at all in the ordinary cts. in respect of any dispute arising on the policy; & that therefore the arts. were invalid, & did not prevent pltf. from maintaining his action. ARCHIBALD, J. & POLLOCK, B., were of opinion that the judgment ought to be affirmed on the ground taken by the Queen's Bench.—EDWARDS v. ABERAYRON MUTUAL SHIP INSURANCE SOCIETY (1876), 1 Q. B. 418. Exclusion of power to alter articles.]—A co. cannot contract itself out of the provisions of 1862 Act, s. 50, by a clause in its arts. excepting any regulation contained in the arts. from the operation of the section, & a resolution of a general meeting of the co. to alter or modify such regulation will be valid.—*WALKER v. 419. Power to allot unallotted shares among shareholders—Without further payment.]—(1) After a resolution has been passed for winding-up a co. voluntarily, a shareholder cannot, as a general rule, obtain a compulsory order for winding-up, or an order for continuing the voluntary winding-up under supervision. The only exceptions to the rule are where the resolution has been passed fraudulently, or where creditors appear to support the petition.

(2) By the arts. of assocn. of a limited co. the directors were authorised, when it should appear to them that the capital for the time being subscribed was sufficient for the purposes of the co.,

to allot the remaining unallotted shares among the shareholders in proportion to the number of shares then held by them, without receiving any money for them. When shares to the amount of one-fourth of the nominal capital had been allotted & paid-up, the directors allotted the remaining three-fourths, as fully paid-up shares, among the existing shareholders without further consideration, & petitioner became a purchaser of some of the shares in the market. The co. passed a resolution for a voluntary winding-up, & afterwards petitioner presented a petition for a compulsory winding-up:—Held: the provision in the arts. was highly improper; but if it amounted to a fraud it was a fraud upon petitioner in his individual capacity as purchaser of the shares, & was not committed by or upon the co., & therefore, it was not within the scope of the Winding-up Acts to give relief in respect thereof. The petition for winding-up was accordingly dismissed.

(3) Held: (per BRAMWELL, L.J.), if the alleged fraud could be proved, the guilty parties could be indicted for conspiracy.—Re GOLD CO. (1879), 11 Ch. D. 701; 48 L. J. Ch. 281; 40 L. T. 5; 43 J. P. 652; 27 W. R. 341, C. A.

420. Purchase of company's own shares.]—The memorandum of an ordinary coal co. contained the usual powers, & the general clause at the end of its powers "to do all things conducive to the attainment of the above objects." The memorandum contained no power authorising the co. to purchase its own shares. The arts. of assocn. expressly authorised the purchase by the co. of its own shares. The vendor to the co. had entered into an arrangement with it, by which the co. was to purchase on certain terms certain shares issued to him. The transaction was carried out perfectly bonâ fide, & the co. was placed on the list of shareholders as owner of the shares. On a summons taken out by the liquidator to have the vendor placed on the list of contributories:—Held: the transaction was valid, & the vendor had effectually ceased to be a member of the co.

A co. limited by shares can purchase its own shares when the arts. of assocn. expressly authorise the purchase, although the memorandum of assocn. contains no such power, provided the arts. are not intended to authorise any trafficking in shares for the purposes of profit.—Re DRONFIELD SILKSTONE COAL CO. (1880), 17 Ch. 422. Compulsory surrender of shares by employee—On termination of service.]—The arts. of assocn. of a co. provided that all employees of the co. other than the managing directors should, on the termination of their service, surrender their shares to the co. The co. was now being wound up, & a cashier who was discharged in 1882 applied for the removal of his name from the list of contributories, & for repayment to him of the value as in 1882 of his shares, & for indemnity against subsequent calls:—Held: no such relief could be granted.—Re WALKER & HACKING, LTD. (1887), 57 L. T. 763.

See, generally, Sect. 26, post.

423. Provision for compulsory transfer of shares.]—A provision in the arts. of assocn. of a co. for the compulsory transfer of shares is neither repugnant to the nature of personal property nor obnoxious to the rule against perpetuity.

The fact that the liability to such compulsory transfer is to arise only in the event of the shareholder's bkpcy., & the fact that the transfer is to be effected at a pre-arranged valuation which may possibly be less than the actual market value of the share at the time of transfer, do not in themselves constitute a fraud upon the bkpcy. law; provided that both these provisions are made without undue preference, & bonâ fide with a view to the successful working of the co.

A share in a co. is not to be regarded as a sum of money settled subject to certain conditions contained in the arts. of assocn.; but is to be regarded as an interest in the co., measured, it is true, for the purposes both of liability & interest, by a certain sum of money, but impressed also from its inception with the various rights & liabilities contained in the contract entered into by means of the arts. of assocn. by all the shareholders inter se, in accordance with 1862 Act, s. 16.

The rule against perpetuity has no application in the case of personal contracts.—BORLAND'S TRUSTEE v. STEEL BROTHERS & CO., LTD., [1901] 1 Ch. 279; 70 L. J. Ch. 51; 47 W. R. 120; 17 T. L. R. 45.

But, Seem: a rule protecting the members against information gained by servants being improperly communicated to other members, if reasonably framed, would have been good.—MINERAL WATER BOTTLE EXCHANGE & TRADE PROTECTION SOCIETY v. BOOTH (1887), 36 Ch. D. 465; 57 L. T. 573; 36 W. R. 274, C. A.

The co. resolved upon a voluntary winding-up, & authorised the liquidator to enter into an arrangement for the sale of the business & assets of the co. to a new co.:—Held: the above clause of the arts. did not amount to an "agreement" within 1862 Act, s. 162, so as to deprive a member of the co. who dissented from the arrangement of his right under that section to have the value of his interest in the co. determined by arbitration.

Pltfs., who carried on a competing business, held the minority of the shares, & had voted against the resolution. They brought an action for a declaration that it was invalid as against them:—Held: (1) the co. had power under 1908 Act, s. 13, to introduce into its altered arts. anything that might have been included in its original arts., provided that the alteration was made bonâ fide for the benefit of the co. as a whole; (2) a power to expel a shareholder by buying him out was valid in the case of original arts., & could therefore be included in altered arts., subject to the same limitation.—SIDEBOTTOM v. 436. Liability of shareholders limited by memorandum—Wider liability created by articles.]—(1) By the memorandum of assocn. of a co. formed under 1856 Act, the liability was limited to £10 per share. By the arts. of assocn. it was provided as regarded certain debts for which certain shareholders had given promissory notes, that if the co. should be called upon to pay them, & should not have funds in hand applicable to the payment, each shareholder should contribute & pay to the co. as a debt due to the co., a proportionate amount according to the number of shares held by him:—Held: though the memorandum of assocn. limited the extent of liability as regarded creditors outside the co., there was nothing in the above Act preventing the shareholders inter se from contracting to make themselves liable to a greater amount; the provision in the arts. of assocn. constituted such a contract; & consequently that holders of fully paid-up shares might be put on the list of contributories for the purpose of having a call made to meet the liability so incurred.

of the co. or by special resolution, & so that the respective classes of shares might have to be subject to such preference, guarantees & restrictions, if any, as might be prescribed by the arts. & special resolution. The arts. contained no provisions as to the division of shares into different classes. Under the memorandum 600 ordinary & 208 preference shares were allotted & fully paid up. By a special resolution of the co. passed & confirmed at meetings held on 1st & 16th March, 1892, it was provided "that the pre-

437. ———.]—A co. was formed under 1856 Act, with a capital of £160,000 divided into £10 shares, & the memorandum stated that the liability of the shareholders was limited. The arts. provided that certain debts of specified amount which had been incurred by six of the shareholders in forming the co. should be paid by the co., & that if the co. should not have sufficient funds to pay them, each shareholder for the time being should contribute & pay to the co. a proportionate amount of those debts according to the number of shares of each shareholder. The shares were not all allotted. The co. having been ordered to be wound up:—Held: (1) the agreement to contribute to these debts was legal & could be enforced by a call, though the shares had been fully paid up; (2) each shareholder must contribute a sum bearing to the whole of the debts the same proportion as the number of his shares bore to the whole number actually allotted; (3) the six shareholders were not entitled to interest upon large sums which they had paid for interest on the debts; (4) no shareholder was liable to pay any further proportion in consequence of the inability of any other shareholder to pay his proportion.—

SECT. 8.—THE PROSPECTUS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

439. Purpose of.]—(1) The proper purpose of a prospectus of an intended co. is to invite persons have equal rights on the distribution of capital & (2) it was a violation of the contract made by the co. with the ordinary shareholders who had taken shares prior to its date.—MILFORD HAVEN FISHING CO. v. JONES (1895), 22 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 577; 32 Sc. L. R. 449; 2 S. L. T. 562.—SCOT.

PART III. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 1.

k. Nature of—Basis of contract.]—The prospectus is the basis for the contract for shares, & the co. by issuing to become allottees of the shares, or original shareholders in the co. When it has performed this office it is exhausted.

A prospectus of an intended co. ought not to misrepresent actual & material facts, or to conceal facts material to be known, the misrepresentation or concealment of which may improperly influence & mislead the mind of the reader, for if he is thereby deceived into becoming an allottee of shares, & in consequence, suffers loss, he is entitled to proceed against those who had thus misled him. But the responsibility of directors who issue a prospectus for an intended co. misrepresenting actual & material facts, or concealing facts material to be known, does not, as of course, follow the shares on their transfer from an allottee to his vendee. In order that this third person, the vendee, should be enabled to maintain any proceeding at law, or in equity, against the directors in respect of losses occasioned by his belief in the prospectus & his consequent procurement of shares, he must show some direct connection between them & himself in the communication of the prospectus, & its influence upon his conduct in becoming an allottee.

(2) The rule as to delay in seeking for compensation for losses thus occasioned is, in common law proceedings, that which is prescribed by Stat. Limitations, & the rule in equity follows by analogy that of the law. Where, therefore, a person became possessed of shares in Oct., 1865, & the co. was ordered in June, 1866, to be wound up, & he contested his liability to be made a contributory, but was, in July, 1867, declared liable as such, & in Mar., 1868, filed his bill against the directors to be indemnified by them:—Held: delay could not be set up as an answer to the suit.

The proceeding in such a case is like an action at law for deceit—the same principle being applicable in such a matter both at law & in equity—& is therefore of a personal character, & the estate of a deceased director not being alleged & proved to have received benefit from the deceit, his exors. cannot be made liable to compensate the person who asserts that he has been injured by it.

(3) One of the projectors of a co. set up as a defence that he had not taken part in preparing or issuing the prospectus; he knew, however, all that the other directors knew, consented to become a director of the co., signed the memorandum & arts. of assocn., & shares were appropriated to him:—Held: under these circumstances he could not avail himself of this defence.

Mere non-disclosure of facts, unless such non-disclosure had the effect of making the disclosed facts absolutely false, would not be sufficient to sustain a proceeding which was really in the nature of an action for misrepresentation (LORD CAIRNS).

(4) A prospectus for an intended co. was prepared by the projectors, the directors of the co., & issued by them to the public; it contained misrepresentations of facts, facts known to those who issued it, & it also concealed the existence of a deed, which was material to be known, & which, if known, would in all probability have prevented the formation of the co. Being addressed to the whole public, any one might take up the prospectus & appropriate to himself its representations, by applying for an allotment of shares:—Held: when the allotment was completed, the office of the prospectus was exhausted, & a person who had not become an allottee, but was only a subsequent purchaser of shares in the market, was not so connected with the prospectus as to render those who had issued it liable to indemnify him against the losses which he had suffered in consequence of his purchase.—*PEEK v. m. — "Statement" containing untrue particulars.]—A document called a "statement," issued by the co., which contained several untrue representations bearing on the value of the shares, such as that all the earnings would be available for the common stock, & that the superintendent of the co.'s factory had an interest in the co.:—Held: the "statement," as it was "issued for the purpose of being used to promote or aid in the subscription or purchase of" the shares of the co., was a "prospectus" within Companies Act, s. 99.—Mc-

Whether directors bound.]—The prospectus of a co., approved & issued by the directors after the registration of the co., & inviting subscriptions for the preference shares & debenture capital, stated that the directors would take all the ordinary shares which were not taken by the vendors to the co. The vendors, who were two of the directors, & others took all the ordinary shares except 367. No ordinary shares were ever allotted to any of the other directors, & none of those directors was ever placed on the register of shareholders in respect of any ordinary shares. In the winding-up of the co., there being no evidence, except the prospectus, of any agreement between the co. & one of the non-vendor directors that he should take any ordinary shares:—Held: the prospectus was not satisfactory proof of an agreement binding the co. to allot & the director to accept such shares, & he was not liable in respect of any ordinary shares, either on the ground of agreement or on the ground of estoppel.—Re MOORE BROTHERS & CO., LTD., [1899] 1 Ch. 627; 47 W. 446. Prospectus not authorised for publication—Application of 1867 Act, s. 38.]—Pltf., who was an underwriter of shares, sought to recover damages for non-disclosure of the same agreement as that in Cackett v. Keswick, No. 458, post, of Mar. 10, 1899, in the prospectus, but the circumstances were different. On Mar. 13, 1899, pltf. met a friend who mentioned the co. to him & showed him a draft prospectus. He was attracted by the names of M. & K. on the front sheet, but in his evidence he stated that he did not remember reading anything about contracts. He signed an underwriting agreement for 250 shares, & gave a cheque for £62 10s. which was returned to him on Mar. 28, as the directors had decided "not to issue" the prospectus before Easter. Another cheque & a signed application form for those shares were sent before the end of April:—Held: pltf. signed his underwriting agreement & application for shares before any prospectus had been issued to the public. The incorporation took place on May 24, & the prospectus was issued on May 27, & the above sect. was not intended to apply to copies of a prospectus not authorised for publication shown to friends or speculators by way of anticipation of the public. If such persons were deceived they had certain rights, but could not get the benefit of the Act.—BATY v. KESWICK (1901), 85 L. T. 18; 50 W. R. 14; 45 Sol. Jo. 672; *sub nom. CACKETT v. c. — Issue to public generally—Issued by provisional directors—Not adopted by company.—A document was sent to the petr. prior to the formation of the co. by one of six persons named therein as directors of the proposed co. to whom he was personally known & who afterwards became a director, along with a letter advising him to apply for an allotment of shares. 40 copies of the document were similarly distributed by the provisional directors to their business friends, who were asked to place it before their friends & clients. The co. after its formation had not adopted or issued copies of the document. It contained no invitation to take shares. It stated that co. was to be a private co.:—Held: (1) the document was not a prospectus within the meaning of Act of 1900 as it was not issued to the public generally & did not contain an invitation to take shares & (2) the co. not having adopted the document was not responsible for the statements it contained. Opinion that the procedure by summary petn. authorised by sect. 35 of Cos. Act, 1862, was an inappropriate method to try the question.—SLEIGH v. GLASGOW & TRANSVAAL OPTIONS, LTD. (1904), 6 F. (a) Apart from Statute.

447. Remuneration of promoter.]—Upon the establishment of the W. F. Ry., a person who had been instrumental in forming the co., & in procuring the grant from the Belgian govt., obtained from the directors an agreement to pay him a large percentage upon the capital of the co., to allot him 4,000 shares, & to guarantee him a salary of £500 a year as general manager of the co. The directors also allotted to themselves 20,000 shares, & also another 10,000 shares for themselves & the other shareholders in the S. & M. Ry., of which they were also directors. These facts were suppressed in the prospectus they subsequently issued; which, however, did state that they had reserved to themselves a commission of £3 per cent. upon the capital by way of reimbursement for the expenses, liabilities & payments already incurred. Upon a bill by an original shareholder to be relieved from his shares & to obtain payment of his deposit money & calls, with interest, on the ground that he had been induced to take them by the representations made by the prospectus:—Held: the omission to state these facts in the prospectus was not such a misrepresentation or concealment as would induce the ct. to set aside the contract, & the bill was dismissed, with costs.—PULSFORD v. RICHARDS (1853), 17 Beav. 87; 22 L. J. Ch. 559; 22 L. T. O. S. 51; 17 Jur. 865; 1 W. R. 295; 51 E. R. 965.

Before the formation of the co. H. agreed to give S., who afterwards became the chairman of the board of directors, £2,000 worth of paid-up shares, & after the co. was formed he paid the deposit & allotment moneys on the shares taken by S., & several other directors, & gave to C. & W., who afterwards became directors, bills for £10,000, in consideration of their procuring a credit co. to bring out the co. The directors issued a prospectus, which contained no misrepresentations, but did not mention the transactions between H. & the directors:—Held: there was no such suppression of material facts in the prospectus, as to entitle a person who had been induced by it to take shares in the co., to be relieved of his shares. Semble: a shareholder who institutes a suit to be relieved of his shares on the ground of misrepresentation more than three months after he has discovered the misrepresentation, loses his right to relief by his delay.—*HEYMANN v. 458. — Commission for underwriting & use of future chairman's name on prospectus.]—A waiver clause in a prospectus as to the disclosure of contracts under 1867 Act, s. 38, may be enforced against an intending shareholder, if it is honest & not misleading, but not if it fails to give sufficient notice as to the nature of what is to be waived.

The prospectus of a mining co., disclosed an agreement as to the purchase of the produce of the mine, & stated that the directors had guaranteed the subscription of a part of the capital, & would receive a commission for so doing. It then stated that there might also be various trade contracts & business arrangements in addition to the before-mentioned agreement as to the purchase of the produce, & that as these contracts & business arrangements & the above-mentioned underwriting agreements might constitute contracts within 1867 Act, s. 38, appcts. for shares should be deemed to waive the insertion of the particulars of any such contracts, arrangements, or agreements. The prospectus did not disclose a contract between the promoters & K., the future chairman of the co., whereby a firm of which K. was a member was to receive 12,000 fully paid £1 vendor's shares, as to 2,000 for commission for underwriting, & as to 10,000 for the use of the names of K. & the firm on the prospectus, & for adopting the co.:—Held: this was a contract which ought under s. 38 to have been disclosed; & it was not covered by the waiver clause.

Wholly apart from s. 38, in common fairness to the intending investor, to whom a prospectus of this kind is issued, such a contract as we have here to deal with ought to be specified & referred to in the prospectus (ROMER, L.J.).—CAKETT v. KESWICK, [1902] 2 Ch. 456; 71 L. J. Ch. 641; 87 L. T. 11; 51 W. R. 69; 18 T. L. R. 650; 46 Sol. Jo. 600; 9 Mans. 388, C. A.

459. Promoters real vendors.]—The promoters of a co. purchased property for the purpose of selling to the co. when formed. The property was conveyed to a trustee for the promoters nominated by them, & was afterwards by the direction of the promoters conveyed by him to a trustee for the co., who was also nominated by the promoters, they receiving from the co. an increased price on the sale. The promoters also nominated the first directors of the co. & provided the qualification of some of them. The prospectus of the co., which was issued for the purpose of inducing the public to subscribe for its shares, was prepared with the knowledge & privity of the promoters, so that, as the ct. held, they were responsible for it. It did not disclose the fact that the promoters were the real vendors of the property to the co., but, on the contrary, represented the promoters' trustee as the vendor. The co. afterwards went into liquidation. Upon a summons by the liquidator to compel the promoters to account for the profit which they had obtained on the resale of the property:—Held: the promoters as such stood in a fiduciary position towards the persons who were invited to take shares in the co., & it was their duty to disclose to those persons the fact that they were the real vendors to the co.—Re LEEDS & HANLEY THEATRES OF VARIETIES, LTD., [1902] 2 Ch. 809; 72 L. 460. General rule—Material contract.]—A contract required by 1867 Act, s. 38, to be specified in a prospectus means a contract that is "material"—one which whether deterrent or not, an intending investor ought to have an opportunity of considering in order to decide whether to apply for shares or not.

On Sept. 21, 1898, the directors of a newly incorporated co. entered into a contract by letter that a contract, whereby the co. had agreed to acquire the business of K. for 25,000 shares, should show the consideration as 50,000 instead of 25,000 shares & that the promoter should have 25,000 of these shares:—Held: the issue of these 25,000 shares to M. was illegal & could not be ratified by the shareholders.—ROSE v. BRITISH COLUMBIA REFINING CO. (1911), 18 W. L. R. 299.—CAN.

with B. its promoter, confirmed by a resolution of Oct. 1, that, in consideration of his advancing a sum of £14,250, to enable the co. to pay the deposit on its intended purchase of an undertaking introduced by him, & of his taking upon himself the risk of forfeiture of the deposit in the event of non-completion of the purchase, the co. would repay the deposit by a certain day together with £7,500 bonus for such loan. The deposit was then raised by B. & paid to the vendors. Subsequently by a contract, by resolution of the directors, of Oct. 10, 1898, between B. & the directors, upon their giving him assurance that his right to recover proper remuneration for commission on introducing the business of the purchase & raising the necessary deposit should be honourably met at a future meeting of the directors the contract of Sept. 21 was cancelled, & the subject was adjourned to a future meeting of the board. On Oct. 20, 1898, the directors issued a prospectus stating that certain contracts therein specified were the only contracts entered into by the co., no reference being made to either of the 2 contracts of Sept. 21 & Oct. 10, 1898. On the faith of that prospectus pltf. applied for 400 £10 shares in the co., which were duly allotted to him on Oct. 26, 1898, & he paid £1,000 upon them. In Jan. 1900, the co. went into liquidation, & in Dec. 1901, pltf. brought an action against the directors claiming, under 1867 Act, s. 38, to have the prospectus declared fraudulent by reason of the omission of the 2 contracts, with damages:—Held: both contracts were such as were material to be specified in the prospectus, & as the defts. had, even though they might have done so innocently & on legal advice, “knowingly issued” the prospectus containing an “untrue statement,” pltf. had established his case both under 1867 Act, s. 38, & under Directors Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 3 (1); pltf. was entitled to damages, the measure being the difference between the price he paid for the shares & their fair value at the date of allotment.—*BROOME v. 461. “Contract”—Understanding between vendors & directors—For transfer of part of vendor's shares—To directors as promotion-money.]—ARKWRIGHT v. NEWBOLD, No. 145, ante.

462. — May be verbal.]—Pltfs., by one of their directors, who was also their stockbroker, were induced to take shares in deft. co., by means of a prospectus issued by the directors of the deft. co., also defts. to the action, whereby it was stated that the purchase-money paid to the vendors for the co.'s business was £36,000, whereas, in fact, of that sum £6,000 was paid to a promoter, who was in no sense a vendor. Such promotion money was paid under a parol agreement between the true vendor & the promoter, to which no reference was made by the prospectus:—Held: the agreement was such a contract as ought to have been disclosed by the prospectus, as provided by 1867 Act, s. 38, & further, the statement as to the purchase-money was a material misrepresentation, & pltf.'s agent having relied upon it, pltfs. were entitled to rescission as against the co. & to damages as against the directors who issued the fraudulent prospectus.

Defts. are severally liable to repay to pltf. trust co. the actual amount paid by them, with interest calculated from the day of payment to deft. co. Having regard to the circumstances of this case, I see no reason why interest should not be payable at what I may term a mercantile rate usually allowed by juries, & I shall fix it at five per cent. 463. Contract by promoter—To allot part of promoter's shares to directors.]—Declaration alleged that the promoters of a joint-stock co., of which defts. were directors, entered into certain contracts with defts. to register shares of nominal value in their names, to pay a salary for allowing their names to be used as trustees, to appoint a particular person managing director who might nominate another person to vote in his absence; also that the promoters had entered into a contract with the owner of the property which the co. was to purchase that he should receive only part of the purchase money, the remainder to be divided amongst the promoters. The declaration proceeded to state that defts. afterwards, with knowledge, fraudulently & with intention to induce persons to take shares, published a prospectus without specifying any of these contracts; & pltf., on the faith of the prospectus, without notice of the contracts, took shares in the said co., & lost money thereby. Upon demurrer:—Held: these contracts, especially the last, were such as are required to be specified in a prospectus by 1867 Act, s. 38; & the declaration disclosed a good cause of action.—*CHARLTON v. The prospectus, issued on behalf of the co., did not mention the contracts relating to the disposal of the purchase-money of the patent. Defts. were promoters & directors of the co. Pltf. subscribed for shares, but he afterwards sued defts. to recover the price of the shares subscribed for by him:—Held: the contracts as to the disposal of the purchase-money of the patent ought to have been specified in the prospectus pursuant to 1867 Act, s. 38, & defts. were liable to pltf. for the price of his shares.—*SULLIVAN v. 470. ——— Consideration cash payable in instalments.]—Pltf. & deft., being both interested, with others, in mines which required the use of coal, deft., on Mar. 26, 1873, wrote to pltf., amongst others, a letter, mentioning a property consisting partly of smelting works & partly of a colliery then for sale, recommending it as a first-class investment, & offering it to pltf. & others in the terms of a prospectus about to be issued. The latter mentioned the capital of & number of shares in a co. proposed to be formed for the working of the businesses. On May 10, 1873, deft. contracted to purchase the property for £16,125 in cash, to be paid by instalments. By another agreement, dated May 29, 1873, deft. agreed to sell the property to two persons, expressly as trustees for the intended co., for £23,725 in cash, also to be paid by instalments. On June 2, 1873, a prospectus was issued, in which the name of deft. appeared as managing director, & in which the contract of May 29, 1873, was the only one referred to; & on June 9, 1873, pltf. agreed to take 200 shares of £5 each in the co., which was registered on July 16, 1873. At the hearing of a suit, in which pltf. prayed for a declaration that he was induced to take the shares by the fraud & deceit of deft., it was contended that the contract of May 10, 1873, ought to have been specified in the prospectus:—Held: the omission in the prospectus of mention of the contract of May 10, 1873, was not fraudulent within the meaning of 1867 Act, s. 38; & inasmuch as upon the evidence the statements in the letter & prospectus did not amount to misrepresentation either within the knowledge of the deft. or in fact, the bill was dismissed.—*CRAIG v. 476. Second or subsequent offer of shares—First prospectus headed "for private circulation only"—Offer to the public.]—In Feb., 1910, a prospectus was issued on behalf of a co. headed "For private circulation only," but also containing a statement that it had been filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Cos. It was stated that this prospectus was distributed by the promoter only to shareholders in certain gas cos. in which he was interested, & not more than 3,000 copies were sent out. In April, 1910, a second prospectus was issued which contained no statement of the first offer of shares. B. applied for & was allotted shares on the terms of the second prospectus. He died soon afterwards. His exors. moved to rectify the register by removing his name on the ground that there was a breach of 1908 Act, s. 81, in not stating the offer of shares contained in the first prospectus & the amount subscribed:—Held: on the evidence, the circulation of the first prospectus was an offer of shares to the public within the meaning of 1908 Act. Consequently the second prospectus was a "subsequent offer" within 1908 Act, s. 81, & the first offer ought to have been stated.

The remedy of the allottee was in damages against the persons responsible for the prospectus & not by rescission.—Re SOUTH OF ENGLAND NATURAL GAS & PETROLEUM CO., LTD., [1911] 1 Ch. 573; 80 L. J. Ch. 358; 104 L. T. 378; 55 Sol. Jo. 442; 18 Mans. 241.

"Amount payable to vendor"—Amount paid by vendor not included—Though property recently acquired.]—Where a co. on its formation purchases or proposes to acquire from an absolute owner property which is to be paid for wholly or partly out of the proceeds of the issue offered for subscription by the prospectus, 1900 Act, s. 10 (1) (f), requires that the name & address of the vendor & the amount of the consideration shall be stated in the prospectus. There is no obligation under the sub-sect. to disclose the amount of the purchase-money, however small, paid by the vendor on his acquisition of the property, however recent.

If the co. buys merely the benefit of a contract for the purchase of property, the consideration for which remains wholly or partly undischarged, & so, pro tanto, a burden on the property, the co. acquiring the benefit of the contract is a "sub-purchaser" within the meaning of the sub-sect., & the particulars thereby required must be stated in the prospectus.

A co. is not a "sub-purchaser" for the purposes of the sub-sect. unless it has to pay purchase-money to some one other than its own vendor, & it is not necessary to state in the prospectus the amount of any consideration paid or to be paid by anyone other than the co.—*BROOKES v. 482. Notice of contracts—Referred to in articles —Articles registered before issue of prospectus.]—The prospectus of a joint-stock bank represented that one half of the shares had been actually subscribed. It appeared that a large portion of these had been agreed to be taken by an Italian co., on the condition that it should at once be credited with a very large sum not much less than the amount of the deposit & allotment moneys payable on their shares, that they should draw on the bank for the amount of the deposit & allotment moneys; & that the proceeds of the bills so drawn, & accepted by the bank, should go in payment of the deposit & allotment moneys. This agreement was not set out in the arts. of assocn., but was referred to in them; & they stipulated that every member should have notice of the agreement. They were registered before the issuing of the prospectus. D. applied for shares, & alleged that he had done so on the faith of the statements in the prospectus. The shares were allotted to him, but he refused to pay the deposit & allotment moneys. He took no steps to have his name removed from the register till a year afterwards, when the co. was being wound up:—Held: he was bound by the knowledge of the contents of the agreement. Even if this had not been so, his laches would have disentitled him to have his name removed from the register.—*Re PENINSULAR, WEST INDIAN & SOUTHERN BANK, DIXON'S CASE (1867), 15 L. T. 651; 15 W. 483. Dates & names of parties to contracts—Not notice of material facts.]—Where a person is induced by a fraudulent prospectus to apply for an allotment of shares, & his shares are afterwards forfeited by his failure to pay calls, he ceases to be a shareholder & becomes a mere debtor to the co., & if he has done nothing to affirm the contract he may repudiate it & defend an action for calls on the ground of the fraud.

A prospectus which merely specifies the dates of & names of the parties to contracts in compliance with 1867 Act, s. 38, does not give notice of circumstances contained in the contracts which are material to be known & the omission of which causes the prospectus to give a false impression.

In an action to enforce a contract in which deft. sets up the plea that he was induced by fraud to enter into the contract, it is not necessary for deft. expressly to repudiate the contract; in order to rebut the plea, it is for plff. to show that deft. had adhered to the contract notwithstanding the discovery of the fraud.—*AARON'S REEFS v. Shortly afterwards the co. was formed, M. being a director. A prospectus was issued which did not mention the first agreement for purchase:—Held: (1) under the circumstances, M. was not, when he made the first agreement with the patentee, a promoter of the co. & that the omission to specify that agreement was not fraudulent, either under the general law or under 1867 Act; (2) where the omission to specify any agreement renders the prospectus fraudulent under that statute, the shareholder has his remedy against the person making the omission, but cannot therefore have his name removed from the list of shareholders; (3) as M., after he made the first agreement, became a promoter of the co., he ought to have disclosed that agreement to the co.; but the omission did not, under the statute, make the prospectus fraudulent on the part of the co., & the shareholder could not therefore have his name removed; (4) the omission to disclose the first agreement was not a fraud independently of the statute, but the omission to disclose a contract formerly made by a promoter, & likely to affect the mind of a subscriber for shares, was fraudulent under the statute; & the remedy of the shareholder was to have her name removed from the list of shareholders.—Re COAL ECONOMISING GAS CO., GOVER'S CASE (1875), 1 Ch. He had, however, a general knowledge of the existence of contracts which might fall within the section, & he made no inquiry into these contracts, but relied upon the assurance of the co.'s solr. that the prospectus disclosed all the contracts which the section required to be disclosed:—Held: he knowingly issued the prospectus within the meaning of sect. 38.—TAIT v. A shareholder who had subscribed for shares in the co. having brought an action against the director for misrepresentation:—Held: though the director was not in fact fraudulent, he must be “deemed to be fraudulent” within 1867 Act, s. 38, & proof that pltf. took shares upon the faith of the prospectus would make the director liable both under 1867 Act, & Directors Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 3 (1).—*SHEPHEARD v. ii. Remedies.

503. Whether statutory cause of action provided.]—(1) 1867 Act, s. 38, which provides for the disclosure in the prospectus of a co. of certain particulars with regard to the class of contracts specified in the sect., is applicable only for the protection of shareholders in the co., & creates no statutory duty towards bondholders of the co. or others for breach of which an action on the statute will lie. Qu.: as to the nature of the contracts to which the provision is applicable. (2) Semble: the sect. creates no statutory cause of action, but merely amounts to a declaration that, as between shareholders & those issuing the prospectus, the latter shall be deemed to have acted fraudulently.

Ground for rescission—Non-compliance with statutory requirements alone insufficient.]—The mere fact that a prospectus issued by a co. does not contain some of the facts or contracts required to be stated by 1908 Act, s. 81, does not entitle a person who has taken shares on the faith of the prospectus to rectification of the register. The difference of the wording of that sect. & 1867 Act, s. 38, has not, in this respect, altered the law.—Re WIMBLEDON OLYMPIA, LTD., [1910] 1 Ch. 630; 79 L. J. Ch. 481; 102 L. 525. — Not equivalent to misrepresentation—Shareholder must prove inconsistency of prospectus with facts not disclosed.]—In Feb., 1910, applt. was allotted shares in a co. In the middle of May, or at latest by the end of July, applt. became fully aware of misrepresentations in the prospectus. In Dec. he moved to have his name removed from the register:—Held: the unexplained delay of five months precluded him from obtaining relief.

When a shareholder comes to the ct. to be relieved of his shares on the ground of misrepresentation arising from non-disclosure, it is not enough for him to say that had he known the fact he would not have applied for shares; he must be prepared to put his finger on the statements which he relies upon as contradictory of or inconsistent with the facts not disclosed.

There must be something more than mere non-disclosure proved before misrepresentation is established—it must, I think, be shown that the non-disclosure is the non-disclosure of something the disclosure of which would falsify some statement in the prospectus (EVE, J.).—Re CHRISTINEVILLE RUBBER ESTATES, LTD. (1911), 81 L. J. Ch. 63; 106 L. T. 260; 28 T. L. R. 38; 56 Sol. Jo. 53; 19 Mans. 78.

D. Waiver Clauses.

See, now, 1908 Act, s. 81 (4).

526. When court will give effect to—Not when “tricky”—Must disclose all circumstances conferring rights agreed to be waived.]—(1) 1867 Act, s. 38, cannot be evaded by a general waiver clause in the prospectus, or in the form of application for shares, to the effect that a subscriber for shares shall waive all claim for non-compliance with the section. A waiver clause, to be effectual as against a subscriber, must fairly disclose the circumstances which confer the rights which by the clause he agrees not to enforce. The ct. will refuse to give effect, as against a shareholder, to a “tricky” waiver clause in a prospectus or application form, upon the same principles as are applicable to catching conditions of sale as between vendor & purchaser or to general words in releases.

(2) Notice of contract in 1867 Act, s. 38, means such notice as brings home to the mind of a reasonably intelligent & careful reader such knowledge as fairly & in a business sense amounts to notice of a contract.

(3) A misleading statement in a prospectus is untrue within the meaning of Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 3, even though it may be true in the sense in which it is used by those who issue the prospectus. A prospectus so framed as to convey to the ordinary reader that an invention referred to in it has passed the experimental stage, & that numerous orders besides mere trial orders have been given, when in fact no orders have been given except for trial & experiment, contains untrue statements within the meaning of sect 3.—*GREENWOOD v. It was further stated that, “during the negotiations for the purchase of the properties & the formation of the co., contracts have been entered into between various parties with reference to the formation & promotion of the co. & the subscription of its capital, but to none of which the co. is a party. The contracts referred to in this paragraph are, or may be, contracts within the meaning of 1867 Act, s. 38, & accordingly, applicants for shares are to be deemed to have notice of the said contracts, & to have agreed with the co., as trustees for the directors & other persons liable, to waive all claims, if any, against them for not more fully complying with the requirements of the said section, & allotments will only be made upon this express condition.” Neither the dates of nor the names of the parties to the contracts thus referred to were stated in the prospectus.

A shareholder, who had applied for his shares on the faith of this prospectus brought an action for damages against one of the directors, who was responsible for the issue of the prospectus, on the ground that the requirements of sect. 38 had not been complied with. Deft. admitted that he had read through the prospectus, but said that he knew nothing of the nature or contents of the contracts referred to, having left all statements in the prospectus as to legal matters to his co-directors & solrs., & that he was ignorant of sect. 38:—Held: deft. had knowingly issued the prospectus within the meaning of sect. 38. He was not protected by the waiver clause, & he was liable to refund to pltf. the sum which he had paid for his shares.

(2) The statement in the prospectus, though it was sufficient to fix deft. with knowledge of the existence of the contracts in question, & thus to make him liable under sect. 38, as having knowingly issued the prospectus without specifying the contracts, was not a sufficient notice of the contracts within sect. 38, so as to deprive pltf. of his remedy under that section, the position of a director & that of an application for shares being for this purpose entirely different.

In order that the applicant may be effected with notice of a contract within sect. 38, he must have notice, not only of the existence of the contract, but also of its contents.

(3) A waiver clause in a prospectus of this kind cannot operate to excuse compliance with the requirements of sect. 38, except under such conditions as would render a release in general terms effectual.—WATTS v. BUCKNALL, [1903] 1 Ch. 766; 72 L. J. Ch. 447; 88 L. T. 845; 51 W. R. 433; 19 T. L. R. 320; 47 Sol. Jo. 367; 10 Mans. 176, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 3.—MISREPRESENTATION.

A. In General.

530. Question for jury.]—In an action or defence, by a shareholder in a joint-stock co., on the ground of fraud, it is for the jury to say, upon the whole of the evidence, including the prospectus, & the arts. of assocn., & other documents, whether there were material & fraudulent misrepresentations, by which the shareholder was really induced to subscribe. If this partly depends upon the sense & meaning in which any statement in the prospectus might fairly be intended to be, or would naturally be understood, then that is for them to consider on the whole of the prospectus, & the other evidence in the case. If the prospectus is ambiguous, & in one sense is consistent with truth, they are bound to construe it in that sense, unless satisfied that it was meant to mislead. But the question, in such a case, is not whether the statements put forth are strictly, literally, or technically correct, nor even whether they are in any degree really incorrect; but whether they are so far substantially false & wilfully so, as that they must be deemed to have been intended to deceive, & to have, in fact, deceived. Thus the wilful publication of the name of a person of credit as a director, without any reason to believe that he is so, or will be so, with intent to induce others to subscribe on the credit of his name, which intent may be inferred from the very use thus made of the name assuming it to be wilful, may be deemed fraud; but if there was reason to believe that the person would be a director, though, in fact, he never is so, it is not necessarily fraudulent. So as to a statement that all, or so much of the "capital required" has been subscribed. So of the omission in the prospectus of matters disclosed in the articles. In all such cases, the intent & materiality of the misstatement, as well as the fact of a misstatement, must be considered by the jury with a view to judge whether it was fraudulent. Although on that question they may & ought to look at the whole of the prospectus, it must be with reference to some particular statements in it; & they must be satisfied that on some one or more points it was proved.—CLEVELAND IRON CO. v. STEPHENSON (1865), 4 F. & F. 428; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. Re CLEVELAND IRON CO., Ex p. STEVENSON (1867), 16 W. R. 95, L. J.

531. — Unless statement capable of one construction only.]—In one of the paragraphs of a prospectus issued by the directors of a co. there was a statement that "the completion of the works will enable the co. to increase their present capacity for manufacture from 400 to 1,000 tons per annum"; & in the margin was this note: "Increase of present manufacture." Each paragraph of the prospectus had a marginal note indicating its contents. The jury found that the marginal note, coupled with the statement against which it was written, amounted to a statement that the present manufacture of the works was 400 tons per annum, & that this was a fraudulent misrepresentation:—Held: the paragraph & the marginal note could only be construed in one way, as referring to the capacity of the works for manufacture, & therefore the question whether the two taken together could be construed so as to imply that the present manufacture was 400 tons per annum ought not to have been left to the jury.

The prospectus also stated that no portion of the price of the estate would be paid until the co. had received an independent report confirming the statements of the director. The report stated that the estate contained wild rubber trees in such quantities that immediate profits were assured. In an action brought by a shareholder against the co. for rescission of his contract to take shares the pursuer averred by his condescendence that he had applied for the shares in reliance upon the statements in the prospectus & the report, & that he had since learned that those statements were false & fraudulent, & in particular that there was no rubber on the estate. The co. pleaded that these averments were irrelevant to support the conclusions of the summons:—Held: the co. was responsible, at all events, for the absence of fraud in the representations made by its agent, & the pursuer was entitled to a proof of his averments.

Prima facie, a co. which issues a prospectus embodying a report made by a director is responsible for the truth of, as well as for the absence of fraud in, the statements of fact contained in the report.—*MAIR v. At the trial it was proved that both when the application by, & the allotment to, pltf. took place, although half the first issue of shares had been applied for, the deposit had not been paid upon that number. It was also proved that at the time of pltf.'s application, the persons mentioned in the declaration were directors of the co., but that before the allotment of the shares to pltf., these persons had, without his knowledge, retired:—Held: the judge misdirected the jury in saying that it was not material whether the deposit was paid, on the whole of the shares applied for.—*BEVAN v. After allotment the directors sent to the allottees, along with their stock certificates, a circular which, amid statements about other matters, stated the truth as to the matter misrepresented, but did not admit the misrepresentation, nor inform the allottees that they could retire & get back their money. After this the allottees who had paid up in full received their discount, & those who had not went on paying up the remaining £80 per cent. by instalments. The concern having proved a failure, some of the debenture stock holders sued the directors to recover damages for misrepresentation:—Held: the untrue statement in the prospectus was to be taken as inducing the allottees to enter into the contract, & entitled the allottees to damages, & its effect was not done away with by the circular, & the allottees who went on to pay in full after receiving the circular could recover damages for the loss of the money paid by them after receiving it, as well as in respect of what they had paid at first.

One of the principal matters complained of was a statement to the effect that undrawn profits or assets of the company to a large amount had been appropriated to a “reserve fund,” whereas, as pltf. alleged, the company never had any reserve or sinking fund.

The evidence showed that profits which were supposed to have been earned, instead of being distributed in dividends, were transferred to an account referred to and known as the “reserve fund”:—Held: the words

“reserve fund,” as used in the prospectus, did not necessarily mean a reserve fund which was invested, but the important thing was the reserving of the amount out of property available for distribution in dividends, & appropriating it in the books of the co. to meet contingencies, which was shown in this case to have been done. Even if pltf. understood the fund to be invested, this, in the case of a manufacturing co., would not be a material representation which would influence the conduct of pltf. in taking shares.—*KENNEDY v. 566 ii. ——— Where a person subscribes for shares in a co. upon the faith of a prospectus in which the promoters of that co. have as well made misrepresentations of material publication, by the directors, of statements in their prospectus, false in fact, & calculated to mislead the public, if careless whether their statements were true or false, would amount to fraud; (3) this would not the less be so, merely because the prospectus referred to reports of surveyors, which had in fact been received, & might have been referred to by the shareholders, if in point of fact they relied upon, & were influenced by, the prospectus; (4) the publication, by the directors of a prospectus prepared by the attorneys, the main promoters, without referring to the reports, or taking any pains to verify its statements, was evidence of such recklessness as would tend to show fraud, within the above definition.

(5) A person who has been induced to subscribe for shares by reason of such false statements is not liable in an action for payments of calls, provided he had, within a reasonable time, repudiated the allotment to him of such shares, & had taken no advantage of such allotment.—*GLAMORGANSHIRE IRON & COAL CO. v. 568. ——— —— & prompt steps taken for rectification of register.—To an action by a co. for calls on shares it is not a sufficient answer for deft. to say that he has repudiated the contract because of misrepresentation in the prospectus. In order to succeed he must show not only that he has repudiated the contract, but that he has, after discovering the misrepresentation complained of, taken prompt steps to have his name removed from the register of the co.

With regard to the rectification of the register an application to the ct. is only essential when the co. disputes the right to rectification. There is no reason why the directors, if they bonâ fide agree that a shareholder has a right to avoid the contract, should not thereupon assent to the rescission of the contract & rectify the register in the appropriate manner (MCCARDIE, J.).—*FIRST NATIONAL REINSURANCE CO. v. facts, that were false to their knowledge as suppressed material facts that were within their knowledge, such person, if he takes no benefit under the contract, & repudiates within a reasonable time, after he becomes aware of the fraud, can successfully rely on the fraud of the promoters as a defence to an action by the co. for calls, can rescind his contract, & can recover all monies paid in respect of the shares subscribed for by him.—*COMPONENTS' TUBE CO. v. of a specified section of the railway. Deft., who had signed an agreement to take shares, but had not actually accepted them, discovered that the right to the land was only contingent upon the completion of the line within a limited period. He then declined to accept the shares:—Held: upon bill filed by the co. to enforce acceptance of the shares, that although the ct. will direct specific performance of a contract to take shares, yet it will not enforce the contract where the prospectus, upon the faith of which the shares were taken, contains misrepresentations of facts, whether intentionally or otherwise. Every fact must be stated with scrupulous accuracy, & no fact must be omitted, the existence of which might affect the interests of those who take shares.

Those who issue a prospectus, holding out to the public the great advantages which will accrue to those who will take shares in a proposed concern, & inviting persons to take shares on the faith of the representations therein contained, are bound to state everything with strict & scrupulous accuracy, & not only to abstain from stating as fact that which is not so, but to omit no fact within their knowledge, the existence of which might in any degree affect the nature, or extent, or quality of the privileges & advantages which the prospectus holds out as inducements to take shares (KINDERSLEY, V.C.).—NEW BRUNSWICK & CANADA RY., ETC. 577. Fraudulent misrepresentation.]—In order to entitle a party to rescind a contract, it is sufficient to show that there was a fraudulent representation as to any part of that which induced him to enter into the contract. But when there has been only an innocent misrepresentation, it is not ground for a rescission, unless it was such as that there is a complete difference in substance between the thing bargained for & that obtained, so as to constitute a failure of consideration. A co., already carrying the intercolonial mails under contracts with the government of New Zealand, issued a prospectus that they were "prepared to receive applications for new shares in order to enable the co. to perform the contract recently entered into with the govt. of New Zealand, for a monthly mail service between Sydney, New Zealand & Panama, in correspondence with the West Indian Mail Co.'s steamers between Southampton & Panama." K., induced by this statement in the prospectus, applied for & obtained some of the new shares. The contract alluded to in the prospectus had been made by the co. with the agent of the New Zealand govt., both parties bona fide believing that he had authority to make it; but it turned out that he had no such authority & the govt. refused to ratify the contract:—Held: the prospectus by implication alleged that there was a binding contract, but being an innocent misrepresentation it did not entitle K. to rescind the contract under which he became a shareholder, as it did not affect the substance of the matter, K. having got shares in the very co. for which he had applied, & which shares were of considerable value.—KENNEDY v. Upon an engineer being subsequently sent out by the co. to work the mine, the vendor's report was found to be absolutely untrue, & the mine was shown to be an entire failure & utterly worthless. Relying upon this information as to the property afforded by the co.'s mining engineer a shareholder applied to have his name removed from the register of members of the co. on the ground of misrepresentations in & suppression of material facts from its prospectus:—Held: the promoters of the co. had not guaranteed the truth of the vendor's report, nor were they the persons by whom the shareholder had been deceived. 603. Amount of capital subscribed.]—By the prospectus of a freehold land & brickmaking co., issued in Oct. 1865, by the promoter & certain directors who had been induced to join in project of starting the co. by a bonus of £100 & a promise of £600 a year remuneration more it was announced that the capital was to be £25,000 in 5,000 shares; that a dividend of 15 per cent., had been guaranteed for five years; that a freehold estate had been purchased for £6,250; that one-half the required capital had been subscribed by the directors & their friends; & that A., the land proprietor, had taken 500 shares. In the same prospectus were embodied reports of surveyors, which spoke of the land as the "property" & the "estate" of A. By the memorandum of assocn., registered on Nov. 21, 1865, the objects of the co. were given as more extensive than those announced in the prospectus. By the arts. of assocn. it was stated that the co. was established for the purpose of purchasing a particular piece of land for £6,250, & that the directors were to pay the promoter, as a reimbursement for all costs, charges, & expenses of every kind, £1,500. The facts were that no guarantee other than a verbal guarantee by the promoter was ever entered into; that in Sept. & Oct. 1865, the promoter contracted with A. for the purchase from him of the land described in the prospectus & arts. for £1,500, of which £500 was to be paid in shares, & then verbally agreed with the directors to resell it to them for £6,250; that the directors took only twenty shares each, & that the whole of the shares subscribed for did not amount to one-half of the capital. Pltf. having on Nov. 7, 1865, applied for 100 shares & paid £100 for deposit, £100 for allotment, & two calls of £100 each, filed the bill in Oct. 1866, against the co., the directors, & the promoter, seeking to have his name removed from the list, & to have the moneys returned, on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation, & suppression of facts. A petition for winding up the co., which had paid one quarterly dividend only, was presented in Sept. 1866, & a winding-up order was made in Nov. following:—Held (WOOD, V.-C.): was not entitled to relief on the ground of failure of the promised guarantee, he having made no inquiry into its nature or existence; but he was entitled to relief on the ground of the misrepresentations as to the amount of subscribed capital, & as to the purchase-money; & his name was ordered to be removed from the list of members, together with an account of receipts & payments, & repayments of the balance to him, with costs, against all debts.

It is not open to a shareholder who has taken a dividend to complain that the objects of the co., as stated in the arts., are more extensive than those stated in the prospectus.

On appeal:—Held: a pltf. cannot be relieved from shares in a co. upon the ground of misrepresentation in the prospectus, on a bill filed after the presentation of a petition for winding up the co., on which an order was subsequently made.—*KENT v. The real facts were, with regard to (1) that S., the principal promoter of the co., had agreed to place out one half of the first issue of shares, & had applied for 2,510 shares for this purpose, but that very few were actually placed when the prospectus was signed; with regard to (2) that S., who was the vendor of the estate, had not spent anything in improvements. As to the third statement, the promoter had no binding contract with the owner of the estate. (a) Action of Deceit.

i. When Action lies.

626. General rule.]—In an action against directors of a joint stock co. for false & fraudulent representations, by which pltf. alleges he was induced to take shares, the question of the truth of the statements set forth in the prospectus, even as to such of the directors as are parties, is to be considered, not in a strict or legal, but in a substantial, practical sense; & especially in the case of ambiguity, the fact that the scheme was honest in its origin, is material, though not conclusive, as to the question of fraudulency; while, on the other hand, the privity of any of defts. to an improper conduct, though not laid as one of the charges in the declaration, as, for instance, "rigging the market," or getting up a fictitious premium before allotment, or an improper allotment, may be regarded as throwing light upon the question, whether the representations complained of were fraudulent. In such cases the question is as to their falsehood & fraudulency at the time they are communicated to pltf.; & it is necessary that it should appear that they, at all events, materially influenced him, & co-operated to induce him to take shares. Defts., who became directors after the prospectus was issued, are not liable in such an action, even assuming the falsehood & fraudulency of its statements as regards those who were parties to its preparation, merely because they did not satisfy themselves of its truth, provided they did not know the falsehood, & had no reason to suppose them to be false, but honestly relied on the representations of others.—MOORE v. BURKE (1865), 4 F. & F. 258; 15 L. T. 118, N. P.

627. —.]—The directors of a co. circulated a prospectus which offered the issue of 7 per cent. preference shares to the amount of £50,000 of £10 each, & represented that "guaranteed dividends at the minimum rate of 7 per cent. per annum, or £3 10s. each half-year's dividend," were payable half-yearly on these shares until a specified date; that this dividend was "secured by deposit with trustees of a sufficient amount of Govt. securities & first-class bank & insurance stock to cover same"; & that any profits made in the meantime by the co. were open to distribution on these shares in addition to the guarantee. There was, in fact, no such guarantee for the payment of the dividends, nor were the dividends secured by deposit of any Govt. securities or first-class bank or insurance stock to cover the same. Pltf. alleged that she, upon the faith of the prospectus, & believing the statement to be true, applied for & was allotted thirty of the £10 7 per cent. preference shares, for which she paid £300. The shares proved worthless. Shortly afterwards the co. was ordered to be wound up. Pltf. then brought an action against the directors, claiming a declaration that she was induced to take the shares by the fraudulent misrepresentations contained in the prospectus, & also judgment against defts. jointly & severally for repayment of the £300 with interest:—Held: the statement in the prospectus, which was most material, was wholly & absolutely false at the time it was made, & false to the knowledge of the directors who made it; the statement was inserted for the purpose of inducing persons to take shares in the co., & was calculated to mislead; & consequently, it was impossible to say that an action of deceit would not lie.—KNOX v. HAYMAN (1892), 67 L. T. 137; 8 T. L. R. 654, C. A.

whom 10 or 12 were connected with the trade:—Held: there was here no such misrepresentation as to entitle a person who had taken shares on the faith of the prospectus to have his name deleted from the register.—CITY OF EDINBURGH BREWERY CO. v. GIBSON'S TRUSTEE (1869), 7 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 886; 41 Sc. Jur. 507.—SCOT.

the subscribers to the memorandum of assocn.; that the qualification of the directors so appointed should be ten shares, & of future directors, thirty shares; & that the promoter should receive £2,500 as promotion money. In the same month a prospectus was issued, giving the names of seven persons of position, not the subscribers to the memorandum, one of them of considerable local influence, as directors, & stating that "the directors & their friends have subscribed a large portion of the capital, & they now offer to the public the remaining shares." The facts were that the directors had subscribed for, nominally, only ten shares each, & actually nothing, for the shares agreed to be allotted to them were fully paid-up shares, for which they paid, & were, by a private arrangement with the promoter, afterwards repaid out of the £2,500. The number of shares taken by "friends" of the directors consisted only of 140, which were taken by one firm. The whole number of shares taken was 762, & agreed to be taken besides, 430. Pltf. applied, on the faith of the above prospectus, for fifty shares, which on Mar. 15 were allotted to him, & on which he paid £25 deposit, & £75 allotment money. The directors admitted that the prospectus was issued by their authority:—Held: the statement in the prospectus was a clear misrepresentation, which overthrew the contract between pltf. & the co.; & as the statement related to the directors' own acts, they must be fixed with a guilty knowledge of the misrepresentation.

Since the filing of the bill, & the hearing of a motion for an injunction to stay proceedings in an action upon a call, the co. had been ordered to be wound up:—Held: pltf. was entitled to repayment of his £100, but without interest, & costs, against the directors, & notwithstanding the winding-up, against the co.; to have his name removed from the register of shareholders; to an injunction to restrain the co. from taking further proceedings on the judgment, & from instituting any other proceedings against pltf., in respect of his having been a shareholder; with liberty to proceed as he might be advised in the winding up matter in respect of the payment of his £100 & costs.

Pltf., having filed his bill & applied for an injunction before the winding-up, is entitled to the decree, in order to save him from all the consequences from the time of filing the bill that would result from any suit or action on the part of the co. against him in respect of calls (WOOD, L.-C.).

The costs of an application in the liquidation or leave to proceed in this suit, were ordered to be included in the costs of the suit.—HENDERSON v. LACON (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 249; 17 L. T. 527; 32 P. 326; 16 W. R. 328.

630. Direct representation unnecessary.—A count alleged that deft. & others had formed a co. that 12,000 shares were offered to the public; that deft. as promoter & managing director, intending to deceive the public & to cause it to be publicly represented & advertised that the co. was likely to be a safe & profitable undertaking, & also to deceive the public who might become purchasers of the shares, & to induce them to become such purchasers, falsely, fraudulently & deceitfully caused it to be publicly advertised & made known in & by a prospectus issued by deft. as director, that the promoters of the co., in proposing to issue to the public the 12,000 shares at 12s. 6d. per share free from all further calls, did not hesitate to guarantee to the bearers of the 12,000 shares a minimum annual dividend of £33 per cent., payable in half-yearly dividends of £16 10s. per cent. each, & that the guarantee should remain in force until the 12s. 6d. per share should be thus repaid to the shareholder; that deft. by means of the false, fraudulent & deceitful representation, fraudulently induced pltf. to become, & pltf. by reason thereof became, the purchaser & bearer of 2,500 of the 12,000 shares at 12s. 6d. for each of the shares; whereas, in fact at the time of making the statement the same was false & fraudulent to the knowledge of deft., & deft. had no ground whatever for offering such guarantee to the public, as deft. well knew; by means whereof pltf. had lost the money so paid by him:—Held: the count contained a sufficient allegation for a false representation by deft., & pltf. was entitled to judgment upon it, as there was no necessity for any privity between the parties to support an action of tort for a false representation.—GERHARD v. BATES (1853), 2 E. & B. 476; 22 L. J. Q. B. 364; 22 L. T. O. S. 64; 17 Jur. 1097; 1 W. R. 383; 1 C. L. R. 868; 118 E. R. 845.

631. —[An action for false representation, contained in the prospectus of a co., of which deft. is a director, is maintainable, although such representation may be capable of a meaning in which it would not be literally false. In such a case it is for the jury to say whether the representation was made in the sense necessary to maintain the action.

In order to maintain such action it is not necessary that there should have been any direct personal representation made by deft. to pltf.; it is sufficient if deft. authorised the circulation of the prospectus to the public knowing it to contain false statements.

The fact that other inducements were held out by other parties in addition to such false representation, by which pltf. was also partially influenced, is in itself no defence.—CLARKE v. DICKSON (1859), 6 C. B. N. S. 453; 28 L. J. C. P. 225; 33 L. T. O. S. 136; 23 J. P. 326; 5 Jur. N. S. 1029; 7 W. R. 443; 141 E. R. 533.

becoming subsequently untrue.]—An action for deceit against directors of a co., in respect of representations made in a prospectus, cannot be maintained without showing something in the nature of moral turpitude. If the statements be true at the time of issue, though the prospectus is undated, the directors are not liable for not withdrawing it when some of the statements became untrue.—ALLAN v. GORCH (1883), 9 V. L. R. 371.—AUS.

Sect. 8.—The prospectus: Sub-sect. 3, D. (a) i.]

granted to H., one of defts., & to sell, etc., the patent rights when acquired by the co. H. was also possessed of a patent for the manufacture & sale of date-coffee in France; & a co. was formed for that purpose, called the French Date-Coffee Co., with a capital of £100,000 in 100,000 shares of £1 each, under substantially the same management as that of the English co., by whom H.'s patent for France was purchased for £50,000, which sum it was agreed should be divided as a bonus amongst the shareholders in the English co. Early in Feb. 1881, defts. prepared & issued a prospectus of the French co., containing the following passage:—"From the success attending the co. formed for the working of H.'s English patent, when a duty of 2d. per lb. is payable, & the coffee sold at 1s. per lb., the directors feel justified in stating they confidently believe the profits of this co. will be more than sufficient to pay dividends of at least 50 per cent. on the nominal capital, & will exceed those of the co. working the English patent, which, having only been formed a little over twelve months, has entered into a contract which will yield the return by way of annual dividends of a sum equal to the whole paid-up capital of the co. of £34,000." At the time at which this prospectus was issued the period had not arrived at which "profits" in a commercial sense could have been acquired by the English co.; but the article had been sold in the English market & received with some favour, & an agreement had been entered into by the co. with a merchant or broker in London to take all they could make. Pltf., influenced, as he said, partly by the above statement in the prospectus, partly from information derived from another source, & partly by the favourable opinion he had formed of the article to be manufactured, purchased 100 shares in the French co., & paid the deposit. He had no connection with the English co. Owing, as it was said, to the duty imposed upon the date-coffee in England, & to other circumstances, the hopes held out in the prospectus were not realised, & the French Date-Coffee Co. was ultimately wound up; & when pltf. was called upon as a contributory, he sought to recover from defts. the sum he had paid as deposit money & the amount of calls for which he had become & would become liable, as damages for the alleged false & deceitful representations contained in the above statements in the prospectus:—Held: the statements complained of, though expressing the strongest confidence that the co. referred to would be successful & would make large profits by the sale of the article to be manufactured, could not fairly be read as alleging that profits in a commercial sense had actually been made, & consequently there was no evidence which could be properly left to a jury in support of the charge of wilful & fraudulent misrepresentation.—BELLAIRS v. TUCKER (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 562.

634. — Payment of promotion-money.]—A shareholder in a co. sought to recover from the directors & promoter the amount he had paid on his shares in the co., on the ground that a fraudulent prospectus has been issued by them. The misrepresentation relied upon was a statement in the prospectus that no promotion money had been or would be paid, whereas, in fact it was agreed at the date of the issue of the prospectus that a certain amount in cash & shares should be paid to the promoter, which was afterwards so paid. The jury found a verdict for pltf. against defts. for the amount claimed.—LODWICK v. PERTH (EARL) (1884), 1 T. L. R. 76.

635. — Misstatement of intention.]—A misstatement of the intention of deft. in doing a particular act may be a misstatement of fact, & if pltf. was misled by it an action of deceit may be founded on it.

The directors of a co. issued a prospectus inviting subscriptions for debentures & stating that the objects of the issue of debentures were to complete alterations in the buildings of the co., to purchase horses & vans & to develop the trade of the co. The real objects of the loan was to enable the directors to pay off pressing liabilities. Pltf. advanced money on some of the debentures under the erroneous belief that the prospectus offered a charge upon the property of the co. & stated in his evidence that he would not have advanced his money but for such belief, but that he also relied upon the statements contained in the prospectus:—Held: the misstatement of the objects for which the debentures were issued was a material misstatement of fact influencing the conduct of pltf. & rendered the directors liable to an action for deceit, although pltf. was also influenced by his own mistake.—EDGINGTON v. FITZMAURICE (1885), 29 Ch. D. 459; 65 L. J. Ch. 650; 53 L. T. 369; 50 J. P. 52; 33 W. R. 911; 1 T. L. R. 326 C. A.

638. Representation must be made without honest belief that true.]—To entitle a party to maintain an action upon the case against the directors of a joint stock co., for false & fraudulent representations contained in the prospectus & scrip certificate issued by them, it must distinctly appear that he became the purchaser of shares upon the faith of such representations.

To render the directors liable to such an action, it is not enough to show that the representations are false: if the directors acted upon a fair & reasonably well grounded belief that they were true, they are not responsible for them, however unfounded they may turn out to be.—SHREWSBURY

The co. was not successful, & pltf.'s shares having become of no value, he commenced an action against the directors for damages upon the ground that a fraudulent prospectus had been issued by them:—Held: the directors had acted in good faith, & the action must be dismissed.—ROSS v. DELACRE'S EXTRACT OF BEEF CO. (1884), 1 T. L. R. 40, C. A.

641. —.]—R., the principal partner in a trading firm, concurred in steps for turning the partnership into a co. with limited liability. His name appeared in the prospectus as managing director of the new co., with a note that he would not join the board till after the transfer of the business to the co. had been completed. He did not issue the prospectus, but furnished materials for it, saw it in draft though not in its final shape, & made alterations in it. The prospectus contained a statement that the business had paid 17 per cent. upon the capital employed in it. This statement it appeared might be true if "capital employed" did not include the business premises, or only included their value subject to mortgages upon them, but was grossly untrue if the whole value of the business premises was taken as part of the capital. A person who took shares on the faith of the prospectus sued R. for damages for misrepresentation:—Held: in order to make a person liable for damages for misrepresentation it is not enough that the statement should be untrue & made without any reasonable ground for believing it to be true, but it must be made dishonestly; the onus of proving dishonesty lies on pltf.; if the party making the statement believed, however unreasonably, that it was true, he is not liable; pltf. in the present case had not shown that the statement was made dishonestly, & the action must be dismissed.—GLASIER v. ROLLS (1889), 42 Ch. D. 436; 58 L. J. Ch. 820; 62 L. T. 133; 38 W. R. 113; 5 T. L. R. 691; 1 Meg. 196, 418, C. A.

642. — Must be actual fraud.]—In an action of deceit pltf. must prove actual fraud. Fraud is proved when it is shown that a false representation has been knowingly, or without belief in its truth, or recklessly, without caring whether it be true or false. A false statement made through carelessness & without reasonable ground for believing it to be true, may be evidence of fraud but does not necessarily amount to fraud. Such a statement, if made in the honest belief that it is true, is not fraudulent & does not render the person making it liable to an action of deceit.

A special Act incorporating a tramway co. provided that the carriages might be moved by animal power, & with the consent of the Board of Trade, by steam power. The directors issued a prospectus containing a statement that by their special Act the co. had the right to use steam power instead of horses. Pltf. took shares on the faith of this statement. The Board of Trade afterwards refused their consent to the use of steam power, & the co. was wound up. Pltf. brought an action of deceit against the directors founded upon the false statement:—Held: defts. were not liable, the statement as to steam power having been made by them in the honest belief that it was true.—*DERRY v. Sect. 8.—The prospectus: Sub-sect. 3, D. (a) i., ii. & iii.]

Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), stated that certain reports of experts as to the value of the co.'s property had been prepared for the directors. Pltf. took shares in the co. on the faith of this statement. The reports in question had been made by the instructions & in the interest of the vendors, & not of the directors:—Held: upon the evidence, it was not present to the minds of defts. when they issued the prospectus that the statement, in the sense in which it would be understood, was or might be untrue; it was therefore not fraudulently made; & the action of deceit could not be maintained.—ANGUS v. 652. — Onus of proof—Statement ambiguous.] — The prospectus of a co. which was being formed to take over ironworks, contained a statement that "the present value of the turnover or output of the entire works is over £1,000,000 sterling per annum." If that statement meant that the works had actually in one year turned out produce worth at present prices more than a million, or at that rate per year, it was untrue. If it meant only that the works were capable of turning out that amount of produce it was true. In an action of deceit for fraudulent misrepresentation whereby pltf. was induced to take shares he swore in answer to interrogatories that he understood the meaning of the statement to be that which the words obviously conveyed, & at the trial was not asked either in examination or cross-examination what interpretation he had put upon the words:—Held: the statement taken in connection with the context was ambiguous & capable of the two meanings; it lay on pltf. to prove that he had interpreted the words in the sense in which they were false & had in fact been deceived by them into taking the shares, & as he had as a matter of fact failed to prove this, the action could not be maintained.—SMITH v. 656 i. Proof that misrepresentation fraudulent—Onus of proof—On Plaintiff —Very strict.] — Pltf. sued defts. for damages caused to him by their having induced him, through fraudulent misrepresentation of fact issued in a prospectus, to take shares in a gold-mining syndicate promoted by themselves & of which they were the directors. The misrepresentations complained of were that auriferous reefs extended for miles through the properties in which the syndicate was interested & that the results of work done by the defts. on these reefs showed that they were exceptionally rich. On the facts:—Held: as the action was based on fraud & the ct. therefore required very strict proof of pltf.'s case, the evidence as to negative results obtained in subsequent independent operations did not, in all the circumstances, disprove the genuine character of the positive results previously obtained by defts., & pltf. had not proved that the representations contained in the prospectus were of the character, alleged by him.—BENJAMIN v. iii. Rights and Liabilities in Relation to Co-Directors and Agents.

662. Liability for misrepresentation of others —Brokers—Authorised to issue prospectus.]—A co., formed to work a mine was compelled from want of funds to cease working; money was advanced to them by some of the directors, amongst them A. & C. At a general meeting of the co. held, amongst other things, to provide for the existing deficit & working expenses, the directors were authorised to issue debentures on such terms & for such amounts as they in their discretion might think fit. The directors authorised the secretary to employ a firm of brokers to place the debentures. The brokers prepared & issued prospectus, bearing the names of B. & others as directors, containing statements as to the condition & prospects of the co., on faith of which pltf. & others purchased debentures. The money thus raised was paid to the co.'s bankers & part of it applied by the directors on behalf of the co. to repay the advances made by A. & C. The debentures having become worthless, pltf. brought an action for damages against B. & others in respect of statements in the prospectus, some of which were alleged to be fraudulent. The jury found the prospectus contained statements of fact false to the knowledge of the brokers, by which pltf. was induced to part with his money; none of the false statements were made by B. personally or by his authority; the brokers had authority to issue a prospectus, but no authority to include in it fraudulent statements; & B. derived no benefit from money raised by the debentures:—Held: deft. B. had been guilty of no moral fraud, & not being the principal of the brokers could not be held to have impliedly undertaken for absence of fraud in them in issuing the prospectus.—WEIR v. v. 663. — Co-directors.]—A director of a co. is not liable for a fraud, such as the issue of a fraudulent prospectus of the co., committed by his co-directors or by any other agent of the co., unless he has either expressly authorised or tacitly permitted its commission.

On Nov. 22, a shareholder in a co. commenced an action against the co. & its directors. By the indorsement on the writ he claimed to have the allotment of shares to him cancelled, on the ground that he had been induced to take the shares by the fraudulent misrepresentations of defts.: & that defts. might be declared jointly & severally liable to repay him what he had paid for the shares & to indemnify him against any further liability. On Nov. 29, a petition was presented to wind up the co. On Dec. 18, the petition was heard, & a winding-up order was made, pltf. then appearing as a contributory to support the petition, & the order providing for the payment of his costs in that character. On Apr. 3, pltf. delivered a statement of claim in the action, by which he claimed the same relief as that which he had claimed by the indorsement on the writ, with this exception, that he did not expressly ask that the allotment of shares might be cancelled. There was a claim for further or other relief. After this the liquidator applied in the winding-up to put pltf. on the list of contributories; pltf. resisted the application, & it was ordered to stand over until after the trial of the action:—Held: on the pleadings as they stood pltf. could not claim the rescission of his contract to take the shares.

Leave to amend the statement of claim was refused, on the ground that by his conduct pltf. had elected to claim the rescission of the contract, not in the action, but in the winding-up.

Semble: pltf. not having claimed rescission of the contract, he could not have any other relief in.

Co. was incorporated on Jan. 31, 1906, with the object of purchasing certain estates in Brazil, & for that purpose entering with or without modification into a specified contract with a syndicate, which had been already prepared. On the same day the directors issued a prospectus inviting subscriptions for shares which contained statements, specially as to area of the estate & number of rubber trees thereon, which were untrue. These statements were taken from a report furnished to the directors by M., a member of a firm who had obtained an option to purchase the estate & had sold to the syndicate at an increased price. The report was fraudulent, but the directors believed it to be an honest report & adopted it without inquiry. Subsequently, before the whole of the purchase-money was paid, the directors received information from a manager whom they sent out to Brazil that the statements contained in the report & prospectus were untrue, but notwithstanding this they went on with & completed the purchase. The arts. of assocn. contained a provision that no director should be liable for any loss or damage occasioned by any error of judgment or oversight on his part or for any other loss, damage, or misfortune whatever which should happen in the execution of the duties of his office or in relation thereto, unless the same happened through his own dishonesty. The co. having been ordered to be wound up compulsorily, the liquidator took out this summons claiming damages against the directors for misfeasance consisting in gross negligence in entering into the contract without proper examination & in not repudiating it when they discovered the errors in the report:—Held: the conduct of the directors did not amount to gross negligence. Semle: even if it had been gross negligence the directors were protected by the provision in the arts.—Re BRAZILIAN RUBBER PLANTATIONS & ESTATES, LTD., [1911] 1 Ch. 425; 80 L. 667. — “Loss or damage”—Property acquired after issue of prospectus.]—A statement in a prospectus that the co. has acquired a valuable property is untrue within Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 3, if the property has not in fact been acquired when the prospectus is issued, though the director issuing it believes that it will be acquired, & though it is in fact acquired a few days afterwards.

The subscriber for shares on the faith of the prospectus cannot be said to have suffered no loss or damage merely because the property in question was in fact afterwards acquired by the co.

The true measure of damage is the difference between the value which the shares would have had at the date of the allotment to the subscriber if the statement had been true, & the value which they actually had at that date, when there was merely a possibility or chance of the property being afterwards acquired.—MCCONNEL v. 673. — “Reasonable ground to believe” that statement true—Duty of directors.]—The uncorroborated statements of a vendor-promoter of a co. afford by themselves no “reasonable ground” to the directors for believing such statements in a prospectus issued by them to be true, so as to relieve the directors from liability to persons subscribing for shares on the faith of the prospectus for the loss or damage sustained by reason of such statements, if untrue.

Appl. said that the other directors had signed the prospectus before he did, & that that was quite sufficient justification for him to believe that what they had signed must be true—reasonable ground for belief—although he did not know what the statements in the prospectus were. That proposition is unreasonable & cannot be supported. It has been argued that a director cannot be expected of his own knowledge to verify the truth of all the statements in a prospectus. Nobody said he could. Even if he alone or other members of the intended board had taken the opinion or obtained a report of competent people as to the material facts in the prospectus that might have afforded a reasonable ground of belief. It is not necessary that an intending director should play the part of a lawyer or accountant by examining into facts or figures, nor that he should act as a patent agent. But if he will sign a prospectus without obtaining or even asking for any information of this kind, it is quite clear that he cannot protect himself under 1908 Act, s. 84 (1) (a), even though the directors who signed the prospectus before him might & did believe the statements contained in it to be true (LORD COZENS-HARDY,

677. "Reasonable public notice"—Time for giving.]—Where several persons, separately, apply for debentures in a co., relying on a prospectus & covering letter which contain misrepresentations, they may jointly sue the directors, as they have, within R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 1, a claim for relief arising out of the "same transaction."

Where a director knows that a prospectus is being issued inviting persons to take debentures, & abstains from asking to see it until after action brought on account of misrepresentations therein, it is too late then for him to give "reasonable public notice," within Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 3, that it was issued without his knowledge or consent.—DRINCQUIER v. 680. Right of contribution against co-directors—Extends to damages recovered in action of deceit.]—Where two co-promoters of a co. join in the issue of a prospectus inviting subscriptions for shares in the co. with knowledge that a statement contained in that prospectus is untrue & damages are recovered by a person induced to take shares in the co. by that statement in an action for fraudulent misrepresentation against one of them, he is entitled to contribution from the other under Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 5.

To this question the statute itself gives an answer; it states that, with reference to this particular class of test, & to this class of persons, namely, co-promoters & co-directors, who have issued a prospectus as in the present case, the ordinary rule that there shall be no contribution between tortfeasors shall not apply, but the rights of the parties shall be treated as though it were a question of contract, & not of tort (LORD HALS-

681. — Enforceable against estates of deceased directors.]—The directors of a co. issued a prospectus on the faith of which B. applied for & was allotted shares in the co. The co. went into liquidation. B. brought an action under Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 3, against three of the directors for compensation on the ground that the prospectus contained an untrue statement. Judgment was given in his favour with costs & an inquiry as to damages directed. Defts. appealed but the appeal was dismissed with costs. A compromise was arrived at under which the inquiry was dropped, & B. was paid compensation at the rate of 15s. per share, his taxed costs of the inquiry, & £700 additional costs. Many other shareholders made claims, which were also compromised, & the three defts. in B.'s action & some of the other directors paid large sums in this way. They did not take advantage of third party procedure, but brought this action against the remaining directors & the exors. of three of them, who had died since the prospectus was issued, to enforce, under Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 5, contribution by them of their share of the compensation which had been paid:—Held: if B. had brought an action against all the directors, including those who were now dead, he would have succeeded; the right to contribution, inasmuch as under the statute it arose as if from contractual relations between the parties, could be enforced against the estates of the deceased directors; & defts. must pay, with interest, their share of the compensation & the costs of B. & other shareholders which had been paid; but they were not liable to contribute in respect of the costs of defts. in B.'s action, B.'s extra costs, the costs of the appeals, & other payments which had been made otherwise than under the provisions of the Act.—SHEPHEARD v. 683. Indictment for conspiracy to cheat & defraud—Liability for acts of others—Though not participating personally.]—On an indictment for conspiracy to cheat & defraud the public by means of the circulation of a false prospectus, to induce them to take shares in a worthless co., assuming the intent to cheat & defraud, defts., who were parties to the design, are liable for any of the overt acts done by the others in pursuance of such common design. The overt act laid being the making & circulating a false prospectus, a deft., if party to such a design, might be liable, although he took no part in drawing the prospectus, & though he was absent at the time it was circulated:—Held: such a deft. was not, on those grounds, entitled to acquittal, as distinguished from the others.

In such a case, the co. being formed for the purpose of taking the transfer of a business, the prospectus stating that, in the opinion of the directors, who included the members of the old firm, the business was such as would secure a highly remunerative return to the shareholders; that the vendors guaranteed deficiencies in the assets & liabilities transferred; & there being no proof to falsify any of the statements in the prospectus, beyond evidence that at the time of the transfer there was an enormous deficiency in the trade assets of the firm, which, however, would, upon estimates, shown to have been honest & reasonable, have been in time made up by other assets & by the partners' private estates, & the business itself being extremely lucrative, & indeed of enormous magnitude:—Held: the substantial question would be whether defts. had an honest, although erroneous, belief in this view, or intended to cheat & defraud; & in the former view they could not be convicted, as the essence of the charge was the intent to cheat & defraud.—*R. v. of shareholders. Other shareholders also repudiated their shares, & instituted proceedings for the purpose of having their names removed from the register, while the co. commenced actions against them for the recovery of unpaid calls; but M. took no steps whatever, nor were any steps taken against him. After the public meeting, M. received two circulars issued by the directors of the co., one of which stated that, at the request of the dissentient shareholders, they had consented to stay legal proceedings for a time, with a view, if possible, of amicably settling their differences, & that they would, as soon as possible, communicate the result to the shareholders; & the other stated that the directors intended to appeal against a decision in a suit instituted by one of the shareholders for the purpose of being relieved from his shares. In July, 1889, he received from B., a shareholder, a circular, stating that he had commenced an action against the co. for a return of the money paid by him for his shares on the ground of misrepresentations contained in the prospectus. A. thereupon informed his friend C., who was a director of the co., that he intended to pay nothing further in respect of his shares until he had ascertained the result of B.'s action. A. did not, however, give any formal notice of this intention to the co. On Feb. 19, 1892, judgment was given in B.'s action in favour of B. On Mar. 17, 1892, the directors gave notice by a circular issued to all the shareholders, that an extraordinary general meeting of the co. would be held on Mar. 25, 1892, for the purpose of considering a resolution for a voluntary winding up. On Mar. 21, 1892, A. took out an originating summons asking that the register of shareholders might be rectified by removing his name therefrom in respect of the shares held by him, & for repayment of the amount paid by him on account of such shares. On Mar. 25, 1892, the meeting summoned by the notice of Mar. 17, was held, at which a resolution for the voluntary winding up of the co. was passed & a liquidator was appointed:—Held: A. was not entitled to await the result of B.'s action before repudiating his shares, but, even if he were so entitled, it was clearly his duty to take very prompt steps after learning the result; the delay between Feb. 19 & Mar. 21 was too long; & consequently his application failed.—Re SNYDER DYNAMITE PROJECTILE Co., LTD., SKELTON'S CASE (1893), 68 L. 711. ——— Opposing winding-up petition—& payment of call.]—In June, 1865, B. took shares in a co. In Jan. 1866, he made inquiries as to it, & found that the shareholders were dissatisfied, & that a meeting was to be held to discuss its affairs. A meeting was accordingly held for that purpose, which he attended, but in the middle of it he left. On July 3, the directors made a report, a copy of which was sent to B., from which the falsehood of the prospectus was clearly shown. On July 6, B. paid some calls on his shares, & on July 7, he went abroad. He returned, & making further inquiries as to the condition of the co., was told that a petition had been presented for a winding-up order, & that if he supported it he would be a loser, but if he joined with the directors in opposing it he would be a gainer. He then satisfied himself from the report of the nature of the prospectus, & asked to be relieved from further liability on his shares, but consented to oppose the petition, which he did. A winding-up order was made upon it:—Held: B. had so acted as to have precluded himself by acquiescence from now saying he was not liable to be put on the list of contributories, & an order was made accordingly.—*Re BREECH-LOADING ARMOURY CO., LTD., Ex p. 717. — Without voting.]—The prospectus of a co. contained a statement that certain persons would form a council of administration from which would be selected an executive & financial committee, which should constitute the board of directors. E. applied for shares in the co., relying upon the representation that those persons were members of the council of administration, & in the belief that they would be responsible for the management of the co. Those persons were not, in fact, members of the co., & upon discovering this, E. gave notice of motion to remove his name from the register of members. Shortly afterwards E. attended a meeting of the co., but did not vote or take any other part in the meeting. Some months after giving notice of motion E. wrote to the secretary of the co. & inquired at what price the shares of the co. were then quoted:—Held: there was a material misrepresentation, on which E. relied, & he was entitled to have his name removed from the register of members; he had not, by attending the meeting, or inquiring the price of the shares, acted as a shareholder towards the co. so as to disentitle him to insist on his repudiation of his shares.—*Re METROPOLITAN COAL CONSUMERS' ASSOCN., LTD., Ex p. removed from the list of its members, he will, on establishing his allegations, be entitled to have his name removed from the list of the co., although between the date of his filing his bill & the decree of the ct. upon it, an order has been obtained to wind up the co.

It is of very great importance, in these cases, to make the register of any one of these cos. as conclusive as, consistently with the proper interpretation of [1862] Act, you are able to do. But it is perfectly clear that you cannot make the register absolutely conclusive. Many cases can be pointed out, without difficulty, in which the register is not conclusive. If names are put upon the register without any authority the owners of those names are in no way responsible. There are also cases, especially those pointed out in sect. 35 [of the Act], where there has been a default, in the performance, by the executive of the co., of its duty in removing names after the owners of those names have ceased to be shareholders; there again the register is not conclusive. Again, under the same sect., there is a class of cases which is thus described, namely, where the name of any person is, without sufficient cause, entered in, or omitted from, the register of members of the co.; in that case the register is not conclusive (LORD CAIRNS).—*REESE RIVER SILVER MINING Co. v. 742. Plaintiffs—Several allottees of shares—Deposit paid by one for all.—Three several allottees of shares in an intended railway co. filed a bill against the directors, alleging that the deposit on the shares allotted to them respectively had been wholly paid by one of them, & that they were jointly interested in them; & further alleging circumstances to show that the prospectus, on the faith of which the deposit was paid, contained untrue & delusive statements, which had been put forth by defts. without any inquiry into their truth, & that the directors had kept back shares for the purpose of selling them at a premium. The bill charged that this was the purpose they had in view in carrying on the scheme, & not the benefit of the public; & prayed for a return of the deposit, with interest. 753. Whether with jury — Action for rescission — Discretion of court.]—In a suit by bill against the directors of a co. to rescind pltf.'s contract to take shares on the ground of misrepresentations in the prospectus, one of defts. gave a counternotice of trial before a jury:—Held: the judge in the Ch. Div. had a discretionary power under R. S. C., Ord. 36, r. 26, to refuse to allow the case to be tried before a jury, & as the question involved was one of fraud, & therefore peculiarly within the jurisdiction of the Ch. Div., a jury was refused.—BACK v. HAY (1877), 5 Ch. D. 235; 36 L. T. 295; 25 W. R. 392.

754. — Action against directors — Some defendants not concurring.]—The right of a deft., under R. S. C., Ord. 36, r. 3, to have the issues of fact tried before a judge & jury is subject to r. 26 of the same ord., which gives the ct. power, if it should appear desirable, to direct a trial without a jury of any question or issue of fact arising in any cause or matter which, previously to the passing of Jud. Act, 1873, could, without any consent of the parties, have been tried without a jury; such power, however, is discretionary, & will only be exercised on sufficient grounds being shown to the ct.

Where there are several defts. & all do not desire to have the case tried before a jury, the ct. will not comply with the request of one unless it is of opinion that the case comes within r. 27, i.e., that it is more convenient that it should be so tried.

In an action, the subject of which would have been a proper subject for a suit in the old Ct. of Ch., the action being one against directors for fraud & misrepresentation in a prospectus, a motion by one deft. to have the case, or so much of it as affected him, tried before a judge & jury was refused because the other deft. did not concur, & because the same question had already been tried before a judge & jury in two similar actions with great difficulty & at great length & with varying results, & to have it tried in the Ch. Div. would occasion a great saving of time & money.—MIREHOUSE v. BARNETT (1878), 47 L. J. Ch. 689; 26 W. R. 690.

The only evidence of the untruth of the representation was a statement made by the chairman of the co. in a speech addressed by him to a meeting of the shareholders:—Held: this statement was not admissible evidence against the co., inasmuch as the chairman in making it was not acting as the agent of the co. in a transaction between them & a third party, but was making a confidential report to his own principal.—Re DEVALA PROVIDENT GOLD MINING CO. (1883), 22 Ch. 757. — Report by deceased agent of company.]—On a motion by a shareholder to rectify the register of members of a co. by removing the name of the appct. therefrom on the ground of misrepresentations in the prospectus of the co., the appct. tendered as evidence of untruths in the prospectus a report which had been made by an agent of the co. who was employed by the directors to inspect & report to them on the estates which had been acquired by the co.

Objection was taken to the admissibility of the report as evidence because the same was made one month after the inspection had taken place, the agent having been lying half that time unconscious in a hospital. He had died shortly before the motion came on for hearing:—Held: that a document could not be admitted as evidence after the death of the writer, even though made in the course of his duty, unless it was contemporaneous; & that in the present case the report in question came within that well-established rule.—Re DJAMBI (SUMATRA) RUBBER ESTATES, LTD. (1912), 107 L. 758. — Matter not raised in pleading—Validity of patent.]—The prospectus of a co. formed to acquire a patent contained statements that the patent was valuable, & that a favourable report as to its validity had been obtained. Certain shareholders brought an action to have their names removed from the register of members, on the ground that these & other statements were misrepresentations. At the trial plffs. desired to adduce evidence to show that the patent was invalid, & had been anticipated. The validity of the patent had not in any way been impugned by any other persons:—Held: an inquiry of that kind was not proper in such a case; the only question was, whether the patent was valuable at the date of the prospectus, & the evidence was not admitted.—*STAVERT v. “That the plastic or surface clay on the F. property was of an average depth of thirteen feet, whereas, in fact, at the deepest part, such clay was only eleven feet or thereabouts in depth, diminishing to two feet.” At the trial plff. proposed to adduce evidence that there was an average depth of six feet of clay, that only four feet of this could be used for making the best bricks, & that, instead of there being 33 acres in the property as stated in the prospectus, there were, in reality, only eighteen acres:—Held: evidence of these alleged misrepresentations could not be admitted as they had not been specifically pleaded, & leave to amend would not be granted.—*SYMONDS v. 764. Counsel's fees.]—A., B., & C. brought separate actions against a co. to have the register of the co. rectified by removing their names from the register in respect of certain shares therein. The same solr. & counsel acted for plffs. in all three actions. A.'s action having been tried & decided in favour of A. it was arranged that the evidence taken in that action should be used in the actions of B. & C. Both actions were heard on Jan. 16, 1890, plffs. in each case being represented by the same counsel, each of whom was supplied with two copies of all the documents & evidence. In both actions the ct. ordered the register to be rectified by removing the names of the appcts. B. & C. therefrom, & ordered repayment of the deposits with interest at 4 per cent. & costs, such costs to be taxed by the taxing master. After B.'s costs had been taxed, the taxing master in C.'s case disallowed certain items because the items were similar in every particular to the bill relating to B., such as correspondence, evidence, copies of the memorandum, & arts. of assocn., etc., & he reduced counsel's fees because in his opinion the fees given were excessive & not justified by the circumstances of the case. On summons to vary the taxing master's certificate:—Held: the client having retained a solr., was entitled to have his case taken into ct. in the best possible manner without regard to any other case; the cases being cases of fraud, evidence that was conclusive in the one was not necessarily conclusive in the other; the solr. was entitled to charge in both actions, & also counsel were entitled to fees on both briefs.—Re METROPOLITAN COAL CONSUMERS' ASSOCN., GRIEB'S CASE (1890), 45 Ch. directors for compensation under 1908 Act, s. 84, alleging that a prospectus issued by defts. contained false statements. The jury found that pltf. applied for shares in the co. on the faith of certain statements in the prospectus issued by the directors, & that the statements were untrue; they also found that B. & K., two of the directors, had reasonable ground to believe & did believe that the statements were true. Judgment was ordered to be entered for B. & K. against pltf., & for pltf. against the co., each party to have the costs of those issues on which they were successful:—Held: B. & K. were entitled to costs against pltf., notwithstanding that pltf. had proved the issue of the prospectus by B. & K., that he had applied for shares on the faith of the prospectus, & that the prospectus contained untrue statements. There was only one issue between pltf. & B. & K., namely, their liability under sect. 84, & on that issue B. & K. had succeeded.—BIRD v. STANDARD OIL CO. OF CANADA (1915), 85 L. J. K. W. was not present for examination, & the ct., as an indulgence, allowed the motion to stand over on condition that W. paid to the co. "all their costs of such motion incurred up to the present time, including the costs of the hearing of this motion this day." On Dec. 16, 1889, the motion was decided in favour of W., & the taxing master ordered to tax the costs of W. of his motion, except the costs of the said order of July 23, 1889, directed to be paid by him. The solrs. of the co. sent in a bill of costs of the motion up to July 23, 1889, including the costs of the motion on that day. W. objected to pay any costs for items which were utilised at the postponed hearing. He also objected to pay the costs of an interlocutory application to attach the secretary of the co. for non-compliance with an order for discovery, which costs had by consent been made cost in action; also the costs on an interlocutory application to postpone the trial, on which no order was made:—Held: the taxing master had acted upon a wrong principle in including these interlocutory applications in the costs of the motion, which W. was ordered to pay; the other items for subpoenas, etc., which were utilised at the postponed trial, were in the discretion of the taxing master, & W. must pay them.—Re METROPOLITAN COAL CONSUMERS' ASSOCN., WAINWRIGHT'S CASE (1890), 63 L. He subsequently received scrip certificates in respect of such shares, whereon it was stated that the shares were to be held subject to the rules & regulations of the co. At the date of the receipt by R. of the scrip certificates sent to him there were no rules or regulations of the co. in existence, but soon after such receipt rules & regulations were entered on the cost book of the co. R. neither signed the cost book, nor attended meetings of the co., nor received any notices of such meetings, & he alleged that the rules & regulations above-mentioned were at variance with the prospectus, & not in accordance with the cost-book system. The co. was not abortive or fraudulent, but was unsuccessful, & was in course of being wound up. By letter R. applied for fifty shares, & thereby engaged to execute the deed of settlement. The directors allotted to R. thirty shares, & he thereupon paid a deposit of 1s. per share, or the same was paid on his behalf. In Feb. 1847, the deed of settlement was prepared, but it was never executed by R. The powers of the co. were by the deed extended to the purchase of any slate quarries in Great Britain or Ireland, & the capital was enlarged from £50,000 to £100,000. In winding up the affairs of the co. the master placed R.'s name on the list of contributories for a call of £2 per share:—Held: R. was not liable to be called upon to contribute towards the winding up of the co., there being no evidence that he ever engaged to take shares in such undertaking.—Re MERIONETHSHIRE SLATE & SLATE SLAB CO., Ex p. RYE (1857), 29 L. T. O. S. 121; 3 Jur. N. S. 460.

776. —.]—(1) Before a co. had been registered, a person applied for shares on the faith of a prospectus stating the objects of the co., & immediately after its registration shares were allotted to him. The objects of the co. as defined by the memorandum of assocn., extended much further than the prospectus:—Held: he was entitled to have his name removed from the register.

(2) The co. was registered on Apr. 28, 1865. In the autumn the committee of the Stock Exchange refused to appoint a settling day, on the ground of a variance between the prospectus & memorandum in a point of minor importance. S., who had taken shares on the faith of the prospectus, attended a meeting in Sept., held for the purpose of correcting this variance:—Held: his attending this meeting was not a sufficient ground for fixing him with notice of the more important variances between the prospectus & memorandum, so as to affect his rights by acquiescence, he positively swearing that he did not know of those variances, & had never seen the memorandum, or had any acquaintance with its contents, till May, 1866, when he at once repudiated his shares.

777. — Obligations substantially different —Not mere difference of language.]—Where it is clear that the objects of a co., as set out in the memorandum of assocn., go far beyond what was indicated in the prospectus, on the faith of which prospectus a person had applied for & obtained shares, he is, unless barred by laches or acquiescence, entitled on discovering the difference to have his name removed from the co. A mere difference in the language of the prospectus & the memorandum would not relieve him from his liability. The question would be, whether the obligations incurred under the two documents were substantially different. A person who takes shares on the faith of a prospectus, the terms of which are materially varied by the subsequent memorandum of assocn., must claim his exemption from that cause within a reasonable time after the memorandum has been issued; otherwise he will be debarred by his laches from doing so. This especially applies in the case of a contest between the shareholder himself & another shareholder, or between him & the official liquidator. But this rule of reasonable time will not apply in the case of a contest between the shareholder, & a person who prepared the prospectus, & afterwards issued the memorandum of assocn. Where, therefore, in May, 1864, A. published a prospectus of a proposed co. & B. took shares in it, & paid the first deposit, & a memorandum of arts. of assocn. was registered in June, & after an inquiry instituted by B. in Dec. 1864, he paid a further deposit, & an application was afterwards made by a third person to wind up the co., & then, in Jan. 1865, B. applied for & obtained an order to have his name removed from the register of the co. upon the ground that the memorandum varied in many important respects from the prospectus, so as, in fact, to constitute a totally different undertaking, & alleged that till Dec. 1864, he had never known of the difference between the two documents:—Held: an application by A. to rescind the order for the removal of B.'s name had been rightly refused by the ct. below, whatever might be B.'s liability as between himself & the official liquidator, or another innocent shareholder, or a creditor of the co.—*DOWNES v. It was provided that two directors should form a quorum, & that the continuing directors might act notwithstanding any vacancy in the board. The directors were empowered to fill up casual vacancies. A prospectus was issued giving the names of the directors & mentioning G. as chairman. W., who was acquainted with G., after communicating with him, applied for shares on the faith of G. & R., being directors. At the first meeting of directors on Nov. 12, 1880, S. & Y. only were present, G. & R. having sent in their resignations on that day; S. & Y. elected a third director who was not present, & proceeded to allot shares. A letter of allotment in the common form was received by W. about Nov. 15, accompanied with a letter stating that G. & R. had resigned. W. on Nov. 27 wrote to withdraw his offer to take shares on the ground of G. & R. not being directors. The co. refused to withdraw his name:—Held: (1) as the application to take shares was made on the faith of G. & R. being directors, & they had ceased to be so before allotment, the allotment was voidable; (2) assuming W. to have had a right to rescind, still as he had not before the winding up taken any proceedings to have his name removed from the register, he must be on the list of contributories.—Re SCOTTISH PETROLEUM CO. (1883), 23 Ch. Use of name as director—Authority to use given in consideration of indemnity—Contract for services of company influenced by credit of defendants.]—A prospectus of a projected co. for the conveyance of emigrants to British Columbia contained statements calculated to induce intending emigrants to believe that arrangements had been perfected for the object in view, & inviting them to take tickets for their passage & the public to purchase shares. This prospectus was shown by the secretary to defts., & they were asked to allow their names to be inserted therein as directors; to which they consented, on being qualified, i.e. presented each with 200 paid-up shares of the nominal value of £10 each, & indemnified. Their names were accordingly inserted, & the prospectus published & advertised in the Times:—Held: from these facts, the jury were warranted in inferring that one who contracted with the secretary for a passage, & paid his money, upon the faith of the representations contained in the prospectus, did so upon the credit of defts., & consequently he was entitled to sue them for breach of such contract.—COLLINGWOOD v.

Afterwards they refused to carry more than £2,500 to that account per half-year. It was shown that if they pursued this course the debentures would not all be redeemed within seventeen years:—Held: (1) even if the prospectus could be looked at in construing the contract between the company & the debentureholders, the words “redeemable within seventeen years” did not mean that all would be redeemed within that time, but that the co. would have an option to redeem them; (2) neither the prospectus nor the bond contained a contract to form an accumulating sinking fund, but the contract was contained in the debenture bond only, & the prospectus could not be looked at to decide its construction.—Re CHICAGO & NORTH WEST GRANARIES Co., LTD., MORRISON v. the meaning of sect. 82 is that where no prospectus issued an appct. for shares shall be able to inspect some document having a similar object; any appct. who applies for shares on the faith of a statement has the same individual right of rescission in the case of misstatement or omission which he would have had if he had relied on a prospectus. SECT. 10.—CAPITAL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DEFINITIONS.

820. Fixed capital.—1908 Act does not, nor does the general law, prohibit a co. from distributing the clear net profit of its trading in any year unless its paid-up capital is intact or until it has first made good all trading losses incurred in previous years.

There is no rule of law which forbids a co. from setting off an appreciation in the value of its capital assets, as ascertained by a bond fide valuation, against losses on revenue account.

A manufacturing co. carrying on a newly established business incurred losses on its trading account for some years after its incorporation & subsequently made profits. The directors set off the losses against an appreciation of the co.'s capital assets as ascertained by a valuation made by two of their number who were not expert valuers & approved by the co. in general meeting, & paid dividends out of the subsequent net profits without any further provision for replacing the losses. Depreciation of buildings, machinery, & plant had been charged in revenue account to an amount exceeding the losses:—Held: (1) in considering whether or not the dividends were paid out of capital the sums charged for depreciation could be written back to capital (PETERSON, J.); (2) as the valuation was in fact made bond fide, & was approved by the co. in general meeting, the appreciation in value could properly be set off against losses (PETERSON, J.); (3) there was no objection in law to such a revaluation & such a treatment of the appreciation in value ascertained thereby (CT. OF APPEAL); (4) apart from any question as to the depreciation allowed for buildings, etc., & whether or not the revaluation could be justified, the dividends were not in fact paid out of capital but out of current profits (CT. OF APPEAL); (5) the fixed capital of a co. is what the co. retains in the shape of assets upon which the subscribed capital has been expended, & which assets either themselves produce income independent of any further action of the co., or, being retained by the co., are made use of to produce income or gain profits. The circulating capital of a co. is a portion of the subscribed capital intended to be used by being temporarily parted with & circulated in business in the form of using goods or other assets which, or the proceeds of which, are intended to return to the co. with an increment & to be used again & again & always return with accretions. When circulating capital is expended in buying goods which are sold at a profit or in buying raw materials from which goods are manufactured & sold at a profit the amount so expended must be charged against or deducted from receipts before the amount of any profit can be considered (SWINFEN EADY, L.J.).—*AMMONIA SODA Co. v. By 1908 Act, Table A, art. 41, the directors may, with the sanction of an extraordinary resolution of the co., increase the capital by such sum, to be divided into shares of such amount, as the resolution shall prescribe. Notice of an extraordinary general meeting of a co., to which art. 41 applied, was given to each shareholder, the notice stating that the meeting was to be held in order to pass a resolution to increase the capital of the co. The meeting was held & a resolution was passed for the increase of the capital to £3,500 by the creation & issue of 1,500 shares of £1 each:—Held: the notice was insufficient, because it did not specify an intention to make the specific increase embodied in the resolution that was actually passed, & because it did not specify an intention to pass the resolution as an extraordinary resolution.—*MACCONNELL v. No such meeting was held, but a false entry was made by the chairman in the minute-book of the co., stating that at an extraordinary general meeting of the co. it had been resolved to increase the capital from £10,000 to £100,000. The capital having been de facto increased, new shares having been issued & taken, profits having been made upon the increased capital, & dividends paid on such

Shares issued in excess of capital—Subsequent resolutions to increase capital—Operate as confirmation.—The directors of a co. whose capital was £300,000, divided into 3,000 shares of £100 each, made an unauthorised issue of 1,000 additional shares beyond their capital. They afterwards called general meetings, at which resolutions were passed to increase the capital to £600,000, to be divided into 60,000 shares of £10 each:—Held: (1) the issue of the 1,000 shares, although originally ultra vires, was confirmed by these resolutions; & the allottees of them were bound by the resolutions, & were rightly placed on the list of contributories in the winding up of the co.; (2) although the sub-division of the original

Thus, where, in the case of a co. regulated by 1862 Act, Table A., new shares had been created by special resolution in the lifetime of a member, but were not actually offered to the members of the co. until after his death:—Held: the legal personal representative of the deceased member, whose name still remained on the register, could require an allotment of the shares which the latter would, if living, have been entitled to have offered him, these shares not yet having been disposed of by the co.

Qu.: as to the title of the legal personal representative to the shares, if, as was not the case, the co. had sent by post a letter containing the offer directed to him at the registered address of the deceased member, or directed to the place of abode or business of the representative or his solr., & not having received an answer applying for the shares within the time limited by the latter, had proceeded to dispose of them otherwise.

Where one of the arts. of assocn. of a limited co.

nominal capital of $130,000 was never paid in, the directors had no power to increase the stock of the co., & as the stock held by A. consisted wholly of new unauthorised stock, P. was not entitled to recover.—PAGE v. AUSTIN (1884), 10 S. C. R. 132.—CAN.

b. Requirements of articles for resolution to increase not observed—Holders of new shares not liable as contributories.—A co. was originally incorporated with a capital stock of common shares. This original capital stock was subsequently reorganised into preference & common stock. Later the directors passed a resolution which purported to increase the capital stock by the creation of new shares. The shareholders afterwards passed a resolution in the same terms as that of the directors. Under the arts. of assocn. the directors should have had the sanction of the shareholders before, & not after, they passed the above resolution. The shareholders had the power to pass their resolution to create new shares, but if no directions were given by the said resolution the shares were to be dealt with by the directors “as if they were part of the original capital.” Preference shares were issued under these resolutions. The co. went into liquidation:—Held: the holders of the shares issued as preference shares were not liable as contributories since the directors had no power to pass a resolution to create new shares without having first obtained the sanction of the shareholders & since, in the absence of special directions, no preference shares could legally be issued under the resolution passed by the shareholders.—Re BANKERS' TRUST & BARNESLEY (1914), 29 W. L. R. 479; 30 W. L. R. 738; 7 W. W. R. 171; 8 W. W. R. 38; 21 D. L. R. 623.—CAN.

c. Increase for purpose of meeting liabilities—Members of unlimited company not bound to accept new shares—Unless articles so provide.—A co. registered under Part I. of Companies Statute, 1864 (No. 190), as an unlimited co., which is unable to pay its debts inasmuch as all its authorised capital is fully paid-up, cannot increase its capital by issuing new shares & forcing them on its members in order to meet its liabilities or for the purposes of winding up, unless the authority to do so is expressed in the language in its arts. of assocn. Where such new shares have been issued to existing shareholders pro rata in a case in which no such power is given, & they have had express notice thereof, & that their names are on the register therefor, & do not repudiate them until after the commencement of the winding up of the co, but say nothing to intimate that they accept them, they are not estopped from claiming the rectification of the register & the list of contributories, inasmuch as they never contracted to take any new shares.—Re VICTORIA SUGAR CO.

d. New shares allotted by directors to themselves—Object to control voting power—Invalid.—The directors of a co. passed a bye-law increasing the capital stock by 2,000 shares, which was sanctioned by a majority of two-thirds in value of the body of shareholders at a meeting. The first batch of 350 shares the directors ex parte allotted at par to five of themselves, & also allotted the remaining 1,650 to the same five, but only after issuing a circular to the body of shareholders, whereby the latter were invited to state whether they desired to increase their holdings, & wherein it was set forth that such shares might be allotted as seemed to the directors desirable & necessary. Pltf. & other shareholders acting with him made no response except by way of protest. By the co.'s Act of incorporation, 50 Vict. c. 95, ss. 13 & 46 (c), the capital stock could be increased, only upon approval by two-thirds in value of the shareholders. The directors did not wish or intend to allot the new stock among the shareholders pro rata, but so to deal with the last 1,650 shares, as to appropriate for themselves enough shares to give them more than a two-thirds majority in value of shareholders:—Held: the minority shareholders were not required to submit to the form of application proposed by the circular; there was no recognition of any right on the part of existing amount & denomination of its shares. In 1874 a special resolution was passed for raising £60,000 by the issue of 6,000 shares of £10 each, which were to be paid up in full on allotment, & to be entitled to a fixed preferential dividend of £10 per cent. These shares were all taken & paid up. In 1884 one of the submarine cables of the co. broke down, & was lost, diminishing the assets by about one half. The co. passed a special resolution for reducing the capital to one half by reducing to one half the nominal amount of each share, ordinary or preferential. A preferential shareholder brought an action on behalf of himself & the other preferential shareholders, to restrain the co. from acting on that resolution & from applying to the ct. to sanction it:—Held: (1) the preference shareholders took their shares subject to the provisions of the arts., which contained a power to the co. to reduce its capital, & alter the amount & denomination of its shares. There was no bargain with the preference shareholders that they should receive £6,000 a year on the whole of their shares, the resolution being satisfied by their receiving £10 per cent. on the nominal amount of their shares, & what was proposed to be done was no breach of the contract with them.

(2) (COTTON, L.J.). If what it was proposed to do had been a breach of the contract with the preference shareholders, the preference shareholders would have had a right to prevent the co. from exercising, in a manner inconsistent with the contract, the powers for reduction of capital given by 1867 Act, & Companies Act, 1877 (c. 26).

(3) (COTTON, L.J.). Semble: on an application to sanction a reduction of capital the judge, though satisfied that the rights of creditors are not interfered with by the reduction, is not bound to sanction it if he sees that it would work unfairly as against any shareholders who do not consent to it.—*BANNATYNE v. At the time of the registration of the co. the ten shareholders were the co-owners of lands which they had purchased with moneys subscribed by themselves in equal shares, & after the registration they conveyed those lands to themselves on behalf of the co. There was no other paid-up capital of the co. except the lands so conveyed, & certain moneys expended on the improvement thereof which had also been subscribed by the shareholders in equal shares. The directors afterwards sold a portion of these lands which they alleged was not required for the purposes of the co., & divided the proceeds among the shareholders in equal shares, paying to nine of the shareholders the amount of their shares therein. Pltf. refused to receive his share, & filed his bill against the co. & the nine other shareholders:—Held: (1) the division of the purchase-money among the shareholders was a reduction of capital & was ultra vires & invalid; (2) the nine shareholders must pay back to the co. the amounts which they had respectively received; (3) pltf. was not bound by acquiescence, for though he was aware of the intended sale two years before bill filed, he was

h. Resolution rescinding interdependent issue—Of original & new shares—Where previous resolution to increase invalid—Reduction as to original shares.]—A limited co. was registered under Indian Companies Act (X. of 1866). The original capital of the co. consisted of R.4,00,000 divided into 1,600 shares of R.250 each. In 1882 the capital of the co. was increased by R.1,00,000, divided into 1,600 shares of R.62.8. The resolution to increase the capital was not passed in accordance with the arts. of assocn., that is, not with "the sanction of a special resolution of the co. passed at a general meeting." On Nov. 5, 1884, a resolution was passed at a general meeting of the co. that the shareholders should take up 459 shares of the original capital & 1,027 shares of the increased capital, which were then in the hands of the co., in the proportion of one share to every two shares already held by them. In pursuance of this resolution, applts. took up several shares of the original capital as well as of the new capital. On Oct. 19, 1885, a general meeting of the co. was held, at which it was resolved that the resolution of Nov. 5, 1884, & all acts done in connection with it, should be set aside, that the shares taken by the shareholders in pursuance of that resolution should be taken back by the co., & such amounts as had been paid by them on those shares should be credited to their names in the co.'s books. This was accordingly done, & the shares were transferred to the name of the co. In Oct. 1886, the co. was wound up by order of the ct. In settling the list of contributories:—Held: with respect to the shares of the original capital, the resolution of Oct. 19, 1885, was illegal & invalid. It operated, not as an investment by the co. of its funds in its own shares, but as an extinguishment of the shares, & such extinguishment was virtually a reduction of the capital which could not be done without complying with Indian Companies Act (VI. of 1882), s. 13. The holders of such shares were therefore properly placed on the list of contributories.—BHIMBHAI v. ISHWARDAS JUGJIWANDAS (1893), I. L. R. 18 Bom. 152.—IND.

Thus, where a limited financial corp., holding shares in a railway co. whose shares had become valueless through inability to complete its line for want of sufficient capital, proposed, as part of a scheme for raising further capital, to surrender some of their shares, & so, by assisting to promote the completion of the line, to give a substantial value to their remaining shares:—Held: this was not a reduction of capital requiring the sanction of the ct. under above Acts.—THOMSON v. The co. presented a petition for confirmation of the "reduction of capital resolved on by" the special resolution above-mentioned. All the creditors of the co. consented. In consideration of his appointment, pltf. took & paid for 200 fully paid-up £1 shares in the co., it being agreed that pltf. should not alienate his shares during the period of two years, & at the end of that period, if pltf. desired, the co. should repurchase the shares at par. The contract was entered into on behalf of the co. by S., the managing director, who represented that he had power to enter into the contract. Table A of the Companies Act in substance regulated the working of the co. No formal delegation of their powers was made to S. by the other directors, but in practice they allowed him to superintend the business of the co. Before the lapse of the period of two years the co. went into liquidation. The liquidators having repudiated the contract, pltf. sued them for damages based on the amount of the purchase price of the shares & salary for the unexpired portion of the period of two years:—Held: the undertaking by the co. to repurchase pltf.'s shares was illegal & unenforceable, as it was in effect an unauthorised reduction of the capital of the co.—WOLFE v. The co. then presented a petition praying the ct. to confirm the reduction of share capital in terms of the resolution, which petition the ct. remitted for an inquiry & report as to regularity of proceedings. It was reported that the co. had no power to reduce under its original regulations. By Companies Act, 1867, s. 9, the regulations should in the first place be modified giving the co. power to reduce, & afterwards the resolution to reduce capital should be passed. E. Grounds for.

(a) Capital Lost or Unrepresented by Available Assets.

i. What constitutes Loss.

857. General rule.]—I want to add a word as to what Companies Act, 1877 (c. 26), means by “lost capital or any capital unrepresented by available assets.” First, what does “lost” mean? It does not mean temporarily lost; that is to say, the figure at which, owing to a temporary depression—say, by the condition of the Stock Exchange at the moment, or the property market, or whatever it may be—the property may be stagnant. You must show that “lost” for the purposes of the statute is not temporarily, but permanently lost. Then I must qualify the word “permanently.” It does not mean irretrievably lost; it does not mean that the value which you put upon the property never can be appreciated again. But it means that, looking at the state of things, reasonable men are able to say that with a proper valuation of the property, & for which they can sell it in a depreciated market, that the value of it, having regard to its potentialities, does not exceed so much. If that is the meaning of the statute, then for this purpose the capital referred to is lost. But that word “lost” has, I think, a light thrown upon it by the succeeding words of the statute, “or any capital unrepresented by available assets.” That, again, does not mean that the co. may write off capital because it is not liquid at the moment & cannot be turned into money. The succeeding words show that the meaning of the word “lost” is not that the co. must prove that the capital has irretrievably gone, but that the co. must prove that for some reason or other they have no asset to which they can point & say: “For that sum of money for which we have taken credit in our balance-sheet, we have a representation by such & such a property.” In fact, in dealing with this statute you have to deal with all questions of value reasonably to see whether—not temporarily or irretrievably, but permanently, in the sense which I have endeavoured to express—the asset which the co. took at one figure has fallen to another figure, & they have lost the difference (BUCKLEY, J.).—Re WELSBACH INCANDESCENT GAS LIGHT CO., LTD., No. 922, post.

859. Shares issued at a discount—Not a loss of capital—Shareholders liable for balance.]—The liquidator of a co. in voluntary liquidation entered into an agreement, under 1862 Act, s. 161, for the sale of its property to a new co., part of the consideration being the issue to each shareholder of the old co. of one share of £1 in the new co., with 15s. credited as paid up thereon, in exchange for each fully paid-up share of £1 in the old co. by such shareholder, & that the remaining 5s. 1 share should be payable by the allottee at the times mentioned in the agreement. The whole the shares in the new co., 500,000 in number, were issued to the shareholders in the old co. in the manner mentioned in the agreement. Prior to their issue a contract providing for their being issued in that way was filed with the registrar of Joint Stock Cos., under 1867 Act, s. 25. The co. afterwards increased its capital by the creation of 500,000 more shares of £1 each, of which 50,000 were issued as fully paid up as the consideration for the purchase of other property by the co., & 240,000 were issued at a discount of 15s. per share, a contract being in each case filed, prior to the issue, with the registrar of Joint Stock Cos. After this had been done the co. passed a special resolution for the reduction of the capital by cancelling paid-up capital to the extent of 15s. per share, as having been lost or being unrepresented by available assets. The co. petitioned for the confirmation of the resolution by the ct. There was no evidence of any loss of capital otherwise than by reason of the issue of the shares at a discount:—Held: the issue of the shares at a discount was illegal, & the shareholders were still liable to the extent of 15s. per share. Therefore the proposed reduction of capital could not be confirmed by the ct.—Re NEW CHILE GOLD MINING CO. (1888), 38 Ch. D. 475; 57 L. J. Ch. 1042; 59 L. T. 506; 36 W. R. 909; 4 T. L. R. 430.

863. Where reserve fund created out of profits—Loss apportioned between capital & reserve.]—Under Companies Act, 1877 (c. 26), the capital of a co. may be reduced if any capital has been lost, or is unrepresented by available assets. The directors of a co. were empowered by the arts. of assocn. to create a reserve fund out of the profits of the co. for such purposes as they should think conducive to the interests of the co., & to employ the reserve fund in the business of the co. without being bound to keep the same separate from the other assets. The co. had built up a reserve composed partly of premiums received for leases, partly of premiums received on the issue of preference shares, & partly of ordinary business profits. The reserve was used in the co.’s business, & was not kept separately invested. The co. had incurred a loss arising from the depreciation in the value of its public-houses below the amount stated in the co.’s balance-sheet. The co. accord-

o. Bad debt.]—A co. with a paid-up capital of £50,000 in £1 shares, of which half were preference & the other half ordinary shares, presented a petition for an order confirming a resolution to reduce the capital to the extent of £12,500, that amount having been lost or not being represented by available assets. The ct. remitted the petition to a reporter, who reported that a sum of £13,500 had been lost as the result of a bad debt, but that the last balance-sheet of the co., if effect was given to the proposed reduction, showed an apparent surplus of £1,811, which could be immediately used for payment of dividend. He was therefore of opinion that the capital lost or unrepresented by avail-

gly applied for the sanction of the ct. to a scheme for reduction of capital whereby the co., while retaining a small portion of the reserve, attributed to the reserve more than its rateable proportion, & to the capital account less than its rateable proportion, of the loss:—Held: the reserve having been properly created out of profits, in ascertaining the amount of capital lost, the loss of assets ought to be treated as ratably apportioned between the reserve & the capital account, & in the absence of special circumstances, the co. in proposing a scheme for reduction of capital was not bound to wipe out the whole of the reserve, or to attribute to it more than its due proportion of the loss though it might do so if it chose; & the ct. sanctioned the scheme.—Re HOARE & Co., LTD. & REDUCED, [1904] 2 Ch. 208; 73 L. By the constitution of the co. the founders' shares were, in the event of liquidation, to bear in the first instance losses of capital. The memorandum of assocn. provided that preference shares might be issued on such terms as the co. should by special resolution determine. Shares preferred both as to capital & dividend were issued by the directors without any special resolution having been passed; but at meetings subsequently held & attended by all classes of shareholders resolutions were unanimously passed adopting the terms under which the preference shares were issued. The ct. presented a petition for the confirmation by the ct. of resolutions for reduction which involved the total extinction of the founders' shares & threw the remainder of the loss upon the ordinary shares:—Held: (1) issue of the preference shares without the passing of a special resolution was capable of ratification by the ct. & had been ratified; (2) the scheme of reduction was not unfair & ought to be sanctioned.—Re

867. — Not unrepresented by assets—Nor excess capital—Consideration right to ordinary shares.—A co. limited by shares cannot, under 1867 Act, & Companies Act, 1877 (c. 26), reduce its nominal & its paid-up capital by cancelling, with the consent of the holders, paid-up shares, where the amount has been neither lost, nor is unrepresented by available assets, nor is to be returned as in excess of the wants of the co., unless the reduction is so made as not to affect the equilibrium of the balance-sheet to the prejudice of creditors.

The capital of a co. was £700,300, divided into 350,000 preference, 350,000 ordinary, & 300 founders' shares, all of £1 each & fully paid-up. By a conditional agreement between the holders of the founders' shares, the co. & the directors, it was agreed that the co. should be at liberty to pass resolutions cancelling the founders' shares & increasing the capital by creating 78,000 new ordinary shares, & that on the agreement becoming absolute each holder of founders' shares should in respect of every founder's share be entitled to an allotment of 260 of the new shares. The agreement was to become absolute upon its being ratified by the holders of founders' shares & the co., the resolutions being passed & the sanction of the ct. to the reduction being obtained. The agreement was ratified, & the resolutions passed, & it was intended, on the sanction of the ct. being obtained, to issue the 78,000 new ordinary shares to the holders of the founders' shares. On petition to sanction the reduction:—Held: the agreement to take the new shares being conditional on, & not taking effect till after the reduction, the ct. had not power to sanction it; but if the petition were amended so as to show that the 78,000 shares had been allotted, & paid for, & the holders of the founders' shares declared themselves trustees of the latter, for the co., the ct. could sanction it.—Re ANGLO-FRENCH EXPLORATION CO., [1902] 2 Ch. 845; 71 L. The agreement was conditional on the co. obtaining an order confirming the reduction. The petition for the confirmatory order was supported by all the shareholders. There were practically no creditors, the only debts being a small sum for current expenses:—Held: as the reduction scheme in its entirety really involved an increase of capital, & an issue of part thereof at 99 per cent. discount without any consideration to the co. it was wholly illegal, & the reduction could not be confirmed.—*Re DEVELOPMENT CO. The co. proposed to pay off & cancel all the preference shares pursuant to the arts., & presented a petition for reduction on this basis:—Held: (1) the memorandum & arts. of assocn. created a valid contract, binding on both classes of shareholders, that a portion of the profits of the co. should be set apart for the redemption & extinction of the preference shares; (2) the reduction, as proposed, did not involve a "payment to any shareholder of any paid-up capital" within Companies Act, 1877 (c. 26), s. 4, & the order for reduction might be made without referring the petition to chambers for an inquiry & certificate as to creditors.—Re DICIDO PIER Co., [1891] 2 Ch. 354; 64 L. The capital of the co. consisted of 1,000 shares of £100 each, all of which were fully paid up. The shares were bought at their market value, & the amount of the purchase-money was £25,305. The reason for acquiring these 169 shares was because the capital of the co. was greater than was necessary for carrying on the business, which was in a very prosperous condition. The purchase-money consisted of accumulated profits available for division as dividend among the shareholders. Although, therefore, the conduct of the directors was ultra vires, the same result might have been brought about in a perfectly lawful manner. The co. petitioned the ct. for leave to extinguish the 169 shares of £100 each, & to reduce the capital of the co., on the ground that the capital was in excess of the wants of the co., & that the application came within 1867 Act, s. 9. 878. Vendor's shares — Patents purchased not worth purchase price.]—A co. found that the patents bought from the vendor to the co. were not of the value paid for them, & that the shares issued in payment therefore, did not represent assets. Having power under its arts. to reduce capital, the co., as the result of negotiations, passed a special resolution for the reduction of its capital by means of a surrender & cancellation of certain fully paid ordinary & preference vendor's shares. On petition for an order confirming the proposed reduction:—Held: there is nothing in the Companies Acts, 1867 & 1877, which requires that the reduction should be spread either equally or ratably over all the shares in the co., & the reduction in the manner proposed was valid.

At the time of passing the special resolution for the reduction, the co. also passed a special resolution changing the name of the co. The petition was advertised in the co.'s old name, but, before the hearing, the Board of Trade had approved of the change of name, the registrar had entered the new name on the register, & had issued a certificate of incorporation to meet the altered circumstances of the case. At the hearing the ct. refused to make the order sanctioning the reduction of capital unless an affidavit were produced showing that the co. had not used the new name, & unless an undertaking were given not to use the new name for a period of one month, during which the old name with the words "& reduced" was to be used. It being found impossible to comply with these requirements, the ct. subsequently made the order for reduction, subject to the petition being amended by adding therein the new name to the old one, together with the words "& reduced" for one month.—Re GATLING GUN, LTD. (1890), 43 Ch. 879. Shares held by director—In consideration of transfer of onerous property to director—& payment in cash.]—By the arts. of an hotel co. its funds were not to be expended in the purchase of its own shares; the directors might accept surrenders of shares & the co. might in general meeting reduce its capital by paying off capital & cancelling capital which had been lost or was unrepresented by available assets. The co. agreed with its managing director that he should take over an hotel, held by them on an onerous lease, & furniture, upon payment by him of £3,000, & that his shares should be surrendered to the co. & extinguished. A resolution confirming this agreement, which was most beneficial to the co., was passed at meetings at which some of the shareholders were not represented. No shareholders dissented, & the debenture holders & other creditors assented. The co. presented a petition for the sanction of the ct. to the proposed reduction of capital:—Held: (1) the co. had power, without the sanction of the ct. to sell part of its assets in consideration of a price in cash, & a release from liability, & then to accept a surrender of these shares; (2) the transaction was not a purchase by the co. of its own shares; (3) the result would be that these shares would be "capital in excess of the wants of the co." within Companies Act, 1877 (c. 26), s. 3; & the ct., therefore, had power to sanction the resolution, although there was no power to authorise a co. to prefer one shareholder to another of the same class by buying up his shares.—Re DENVER HOTEL CO., [1893] 1 Ch. 495; 62 L. The holder of fully-paid shares brought an action against the co. & its directors asking for a declaration, in effect, that his fully-paid shares were not subject to the power of forfeiture for debts on the ground that it was ultra vires & illegal:—Held: under this power the forfeiture for debts due from a member generally, as distinct from those due from him as a contributory, would amount to an illegal reduction of capital.—*HOPKINSON v. Part of their capital having been lost the co. passed a resolution for the reduction of its nominal amount by writing off £7 from each fully-paid £10 share & from each £10 share on which £8 had been credited as paid, & by reducing all shares remaining issued from £10 to £3 per share. A petition was then presented under 1867 Act, & Companies Act, 1877 (c. 26), to obtain the sanction of the ct. to this resolution, the petition being supported by evidence that all the creditors of the co. had been paid up to a recent date, except one, who appeared & consented to the petition. (2) But a contract made on the issue of any particular class of shares, such as preference shares, that that class of shares shall not be liable to reduction, will be valid.

Qu.: whether, however, a co. can by contract deprive itself altogether of the power of reducing its capital which is conferred by the Acts.

(3) The fact that, at the time when a class of preference shares was created, the arts. of assocn. of the co. did not authorise any reduction of the capital, will not prevent the reduction of the amount of the preference shares, if a special resolution is previously passed altering the arts. by the insertion of a power of reduction.

(4) Under sect. 11 of 1867 Act, the ct. has a judicial discretion as to confirming resolutions for the reduction of the capital of a co., but the confirmation ought not to be refused unless there is something unjust or inequitable in the proposed reduction.

(5) The minute to be registered on the confirmation by the ct. of resolutions for the reduction of the capital of a co. ought to show, not only the amount of the capital as reduced, but also the amount at which it stood prior to the reduction.

The arts. of assocn. of a co., formed in 1864, under 1862 Act, provided that the directors might, from time to time, with the sanction of a special resolution previously given, increase the capital by the issue of new shares, & that any capital thus raised should be considered as part of the original capital, & should be subject to the same provisions as if it had been part of the original capital, except that it should be lawful for the co. by special resolution to direct that the new shares should have such priority in respect of dividends as it should deem expedient. The arts. did not contain any power to reduce the capital. In 1872 it was resolved to issue certain preference shares, “bearing interest at 8 per cent. per annum in perpetuity.” In 1876 it was resolved to issue certain other preference shares, “entitling the holders to a fixed dividend at 6 per cent. per annum on the amount for the time being paid up in respect of such shares.” In both cases it was provided that the preference shareholders should be entitled to attend the general meetings of the co., but that they should not be entitled in virtue of those shares to vote. Both classes of preference shares were issued & were paid up in full, as were also the ordinary shares. In 1885 a special resolution was passed, adding to the arts. of assocn. a clause authorising the directors from time to time, with the sanction of a special resolution, to reduce the capital by cancelling lost capital, or capital unrepresented by available assets. In April, 1888, special resolutions were passed for the reduction of the whole of the capital, including the preference shares, by one-fourth, on the ground that capital to that extent had been lost. A petition by the co. for the confirmation the shares then standing at a high premium on the market. Certain of the £7 shareholders brought a reduction of the resolutions on the ground that they were ultra vires of the co. & unjust, as pursuers were entitled to have the unpaid capital of the £7 called up before the co. raised capital otherwise:—Held: the resolutions were not incompetent, & they did not prejudice any rights of pursuers, as they had no right to insist that the unpaid capital on the shares should be called up & as no injury was done to them by restricting their liability.—HOGGAN v. THARSIS SULPHUR & COPPER CO., LTD. (1882), 9 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1191.—SCOT.

of the resolutions by the ct. was opposed by some of the preference shareholders, who contended that there was no power to reduce the amount of the preference shares, or that at any rate the amount of the dividend payable on those shares could not be reduced:—Held: (6) there was nothing in the bargain with the preference shareholders which prevented the reduction of their shares, & there was nothing unfair or inequitable in the proposed reduction. The resolutions were accordingly confirmed.—Re BARROW HÆMATITE STEEL CO. (1888), 39 Ch. D. 582; 58 L. J. Ch. 148; 59 L. T. 500; 37 W. R. 249; 4 T. L. Only 6,044 shares had been issued, of which 1,359 were preference shares, & the remaining 4,685 were ordinary shares. All the preference shares & 4,360 of the ordinary shares were fully paid up. On the remaining 325 ordinary shares only £38 per share had been called up, & that sum had been paid on all of these shares except thirty-seven, on which only £30 per share had been paid. The co. having lost part of their capital, passed a resolution for the reduction of its nominal amount by writing off £35 from each preference share & £38 from each ordinary share. It was proposed to state in the minute which was to be registered that on 325 of the ordinary shares nothing was to be deemed to have been paid up, all the other issued shares being deemed to have been fully paid up. A petition was presented under 1867 Act & Companies Act, 1877 (c. 26), to obtain the sanction of the ct. to the resolution, the petition being supported by evidence that the holders of the thirty-seven shares on which there was an unpaid call of £8 were persons of no means, & that it would be impossible to recover anything from them. 919. Reduction altering class rights—Deferred shares—Partly cancelled—Partly to rank with ordinary shares.]—In 1885 a co. with a capital of not less than £1,000,000 was formed to take over & work a concession which had been granted by N. Disputes having arisen between the co. & N., an agreement was come to in 1890 whereby in settlement the co. raised an addition capital of 15,000 deferred shares of £10 each. Clause 5 of the memorandum of assocn. provided that “the shares of which the co. shall from time to time consist may be divided into different classes, with such preference, priorities, restrictions, or special incidents as may from time to time be provided by the arts. & special resolutions of the co.” The arts. contained no power to reduce capital, but they provided that shares might be issued or re-issued of different classes, & that any special priority might be attached to or taken away from them, & that special resolutions affecting one class of shareholders were to be valid if passed in the presence & with the votes of such a number of such shareholders as were sufficient to make the resolution valid as a special resolution independently of shareholders of other classes. Power to reduce was inserted by an additional art., & at the same time a special resolution was duly passed & confirmed that the capital be reduced by £30,000 which had been lost, & that the loss should fall on the deferred shareholders by surrender of 3,000 such shares, the remaining 12,500 to be raised to the position of ordinary shares. On a petition being presented praying for confirmation of the reduction:—Held: (1) having regard to the clauses above-mentioned of the memorandum & arts., the resolution was therefore not ultra vires; (2) as there was nothing in the agreement of 1890 that future capital was not to have any priority, it was not violated by the resolution; (3) having regard to the facts that the deferred shareholders had agreed to take the whole loss, N. had full notice of all the proceedings, & his position as a creditor under the original concession was not affected, it was not unfair nor inequitable & the proposed reduction ought to be confirmed.—Re HYDERABAD (DECCAN) Co., LTD. (1896), 75 L. 921. — — — After unequal reduction.]—By the memorandum of a limited co. formed in 1894 under the Cos. Acts the capital of the co. was £1,000,000 divided into 100,000 ordinary shares of £10 each, & the capital was afterwards increased by special resolution in the statutory mode. The co.’s arts. of assocn. authorised the co. to issue its share capital with such preferences or special rights as they thought fit, & provided that all shares should be held on the terms that any rights or preference or special privilege of the holders of any class of shares should not be interfered with except by special resolution passed & confirmed by shareholders of that class, & every resolution so passed should be a valid resolution binding all shareholders of such class; & that the co. might by special resolution reduce its capital.

In 1903 the co. divided its existing share capital into preference shares & stocks & ordinary stocks by special resolution, which resolution became part of the memorandum. In 1909 the co., having lost capital to a large amount, passed in general meeting, held under sect. 69 of 1908 Act, a special resolution reducing its capital by writing off the loss in certain proportions from the nominal amount of its then issued preference shares & stock & ordinary stock, the preference stock being reduced by 40 per cent. & the ordinary stock by 85 per cent., the preference shares being reduced from £6 shares £2 15s. paid to £3 12s. shares 7s. paid. At the same time the co. passed a second

917 i. Reduction affecting preference dividend—Arrears cancelled.]—The preference shareholders in a co. limited by shares were under the memorandum of assocn. of the co. entitled to receive out of the profits a fixed cumulative preferential dividend of 5 per cent. per annum. By art. 46 of arts. of assocn. it was provided that all or any of the rights & privileges attached to any class of shares might be modified by an extraordinary resolution passed at a general meeting of the holders of that class. By a resolution duly passed in terms of art. 46 on Feb. 9, 1903, at which date the dividends due on the preference shares were two years in arrear, a meeting of the preference shareholders agreed to a scheme for reduction of capital proposed by the directors under which these arrears were cancelled & the future profits distributable as dividend were appropriated in order of priority to payment (a) of a cumulative dividend of 5 per cent. on the preference shares; (b) of 5 per cent. on the ordinary shares, & (c) of any surplus pari passu to holders of both classes of shares. In a petition by the co. the ct. confirmed the scheme holding that it was not ultra vires to cancel arrears of preference dividend in the manner proposed.—Re OBAN & AULTMORE, GLENLIVET DISTILLERIES, LTD. (1903), 5 F. a. Unequal reduction—Voting power remaining the same—Sanctioned.]—The memorandum of assocn. of a co. incorporated under the Cos. Acts provided that the capital should consist of 6,000 preference shares of £10 each, & 6,000 ordinary shares of £10 each, the preference shares to be entitled to a cumulative preferential 5 per cent. per annum dividend & to priority of repayment of capital in the event of a winding up. By the arts. of assocn. it was provided that the voting power should be one vote for each share, whether preference or ordinary. The whole of the ordinary shares were held by the vendors or the representatives of the vendors, who were also the managers of the co. The co.’s business having greatly depreciated, a resolution was passed by large majorities of both classes of shareholders approving of a scheme for reduction of capital, whereby the preference shares were to be reduced from £10 to £5 10s. & the ordinary shares from £10 to £1. The voting power remained one vote for each share, whether preference or ordinary. A petition for the confirmation of this resolution was opposed by certain special resolution that upon the reduction of capital being sanctioned by the ct. the preference rights attaching to the preference shares & stock should be extinguished, & that the preference stock & ordinary stock resulting from the reduction of capital should forthwith thereafter be consolidated into one consolidated ordinary stock ranking pari passu for all purposes. Those two resolutions were at the same time also passed at separate meetings of each class of preference share & stockholders & ordinary stockholders. The co. then presented a petition for the sanction of the ct. to the resolution reducing its capital. Dissident shareholders opposed on the ground that the second resolution came within sect. 45 of the Act & was ultra vires as it had not been passed in conformity with that sect.

The ct. sanctioned the reduction, holding that the resolutions had been validly passed under the arts. & that sect. 45 did not apply.

The memorandum further provided that the rights for the time attached to the several classes of shares respectively might be modified or dealt with in the manner mentioned in the accompanying arts. of assocn.:—Held: (by C. A.): inasmuch as 1862 Act, s. 8, does not require that the rights of the shareholders inter se shall be stated in the memorandum of a limited co., this power of modification of those rights was valid.

(2) The co. having passed a special resolution for the reduction of its capital, also resolved in accordance with the provisions of the arts. that, after the special resolution had been confirmed by the ct., the rights of the shareholders inter se should be altered in favour of the ordinary shareholders at the expense of the preference shareholders. Some of the preference shareholders opposed the co.'s petition for the confirmation of the reduction because of this alteration of their rights:—Held (by C. Notice of meeting—Sufficiency—Shares of different classes—Resolution affecting incidence of loss.]—The capital of a co. consisted of 100,000 ordinary shares of £10 each, of which 80,659 had been issued & paid up in full, & 100,000 preference shares of £1 each, of which 37,518 had been issued & paid up in full. The preference shares were entitled to a preferential dividend of 10 per cent. per annum, but were not entitled to any preference in respect of capital. The co. having lost paid-up capital to the extent of £80,659, a special resolution was passed that this loss should be written off by reducing the ordinary shares by the sum of £1 each. No reduction was to be made in the preference shares. The special resolution was carried by the unanimous vote of the shareholders who were present in person or by proxy at the first & second meetings respectively. At the first meeting about one-third in value of the shareholders were present in person or by proxy, & at the second meeting about one-fourth. The notices convening the meetings had stated exactly the resolution which it was intended to propose, but they did not call the attention of the shareholders to the fact that the result would be to throw the loss of capital exclusively on the ordinary shareholders. No ordinary shareholder had expressed any dissent from the resolution:—Held: as by the existing constitution of the co. the loss ought to be borne by all the shareholders ratably, & the effect of the resolution would be to alter the constitution of the co. in this respect, & to throw the loss exclusively on the ordinary shareholders, the notices of the meetings were insufficient, & therefore, it would not be fair, as between the ordinary & preference shareholders that the resolution should be confirmed by the ct.

After this decision a circular was sent to every shareholder fully explaining the matter, & stating the effect of the judgment. In reply to this circular 514 ordinary shareholders, the whole number being 621, whose capital amounted to £769,590, assented in writing to the resolution; 103 sent no reply; & the remaining four, who together held 188 shares, expressed their dissent. One of the four, who held 62 shares, afterwards withdrew his opposition. Notice that the petition would be brought on again for hearing was served on the dissentients, but none of them appeared: Held: the resolution ought to be confirmed. *Re QUEBRADA RAILWAY, LAND & COPPER CO. This having been done, the chief clerk certified that a list of creditors had been settled, but that the names of some of the creditors who were holders of the co.'s debentures, being unknown to the co., did not appear on the list. None of them had claimed under sect. 13 of 1867 Act to be entered on the list. Upon the petition coming to be heard, & being unopposed:—Held: (1) the debenture-holders were in the position of creditors, who were now excluded, under sect. 13 from the right of objecting to the proposed reduction.

Other creditors named on the list, whose debts were not yet due, & were secured, had neither assented to, nor dissented from, the proposed reduction:—Held: (2) they were not to be considered creditors “who do not assent,” within sect. 14 of the Act.

970. — — — No diminution of liability on unpaid capital—Or return of paid-up capital.]—Prima facie creditors are not concerned in any question of the reduction of capital where it does not involve the diminution of any liability on respect of any unpaid capital or the payment to any shareholder of any paid-up capital; & though by 1908 Act, s. 49 (1), the ct. may in any other case allow a creditor to object to a reduction, where no such diminution is about to take place it is incumbent on the creditor to make out a strong case before any such direction should be given.

The co. was incorporated with a fully-paid share

capital of £1,000,000, in addition to which it had issued £1,000,000 perpetual debenture stock secured by certain trust deeds constituting a floating security. In 1904 the co. had incurred losses amounting to upwards of £800,000, since which year no dividend had been declared, the profits in each year being applied in reduction of the deficiency, which now amounted to £640,000 or upwards. In 1917, by special resolution, the co. resolved to reduce its capital to £360,000 by writing off the lost capital. The reduction did not involve the diminution of any liability in respect of any unpaid capital or the payment to any shareholder of any paid-up capital. This petition by the co. to confirm the special resolution was opposed by certain holders of debenture stock on the ground that the proposed reduction would be prejudicial to their security by enabling the co. to pay dividends out of profits instead of such profits being applied in making good the lost capital. The assets according to the latest balance-sheet exceeded the amount of the debenture debt by £500,000 & upwards. No evidence was adduced to show what part of the lost capital was attributable to circulating capital:—Held: the holders of the debenture stock were not entitled to object to the reduction.—Re MEUX'S BREWERY Co., [1919] 1 Ch. 28; 88 L. 976. — — — Diminution of liability on unpaid capital.]—The E. Co. was a steamship co., incorporated on Aug. 16, 1880, with a nominal capital of £200,000, divided into 20,000 shares of £10 each. Of these, 5,000 shares of £10 each were issued all fully paid up. The arts. of assocn. provided that the directors should from time to time set aside part of the profits for a reserve fund. The directors had a discretionary power to expend the moneys so set apart in the purchase of additional vessels or otherwise in extending the co.'s trade. By the beginning of 1883 they had accumulated a reserve fund of £50,000. In May, 1883, the directors issued a circular to the shareholders, stating that they intended building two or three new steamers, & for that purpose to complete the issue of the shares of the co. by dividing the reserve fund on June 30 amongst existing shareholders, allotting to each, one share of £10 fully paid for every share held, & by issuing 10,000 additional shares of £10 each. The directors, anticipating that this proposal would be accepted, had in fact, before the resolution hereinafter stated, applied the reserve fund in improving the fleet. On May 16, 1883, the co. duly passed a resolution, that out of the reserve fund as it stood on June 30, there should be allotted to each shareholder £10, in the form of one fully paid-up share for every share held by him in the co. The shares so created were issued & credited as fully paid, & a part of the proposed 10,000 new shares were taken up & fully paid for in cash. In Oct. & Nov. 1892, a special resolution was passed by the co. for reducing its capital by cancelling capital which had been lost to the extent of £5 a share, & reducing the nominal amount of each share from £10 to £5. This was a petition for the confirmation of this reduction. The petition stated that the reduction did not involve the diminution of any liability in respect of unpaid capital, & therefore no list of creditors had been settled:—Held: it did not appear that the directors had power to distribute the reserve fund as dividend without altering the arts. Even if they had such a power, it did not appear that they had exercised it, for under the resolution the shareholders had no option to take their shares of the reserve fund in cash. Therefore these shares might be held to be not fully paid up, & the proposed reduction would or might involve a diminution of liability in respect of unpaid capital, & the petition must stand over till a list of creditors was settled.—*Re EASTERN & AUSTRALIAN S.S. 991. ——— But advisable.]—The practice of the High Ct. in England has not been uniform. My own practice has been to insist on prima facie evidence of the existence of the state of facts referred to in the resolution. If no such prima facie evidence were forthcoming it might well be that the special resolution had been passed under the influence of some mistake or misrepresentation as to the true facts, & it would be unfair to the minority if not also to the majority of the shareholders to confirm a reduction voted under such circumstances. Further, inability to produce some such evidence might well suggest want of bona fides in the matter. If capital not really lost or unrepresented by available assets were cancelled, it might be possible thereafter, by some adjustment of the figures in the co.'s balance-sheet, to carry the amount so cancelled to profit & loss account, & so indirectly return paid-up capital to shareholders, thus affecting the rights of creditors. I think, therefore, that where the reduction of capital is based on the ground that capital has been lost or is unrepresented by available assets, it is, though not necessary, at any rate wise & prudent to insist on some evidence of the fact (LORD PARKER).—*CALDWELL v. 1009. Amount of capital—Before & after reduction.—On Feb. 20, 1888, a petition was presented by a co. asking the ct. to confirm a special resolution passed on Nov. 25, 1887, & confirmed on Dec. 16, for the reduction of capital. On Feb. 21, 1888, on motion, the judge, being satisfied that the reduction of capital proposed did not involve any diminution of liability in respect of unpaid capital, or the payment to any shareholders of any paid-up capital, & the creditors, therefore, not being entitled to object, made this order: "Let the petition be in the paper for hearing on Saturday week, without any advertisement of the notice, & without any certificate as to creditors." On the hearing of the petition:—Held: the minute proposed to be registered should have on the face of it the amount of the original, as well as of the reduced capital.

The reporter to whom the petition was remitted called the attention of the ct. to the question whether, under Companies Act, 1908, s. 48, it was competent for the ct., where the reduction involved a diminution of liability in respect of unpaid capital to dispense altogether with the words “& reduced.” The ct. in granting the prayer of the petition, dispensed altogether with the use of the words “& reduced” as part of the co.’s name.—DON FISHING Co., LTD. & REDUCED, PETITIONERS, [1916] S. 1. What reorganisation authorised—Conversion of deferred into ordinary shares.]—The memorandum of assocn. of a co bore that the share capital of the co. was £5,000 divided into ordinary & deferred shares. The co. being desirous of re-organising its share capital, the holders of the deferred shares surrendered these shares to the co. & the co. passed a special resolution two modes of reorganising share capital, namely, by the consolidation of shares of different classes, & by the division of shares into shares of different classes.

1077. ———.]—The memorandum of a co. provided that its capital should consist of £950,000, divided into 300,000 preferred shares, 300,000 ordinary shares, & 350,000 deferred shares, all of £1 each, with such respective rights as were defined by the arts. The arts. gave a cumulative preferential dividend of 7 per cent. to each of three classes of shareholders in succession & divided the surplus profits between the ordinary & deferred shareholders. The co. proposed a scheme of arrangement between the co. & its ordinary shareholders, under sect. 120 of the above Act, whereby the co. should be authorised to issue 100,000 new ordinary £1 shares to rank equally with the existing ordinary shares, & that, as a consideration, a proportion of the new shares should be issued to the existing ordinary shareholders at par. A meeting of the ordinary shareholders was held under an order of the ct., made on the co.'s application under sect. 120, & a resolution approving the scheme was passed by a majority sufficient to satisfy that sect., but not sufficient to satisfy sect. 45, of the Act. This petition was presented by the co. for the confirmation of the scheme:—Held: (1) the proposed arrangement did not modify the conditions contained in the memorandum & would not be an interference with any preferential rights; (2) it was, therefore, not within sect. 45, & might be sanctioned under sect. 120, of the above Act.

1080. ——— Limitations on dividends—Division of capital into two classes of shares—One class free of restriction.]—Clause 5 of the memorandum of assocn. of a co. provided as follows: "The capital of the co. is £200,000 divided into 20,000 shares of £10 each. The co. has power from time to time to increase or reduce its capital, & to issue any shares in the original or increased capital as ordinary, preferred, or deferred shares, & to attach to any class or classes of such shares any preferences, rights, privileges, or conditions, or to subject the same to any restrictions or limitations. Provided always that no dividend shall be paid on the ordinary shares exceeding £3 per cent. per annum, non-cumulative." The co., which was incorporated in 1907, issued 15,064 ordinary shares of £10 each. In Sept. & Oct., 1922, a special resolution was passed that each of the shares of the co. should be sub-divided into ten shares of £1 each & that the conditions of the co.'s memorandum of assocn. should be modified so that the share capital be reorganised by dividing the same into two classes of shares consisting of 40,000 ordinary shares of £1 each & 160,000 deferred shares of £1 each, of which each existing holder of a share of £10 should receive two ordinary & eight deferred shares, the holders of the ordinary shares to be entitled to receive out of the profits a fixed non-cumulative preferential dividend for each year of 3 per cent., & the surplus profits in each year to be applicable for the payment of dividend to the holders of deferred shares. On a petition to the ct. under sect. 45 of 1908 Act, for confirmation of the special resolution:—Held: the ct. had power under that sect. to confirm the special resolution, & as the only persons interested in any profits in excess of the fixed dividend payable on the ordinary shares were the shareholders themselves, the ct. ought in the exercise of its discretion to confirm the resolution.—Re GARDEN VILLAGE (HULL), LTD., [1923] 1 Ch. 230; 92 L. providing that the clause in the memorandum relating to share capital should be deleted & that in lieu thereof there should be substituted the following clause: "The share capital of the co. is £5,000 divided into 5,000 ordinary shares of £1 each." Thereafter the co. presented a petition praying the ct. "to confirm the alteration of the provisions of the co.'s memorandum of assocn." The Reporter to whom the petition was remitted suggested in his report: (1) that the prayer of the petition should have been for confirmation of the special resolution altering the memorandum & not for confirmation of the alteration; & (2) that the co. had not yet passed a resolution consolidating the ordinary & deferred shares into one class, & that such resolution ought to have been passed before the resolution to alter the memorandum was adopted. The ct. granted the prayer of the petition after it had been amended in terms of the first suggestion of the Reporter.—SCOTTISH INDIA RUBBER Co., LTD., PETITIONERS, [1920] S. C. 1.—SCOT.

N., the chairman of a co. in which substantially all the shares were held by himself & his family, purchased on behalf of the co. the right to a building agreement to be obtained from certain comrs. The comrs. objected to the co. as tenant, & proposed to substitute N., who thereupon sold the benefit of the agreement to the co. at an advance of £10,000, of which £7,000 was spent upon commissions & otherwise in order to obtain the agreement from the comrs., & £3,000 was applied by N. to his own use. A further sum of £3,500 was spent by N. out of the assets of the co. upon his private house. These payments were made out of money borrowed by the co. for the purpose of its business; they were sanctioned by resolutions of the directors, & were approved of by all the shareholders. The arts. contained no power to make presents to directors. Upon a summons taken out by the liquidator in the winding up of the co. against N. under sect. 10 of 1890 (Winding up) Act:—Held: N. was not liable for the £7,000, but was liable for the £3,000 & the £3,500, because the shareholders for the time being had no power to authorise the making of presents to directors out of money borrowed by the co., & because if there had been such power it could be exercised only at a general meeting.—Re NEWMAN (G.) & Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 674; 64 L. 1104. — Company in voluntary liquidation.]—A co. having sold its undertaking & property, the directors sent out to the shareholders notices of an extraordinary general meeting to consider a resolution for the voluntary winding up of the co. with the directors as liquidators, & another resolution determining what sum should be distributed among the officers & servants of the co. The directors also issued circulars inviting shareholders to send their proxies.

At the meeting the resolution for voluntary winding up was duly carried & the chairman & managing director then proposed a resolution that a sum equal to five years' salary should be paid to himself & the secretary & accountant & a further sum be distributed among the servants. This was lost on a show of hands, but carried on a poll.

The directors then sent out notices of a second meeting to confirm these resolutions, & again issued circulars inviting proxies.

At the second meeting the resolution for the payments to the officers & servants was again lost on a show of hands, but carried at a poll.

A dissentient shareholder then brought an action to restrain the directors from giving effect to the resolution on the grounds that its carrying & confirmation were improperly obtained, & that it was ultra vires of the co. & invalid:—Held: the case fell within the principle of *Hutton v. B. Duty to Make Good.

1105. General rule.]—(1) A co. is not prohibited either by statute or general law from paying dividends because its available property at the time of declaring the dividend is of less value than its nominal or share capital.

(2) Where the capital, in the sense of assets, of a co. is in its nature of a wasting character, depreciated by effluxion of time or exhaustion of material—e.g., mines, patent, leasehold—if for the purpose of carrying on the business of the co. & getting a profit the annual consumption of that capital is necessary, then, apart from any regulation in the arts., there is no obligation by law or statute to create a reserve fund out of revenue to recoup the wasting nature of the capital; & the division among the shareholders of the surplus produce of such wasting property, after retaining enough to pay the co.'s creditors, is not a return of capital, & as such prohibited.

(3) There is nothing in the Cos. Acts which requires that the capital shall be made up if lost,

& the mode in which dividends are to be paid & profits calculated is left to be regulated by the commercial world.

(4) Therefore, in considering whether a proposed declaration of dividend is to be treated as a fair division of profits, or as a division of capital under the guise of declaring a dividend, the ct. will have regard to the declaration contained in the arts. of assocn., provided the arts. do not transgress the general law.

(5) A co. is not debtor to capital, although, for the purpose of ascertaining the financial position of a co. it may be properly so put down in its accounts.—*LEE v. In the accounts for the year 1885 a profit was earned upon income account, & the directors proposed to divide it in the shape of dividends:—Held: (1) such disposition of the profit was not ultra vires, & (2) even assuming that upon valuation there should be found a loss of the capital of the co., the co. was not bound to devote the profit to the restoring of the loss.—*BOLTON v. 1108. —.]—A director of a joint stock banking co. in assenting to the payment of dividends out of capital & to advances on improper security, honestly relied on the judgment, information, & advice of the chairman & general manager of the bank, by whose statements he was misled & whose integrity, skill, & competence he had no reason for suspecting:—Held: upon the true view of the facts he was not negligent of his duties as director & was not liable in the winding up.

Semble: a co. is not at liberty to write off to capital losses incurred in previous years, or in any subsequent year, & if the receipts for that year exceed the outgoings, to pay dividends out of such excess without making up the capital account, such a procedure being inconsistent with the provisions of Companies Act, 1877 (c. 26).—*DOVEY v. 1109. Wasting assets—Whether duty to create depreciation fund.—The co. was incorporated with a capital of £1,150,000, divided into 35,000 preference shares & 80,000 ordinary shares of £10 each. By art. 97 the “net profits” of the co. were to be divided in payment of a dividend at seven per cent. on the preferred shares, & subject thereto a like dividend on the ordinary shares, & the surplus of the net profits was to be divided ratably amongst all the shareholders. By art. 98 no such distribution of profits was to be made without the consent of a general meeting, & by art. 99 in the case of any dispute as to the amount of net profits the decision of the co. in general meeting was to be final. Art. 100 empowered the directors, before recommending a dividend on any of the shares, to set aside out of the net profits such funds as they might think proper as a reserve fund, but provided that they should not be bound so to do. The co. worked under a concession terminable in 1907, in the purchase of which & the business of other cos. interested therein, £1,058,303 had been expended. An ordinary shareholder brought this action to prevent the payment of dividends on the preference shares without a sum being set apart to replace the capital expended on the purchase of the concession:—Held: the ct. had no authority to interfere, since, on the arts., the meaning of “net profits” was left to the co. in general meeting, & the question of a reserve fund, to the directors.—*LAMBERT v. 1112. — — — No general rule.—(1) The question whether a co. has profits available for distribution must be answered according to the circumstances of each particular case, the nature of the co., & the evidence of competent witnesses.

(2) Although in some cases fixed capital may be sunk & lost, without precluding the payment of a dividend, circulating capital must be kept up. Semble: there is no distinction in this respect between a realised loss & an estimated loss.

(3) The common art. requiring dividends to be declared by the directors applies to fixed cumulative dividends on preference shares, & the ct. will not readily override the directors' discretion in relation thereto.

(4) Leasehold iron ore mines held by a smelting co. for the purpose of supplying themselves with ore are circulating capital.

(5) There is no general rule of law as to whether a co. owning wasting assets ought or ought not to create a depreciation fund. The question in every case is for the decision of the ct. on evidence.

(6) The necessity for the declaration of a dividend as a condition precedent to an action for the recovery of such dividend applies as well to shares on which a fixed preferential dividend is payable as to ordinary shares.

(7) “Interest” is not an apt word to describe the return to which a shareholder is entitled in respect of shares—preference or ordinary—paid up in due course, & not by way of advance. “Interest” is compensation for delay in payment, & is not accurately applied to a share of profits of trading, although it may be used as an inaccurate mode of expressing the measure of the share of such profits.—*BOND v. 1114. — — —.]—A limited co. was formed, the objects of which were to invest its capital in stocks, funds, shares, & securities of various descriptions, & the receipts of the co. from the incomes of these investments were made applicable to paying a dividend. The market price of some of the investments of the co. fell, & others of them proved worthless, so that the value of the co.'s assets was materially diminished; but the income received from the investments for the year considerably exceeded the expenses of the year. One of the trustees of the co. brought an action on behalf of himself & all the other stockholders in the co., except defts., against the co. & the other trustees to restrain the co. from declaring a dividend, on the ground that until the loss of capital was made up a payment of dividend would be a payment out of capital:—Held: it was within the power of the co. to declare a dividend, for there is no law to prevent a co. from sinking its capital in the purchase of a property producing income & dividing that income without making provision for keeping up the value of the capital; & fixed capital may be sunk & lost, & yet the excess of current receipts over current expenses may be applied in payment of a dividend, though where the income of a co. arises from the turning over of circulating capital no dividend can be paid unless the circulating capital is kept up to its original value, as otherwise there would be a payment of dividend out of capital.—VERNER v.

1119. ———.]—The arts. of assocn. of a limited tramway co. provided that no dividend should be declared except "out of profits"; that the directors should, with the sanction of the co., declare annual dividends "out of profits"; & that the directors should, before recommending a dividend, set aside "out of profits," subject to the sanction of the co. "a reserve fund for maintenance, repairs, depreciation, & renewals." The co. had for several years carried on their business, paying dividend half-yearly on their ordinary shares; but they failed to set apart a reserve fund adequate for the maintenance of their tramway, which eventually became worn out. The co. having again declared a half-yearly dividend on their ordinary shares, & the total sum appropriated for the dividend being, as it appeared, much less than the sum required to reinstate the tramway:—Held: the co. could only declare a dividend out of the net profits, & the net profits could not be ascertained without first restoring the tramway to an efficient condition, or making due provision for the purpose out of the co.'s assets.

An injunction was accordingly granted restraining the co. from paying the half-yearly dividend they had declared, but leave was given them to move to dissolve the injunction, in the event of their being able to satisfy the ct., that there were profits available for the dividend:—Held: the holders of preference shares, the dividend on which was "dependent on the profits of the particular year only," were entitled to a dividend out of the profits of any year after setting aside a proportionate amount sufficient for the maintenance of the tramway for that year only; & were not to be deprived of that dividend in order to make good the sums which in previous years should have been set aside by the co. for maintenance, but which had been improperly applied by them in paying dividends.—DENT v. (2) Depreciation in the value of the leases & goodwill of a co. is a loss of "fixed" as distinguished from "floating" capital. The balance-sheet of a co. cannot, therefore, be impeached on the ground that it does not charge anything against revenue in respect of depreciation of goodwill.—WILMER v. 1123. Debenture interest paid out of capital for several years—Duty to replace—Before payment of dividends on ordinary shares.]—The principal mine of a mining co. fell in, rendering further working impossible without a previous expenditure of large sums of money in reopening it. To obtain the necessary funds for this purpose the capital of the co. was increased by the issue of shares & debentures, & ultimately the mine was reopened & working recommenced. From the date of the issue of the debentures to the date of the reopening of the mine the co. made no profits & the interest on the debentures was paid out of capital. When the working recommenced, profits were made & the debenture interest & all outgoings were paid out of income. The directors then proposed to pay a dividend out of the profits for the year, & to carry over the remainder to a sinking fund which they opened, with the object of recouping the amount paid out of capital for interest on the debentures. Upon a motion for an injunction to restrain them from paying a dividend out of profits until the amount paid out of capital for debenture interest in previous years had been repaid:—Held: the co. were not bound to apply profits in replacing the amount paid out of capital for debenture interest in previous years, before declaring a dividend.—BOSANQUET v. SUB-SECT. 7.—CAPITALISATION OF RESERVES.

1124. Appropriation of undivided profits—On issue of new shares—Whether taken as capital or income—As between tenant for life & remainderman.]—Testator bequeathed his residuary personal estate to his exor. B. in trust for testator's wife for her life & after her death to B. Part of the residuary estate consisted of shares in a co. whose directors had power, before recommending a dividend, to set apart out of the profits such sum as they thought proper as a reserve fund, for meeting contingencies, equalising dividends or repairing or maintaining the works. After testator's death the directors of the co. proposed to distribute certain accumulated profits, which had been temporarily capitalised, as a bonus dividend, to allot new shares, partly paid-up, to each shareholder, & to apply the bonus dividend in part payment of the new shares. This proposal was carried out, & with B.'s consent new shares were allotted to him & registered in his name, the bonus dividend on testator's old shares being applied in part payment of the new shares:—Held: looking at all the circumstances the real nature of the transaction was that the co. did not pay or intend to pay any sum as dividend, but intended to, & did, appropriate the undivided profits as an increase of the capital stock; the bonus dividend was therefore capital of testator's estate, & the life tenant was not entitled to the bonus or the new shares.—*BOUCH v. SUB-SECT. 9.—STAMP DUTIES.

1125. "Registered capital"—How calculated.—By Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 112, "a statement of the amount which is to form the nominal share capital of any co. to be registered with limited liability shall be delivered to the Registrar of Joint Stock Cos., & a statement of the amount of any increase of registered capital now registered or to be registered with limited liability shall be delivered to the registrar, & every such statement shall be charged with an ad valorem stamp duty of 2s. for every £100 of the amount of such capital or increase of capital, as the case may be."

The arts. of assocn. of a co. gave the directors power, with the sanction of a general meeting, to increase the capital of the co. by the creation & issue of new shares. A resolution was passed at a general meeting of the co. that "the directors be, & they are hereby authorised to, increase the capital of the co. by an amount not exceeding the nominal sum of £5,000,000, by the creation & issue from time to time of new ordinary shares of £5 each." The directors thereupon passed a resolution that "the capital of the co. be increased by £200,000 by the creation & issue of 40,000 new ordinary shares of £5 each"; on July 1, 1908, the directors passed a further resolution increasing the capital by £2,800,000. The Crown claimed stamp duty under the above Act, in respect of an increase of capital of £5,000,000. Defts. contended that they were only bound to pay stamp duty in respect of an increase of capital of £3,000,000, the amount of capital actually created & issued by the directors of the co.:—Held: "registered capital" in the above Act, meant authorised capital, i.e., maximum amount of capital which the co. had power to issue; & by the resolution of the co. there had been an increase of that capital by £5,000,000, upon which sum ad valorem stamp duty was payable.—*A.-G. v. 1126. Payment by solicitor—How charged.—A payment by a solr., who is instructed by the promoter of a co. to act for him in relation to the formation & registration of the co. under the Cos. Acts, of the stamp duty payable on the registration of the co. on the amount of its nominal share capital under Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 112, as extended by Finance Act, 1899 (c. 9), s. 7, ought not to be included in the solr.'s bill of costs as a "disbursement" within the meaning of Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 37, but should be entered in the cash account.—Re BLAIR & GIRLING, [1906] 2 K. SECT. 11.—UNDERWRITING AND BROKERAGE.

NOTE.—Prior to Jan. 1, 1901, it was uncertain how far a company might lawfully pay an underwriting commission for getting its capital subscribed. By 1900 Act, s. 8, such a commission was authorised upon any offer of shares to the public for subscription provided it was authorised by the articles of association & the amount or rate per cent. was disclosed in the prospectus: see, now, 1908 Act, s. 89.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DEFINITIONS.

1127. Underwriting—Agreement to take shares offered to public—But not applied for.—After the formation of a co., & before its shares had been fully offered to the public, H. & Co. by letter agreed with an agent of the co. to "underwrite" 10,000 shares "at 15 per cent. discount." & "to pay the application money upon any balance of shares required to make up the 10,000." In pursuance of this agreement, & without any further application by H. & Co., 8,555 shares were allotted to them. H. & Co. returned the allotment notice, & wrote declining to take the shares. The co. shortly afterwards went into liquidation, & the liquidator entered the name of H. & Co. upon the list of contributories in respect of these shares:—Held: (1) the agreement to underwrite must be treated not merely as a guarantee, but as an application for an allotment of so many of the 10,000 shares as should not be applied for by the public, & such agreement authorised the secretary to issue an allotment to H. & Co.; (2) the word "discount" in the agreement must be construed as "commission," so that the agreement was not one to issue shares at a discount; & accordingly, (3) H. & Co. had been rightly settled upon the list of contributories.—Re LICENSED VICTUALLERS' MUTUAL TRADING ASSOCN., Ex p. AUDAIN (1889), 42 Ch. 1128. ————.]—(1) To "underwrite" shares is to agree to take shares, which have been offered to, but not applied for by, the public.

(2) The obligation of the Paris Co. to endeavour to procure the public to take the shares before calling on the Globe Co. existed as to all the shares which that co. underwrote & had the option of taking. There remains the question whether the Paris Co. has any legal justification for not appealing to the public. Its obligation to do so rests on its own express agreement to issue 250,000 shares, which involves an issue to the public, not only of one-half, but also of all of the other half which the Paris Co.'s members did not take; & even if it were proved that none would have been taken, still, the condition was a condition precedent, & unless performed the obligation to arise on its performance, never became perfect (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re LONDON-PARIS FINANCIAL MINING CORPN., LTD. A. On Formation of New Company.

(a) Commission.

1130. Before 1900 Act—For placing shares—To person in fiduciary relationship to company.]—A co. being unable to get its shares taken up, the directors resolved that a commission of 2s. 6d. per share should be paid to any one who should find persons to take the shares. B., the secretary & solr. of the co., accordingly made a proposal for the allotment of 2,000 shares to a client of his. The directors passed a resolution that the offer should be accepted, & that £250, being commission at 2s. 6d. per share, should be paid to B. The shares were duly allotted to K., the co.'s engineer, & by him transferred to R. B., who was chairman of the company, & also B.'s father. The directors knew that R. B. was the person who was really taking the shares. The co. was wound up, & upon a summons taken out by the liquidator for that purpose:—Held: B. must repay the liquidator the £250 commission.—Re STAPLEFORD COLLIERY CO., LTD., Ex p. CHATTERIS (1880), 49 L. J. Ch. 253.

1131. ———— Payment out of capital—Power under memorandum to do acts "conducive to" objects of company—Ultra vires.]—(1) If directors of a limited co. apply the money of the co. for purposes so outside its powers that the co. could not sanction such application, they may be made personally liable as for a breach of trust; but if they apply the money of the co., or exercise any of its powers, in a manner which is not ultra vires, then a strong & clear case of misfeasance must be made out to render them liable for a loss thereby occasioned to the co.

(2) Payment of brokerage or commission to a stockbroker for placing a co.'s shares, is an improper application of its capital, & is not authorised even by a power given by the memorandum of assocn. to do whatever may be "conducive to" the specified objects of the co.

The memorandum of assocn. of a limited co. empowered the co. to carry on the businesses there specified & "to do all such other things as the co. may deem conducive to the attaining of any of the aforesaid objects." The arts. of assocn. provided that no transfers of shares not fully paid up should be registered unless "approved" by the directors. M., a stockjobber, offered to take a large number of £10 shares at par, paying £2 per share at once, provided the directors paid a commission to the stockbroker who had introduced the shares to him. Thereupon the directors allotted the shares to M., he paying £2 per share, & they paid a commission of 2s. 6d. per share to the stockbroker, the total amount of commission so paid being considerable. M. subsequently transferred the shares to P., who was already a shareholder & had recently been elected a director, the directors believing that P. was a proper person to take a transfer of the shares & having been advised by their solr. that there was no valid objection to the transfer. P. afterwards became bkpt., being indebted to the co. in the balance of £8 per share. The co. having been ordered to be wound up, the liquidators took out a summons under 1862 Act, s. 165, against the directors other than P. claiming damages for misfeasance in sanctioning the transfer of the shares to P., & also repayment of the sums paid for brokerage or commission on the shares as being ultra vires:—Held: the directors had duly exercised their judgment upon & "approved" the transfer to P. within the meaning of the arts., & dishonest dealing not being charged, the approval of the transfer was not such a "misfeasance" or breach of trust within 1862 Act, s. 165, as to render the directors liable in the winding up; but the payment of commission on the shares was ultra vires, & the directors must repay the same to the liquidators, with interest at 4 per cent.—Re FAURE ELECTRIC ACCUMULATOR CO. 1132. — By certain date—Commission paid through shares placed after date—Repayable.]

—The directors of a co. made an agreement with G., whereby he undertook the expense of issuing a prospectus inviting subscriptions for the capital, & the co. agreed that if 2,000 shares were subscribed for on or before Apr. 30, 1886, G. should be paid a sum of £1,000. The directors also resolved to pay a brokerage on the shares placed. A small proportion only of the stipulated number of shares was subscribed for under the prospectus issued by G., but a substantial amount of capital was placed under another prospectus issued after Apr. 30, 1886. The directors, in June, 1886, paid G. the sum of £1,000, & a further sum of £221 for brokerage:—Held: each of those payments was a misapplication of the property of the co., & the amounts must be repaid by G. to the co.—*WEST OF ENGLAND PAPER MILLS CO., LTD. v. 1137. — Commission for placing shares—Paid in fully-paid shares—Invalid.]—The P. P. T. Co. was incorporated in 1905, & by its memorandum of assocn. one of the objects of the co. was "to remunerate any parties for services rendered in placing or assisting to place shares in the co.'s capital"; & by art. 9 of its arts. of assocn. it was provided that "if the co. shall at any time offer any of its shares to the public for subscription, the co. may pay a commission not exceeding 100 per cent. in consideration of any person or co. subscribing or agreeing to subscribe, whether absolutely or conditionally, or procuring or agreeing to procure subscriptions absolute or conditional for such shares." In the middle of the year 1908, the co. being desirous to obtain further capital, S., a shareholder, introduced C. as one who might obtain purchasers of shares or take up unissued shares at a premium; & in Nov. 1908, two documents were entered into between the co. & C., one being an option given to C. in reference to unissued shares, the other being in reference to commission. Subsequently C. obtained D., who was willing to take up 3,000 unissued shares at £2 per share, & thereupon in accordance with the terms of the second document of Nov., there became payable to C. for commission 10s. per share, i.e. £1,500, & it was arranged that, instead of paying C. £1,500 in cash, the co. should issue to C. 1,000 of the remaining unissued shares:—Held: upon the true construction of the above sect. such commission could not be paid to C.—*SHORTO v. 1139. — Commission for securing subscriptions—Whether brokerage or commission.]—The arts. of assocn. of a private co. provided that it should be lawful for the co. to pay a commission to any person in consideration of his procuring subscriptions for any shares in the co. to any amount not exceeding 5s. per share. The co., by a letter signed by their secretary, offered to pltf., who was a feme sole, not carrying on any business, a commission of 10 per cent. in consideration of her being the means of providing the sum of £3,000 or any other sum that they might accept from her introduction. The amount or rate per cent. of this commission was not disclosed in any statement as prescribed in sub-sect. 1 of the above sect. A certain person introduced by pltf. advanced a sum of £4,600 to the co., who at first proposed to issue debentures but subsequently allotted him 4,600 £1 shares in respect thereof. The co. paid to pltf. £200 commission. Pltf. sued the co. for the balance of £260 commission. The co. counterclaimed for the £200 paid by them as aforesaid:—Held: (1) the commission was not brokerage within sub-sect. 3 of the above sect.; (2) it was commission within sub-sect. 1; (3) not having been disclosed in any statement as prescribed by sub-sect. 1, it was unlawful under sub-sect. 2 & consequently, pltf. could not recover the balance of £260, & the co. could not recover the £200 already paid to pltf.

[The cases which fall within sect. 89 (3) are cases] such as commission to stockbrokers, bankers, & the like, who exhibit prospectuses & send them to their customers, & by whose mediation the customers are induced to subscribe. 1140. Duty of auditors in regard to—To see payment authorised—Examination of memorandum & articles.]—Auditors of a co. are bound to know or make themselves acquainted with their duties under the co.'s arts. & under the Cos. Acts for the time being in force, & if the audited balance-sheets do not show the true financial position of the co., & damage is thereby occasioned, the onus is on the auditors to show that this damage is not the result of any breach of duty on their part.

Auditors are prima facie responsible for ultra vires payments made on the faith of their balance-sheet, but whether, & to what extent, they are responsible for not discovering & calling attention to the illegality of payments made prior to the audit must depend on the special circumstances of each case.

The payment of a commission for placing shares was authorised by the co.'s memorandum & a board resolution. In reliance on the memorandum & resolution the auditors passed certain payments for commission in their balance-sheet without discovering & drawing attention to the fact that they were not authorised by Table A. (1906), by which in default of arts. the co. was regulated:—Held: in the special circumstances, the auditors were not liable for this omission.

A solr. who became a director three months after the incorporation of the co. was subsequently paid certain sums for agreed costs of incorporation & other sums for costs, rent of office, & clerical assistance. These payments were confirmed as such by boards of which the solr. was a member. The auditors passed these payments in their balance-sheet without discovering, appreciating, & drawing attention to the fact that as there was no power under Table A. (1906) for a director to contract with the co., the solr. could not charge profit costs, so that the payments to him were pro tanto unauthorised:—Held: in the special circumstances, the auditors were not liable.—Re BOLIVIA REPUBLIC EXPLORATION SYNDICATE, LTD., [1914] 1 Ch. 139; 83 L. B. On Reconstruction.

1143. Before 1901—Commission payable out of assets of old company—Whether permissible.]

(2) The ct. will be very slow to sanction a scheme of reconstruction & arrangement which involves the payment of a commission for underwriting the shares in the new co. out of the assets of the old co.

1144. Under 1900 Act—Sale for shares in new company & cash—Cash applicable as commission for guarantors—Not permissible.]—A limited co. formed in 1898, having by its memorandum power to sell its undertaking either for cash or for "shares in any co." entered into an agreement, with a view to reconstruction, with certain "guarantors," for the sale to them of its undertaking, the purchasers agreeing to form a new co. for the repurchase of the undertaking in consideration of the allotment & issue, to such members of the old co. as should accept the same, of partly paid-up shares in the new co., with power for the liquidator of the old co., on its being wound up, to sell any shares not accepted by its members. To carry out that agreement a new co. was formed in 1902, with power, by its memorandum, to pay out of its funds all expenses it might incur having regard to sect. 8 of the above Act, including commission for underwriting shares; & clause 9 of its arts. provided that if at any time it should offer its shares to the public for subscription the directors might pay a commission at a "rate" not exceeding 50 per cent. to any person in consideration of subscribing or agreeing to subscribe for shares. An agreement was then entered into between the guarantors, the original purchasers, & the 1902 co. for the "sale" to that co. of the undertaking of the 1898 co. in consideration of the 1902 co. allotting & issuing to the guarantors its shares, partly paid-up, for distribution among the members of the 1898 co., the guarantors agreeing that they by themselves or their nominees would accept an allotment of such of the shares as should not be required by the 1898 co. or its liquidator; & as the balance of the consideration for the sale, the 1902 co. agreed to pay the guarantors "£12,300 in cash." Soon after the date of that agreement the 1898 co. passed resolutions for a voluntary winding up. No prospectus of the 1902 co. had yet been issued offering any of its shares to the public for subscription. In an action to restrain the carrying out of the latter agreement as being ultra vires:—Held: the sale of the undertaking of the 1898 co., so far as it was in consideration of partly paid-up shares in the 1902 co., was authorised by the memorandum of the former co.; but the additional consideration of the payment by the 1902 co. of £12,300 in cash was ultra vires on the grounds that it was prohibited by sect. 8 (2) of the above Act, as being “commission in consideration of subscribing or agreeing to subscribe for shares”; & that there had been no such “offer of shares to the public for subscription” as to bring the 1902 co. within the protection of sub-sect. 1 of the above sect.; & that the sum of cash was not a “rate” within clause 9 of that co.’s arts.

An injunction was therefore granted restraining the 1902 co. from applying its capital in payment of the £12,300, but without prejudice to any question as to whether the co. could by any means bring the payment within sub-sect. 1.

Under 1908 Act—Sale for partly paid shares in new company—Guarantee to take up shares not applied for by shareholders in old company—Commission permissible.]—In 1909 a limited co. was formed having by its memorandum a power to pay out of its funds all expenses incident to its formation & the issue of its capital, including commissions for underwriting shares whether issued for cash or credited as partly paid; & clause 8 of its arts. provided that the co. might pay a commission at a rate of not exceeding 25 per cent. on the amount unpaid on any shares to any person in consideration of his subscribing or agreeing to subscribe for shares. The capital of the co. was divided into shares of 5s. each. The formation of this new co. was part of a scheme for the reconstruction of an old co. of the same name that was to go into liquidation for the purpose, & it was also part of the scheme that the liquidator should sell the undertaking of the old co., whose capital had been issued in shares of 5s. each, to the new co. for a certain number of shares in the new co. credited with 3s. 6d. paid up per share to be offered to the shareholders of the old co., share for share. The new co., to ensure working capital & before contracting to purchase the undertaking of the old co., entered into an agreement with certain parties called “contractors,” which recited the scheme & provided (clause 2) that, if the shareholders of the old co. should not within a certain period apply for 400,000 shares in the new

co. credited with 3s. 6d. paid per share, the liquidator should endeavour to sell to other persons such of the 400,000 shares as should not be so applied for, & if the liquidator should be unable to sell all the said shares within three days after the expiration of such period, the contractors would within three days thereafter purchase at a price to be agreed, not exceeding ½d. a share, so many of the said shares as should not be so applied for by the shareholders of the old co. or sold by the liquidator; apply to the new co. for an allotment of the same; pay the sum of 3d. per share on application for the same; & (clause 3) that when the whole of the 400,000 shares should have been applied for by shareholders of the old co. or by purchasers or by the contractors, & the moneys payable on application should have been received, then the liability of the contractors under clause 2 should cease, & the new co. should thereupon pay the contractors “a sum equal to 10 per cent. upon £30,000 the amount of the cash assesment on the said 400,000 shares.” No prospectus of the new co. had been issued offering any of its shares to the public for subscription. The form bore that the contract & application should be irrevocable on the part of the sub-underwriter. The underwriters filled up a docket accepting the underwriting of the shares, but did not intimate the acceptance

They subsequently transmitted the letter of application & the cheque to the issuing co. without notice of the sub-underwriting contract, & the co. allotted the shares to the sub-underwriter. the underwriter to apply for the shares was a condition precedent to the obligation on his part to sign & lodge the application for the shares with a cheque for the deposit; & without such a request & a failure to comply with it, the promoters had no authority to make any application for shares in the underwriter's name. Although in an ordinary case to constitute a contract by correspondence there must be a proposal, an acceptance of the proposal, & a communication of that acceptance, yet, in a case where an underwriting letter had been retained by the promoters of a co. without objecting to it, the inference drawn by the ct. from the circumstances was that by the retention of the underwriting letter the promoters signified their acceptance of the terms embodied therein, & the underwriter so understood the transaction; for had the promoters meant to reject the underwriting letter they would have been bound to return it without delay.—*Re BULFONTEIN SUN DIAMOND MINE, LTD., Ex p. Whether authority revocable.]—P. promoted a co. for the purpose of purchasing from him, & working, a mining property. On Feb. 21, 1896, C. signed an underwriting letter addressed to P. by which he agreed, in consideration of a commission, to subscribe for 1,000 shares in the co., such number to be reduced according to the number of shares taken by the public. C. further agreed that the agreement & application should be irrevocable, & notwithstanding any repudiation by him, should be sufficient to authorise P. to apply for shares on behalf of C. & the co. to allot them. P. by letter accepted these terms. The co. was incorporated on Mar. 24, & the subscription list was advertised to open on Mar. 27, & close on Mar. 30. On Mar. 27, C., who had applied for 1,000 shares, stopped the cheque he had given for the deposit, & on Mar. 30, wrote to P. & to the secretary of the co. repudiating the agreement. P., however, on Apr. 2, applied on behalf of C. for 980 shares, which, in the events which had happened, was the number he was bound to take, according to the terms of the letter, & the co. allotted these shares to C. & put him on the register in respect of them:—Held: C. was rightly placed on the register & was not entitled to have his name removed, for the authority given to P. by the underwriting letter to apply for shares on behalf of C. was an authority coupled with an interest, & therefore not revocable.—Re HANNAN'S EMPRESS GOLD MINING & DEVELOPMENT CO., CARMICHAEL'S CASE, [1896] 2 Ch. 643; 65 L. By a sub-underwriting letter applt. agreed with the syndicate to subscribe 10,000 of the 150,000 shares underwritten by them & stated: "We now hand you application for the shares hereby underwritten by us together with cheque for £1,250, being deposit of 2s. 6d. per share." The letter also provided that applt. was only to be allotted & pay for so many of the 10,000 shares as should be his due proportion of the shares not taken up by the public, & that he was to receive a commission on the shares sub-underwritten by him. The letter also contained this clause: "This contract & our said application shall, notwithstanding any withdrawal on our part &/or any repudiation of our responsibility hereunder, or under the said application form, be sufficient to authorise & empower the directors to allot to us the above-mentioned shares & enter our name in the register of members in respect thereof." Applt. did not in fact sign or hand to the syndicate any written application to the co. for the 10,000 shares as contemplated by the sub-underwriting letter, but he handed to the syndicate the letter together with his cheque for £1,250 in their favour. On the issue of the prospectus only 55,000 shares were applied for by intimation by the underwriters to him of their acceptance of his proposal, & therefore they had no right to pass on his application for shares to the co.:—Held: (1) in the circumstances the dealings of the parties precluded defender from denying that he knew of the underwriters' acceptance; (2) that the letter of application was a firm not conditioned by the subunderwriting letter, & the co. were therefore entitled to allot shares to the full amount applied for.—PREMIER BRIQUETTE CO. v. GRAY, [1922] S. C. 329.—SCOT.

the public. On Dec. 12 the syndicate verbally applied in their own name & in the names of several sub-underwriters, including applt., for an allotment of the total amount of the shares which they were bound to take up & paid with their own cheque for the total amount of the application money. On the same day the co. allotted to applt. 6,334, being his proportion of the 10,000 shares under his sub-underwriting letter. On Dec. 22, applt. wrote to the co. withdrawing his application for shares, meaning his sub-underwriting letter, but on Dec. 29 the co. sent him the usual formal notice of the allotment to him of 6,334 shares. On motion by applt. to rectify the register by removing his name therefrom as the holder of the 6,334 shares:—Held: the authority given by applt. to the syndicate to apply for shares was a continuing & irrevocable authority coupled with an interest which he was not entitled to withdraw, & the general rule that an appct. for shares can withdraw his application at any time before he receives notice of allotment did not apply.—Re OLYMPIC REINSURANCE CO., [1920] 2 Ch. 341; 89 L. Co., & allotment made on or before Sept. 30. No notice of the acceptance of this offer was sent to S., but a form of acceptance at the foot of it was signed by the secretary of the M. Co. The C. Co. having been registered, the M. Co., without any previous notice to S., applied on his behalf for an allotment to him of shares in the C. Co., & 9,000 shares were accordingly allotted to him & registered in his name. Upon a motion by S. to rectify the register by omitting his name:—Held: (1) the underwriting letter did not constitute a contract binding S. to take shares until it had been accepted by the M. Co. & notice of acceptance had been given to him; (2) the authority to the M. Co. to apply for shares in his name did not arise until he had been informed by that co. of the number of shares for which they accepted his offer, & he had failed to apply himself for that number; (3) he was not estopped as against the C. The agreement contained provisions that if the whole issue of shares was bond fide subscribed for by the public, A.'s responsibility was to cease, & no allotment to be made to him; & that if the public should not subscribe the full amount of the issue, but should bond fide subscribe any smaller amount, A.'s undertaking was to stand for the number of shares constituting his pro rata contribution with the other underwriters to make up the difference between the amount subscribed by the public & the amount underwritten; & that the agreement should be irrevocable on A.'s part, & sufficient in itself to authorise L., in the event of A.'s not applying for shares as above-mentioned to apply for such shares in his name & on his behalf. A. made no application for shares. The public applied only for a small part of the capital underwritten. After the list was closed L. applied in A.'s name for 164 shares, & the co. allotted them to A., sending him notice that they were allotted in pursuance of his underwriting agreement. A. brought an action to have his name removed from the register on the ground that he had only agreed to take a proportion of the shares which the public had not applied for, & had had no notice how many the public had applied for, & no opportunity of exercising his option to subscribe himself or find other subscribers:—Held: A.'s obligation under the contract was to apply for shares the first day the list opened, & therefore, no such notice was necessary to enable him to discharge it or to exercise his option, & the shares had been rightly allotted to him.—*SHAW v. they were not applied for by the public, a commission being payable to C. & Son. The prospectus offered the shares to the public at a premium of 1s. per share. C. & Son entered into various sub-underwriting contracts, among them one with B., whereby he agreed to subscribe at par for, or obtain responsible subscribers for, 30,000 shares upon the terms of the prospectus, & to be bound by the prospectus, & to take up a proportion of the shares not applied for by the public, & a commission was to be paid. The prospectus stated the underwriting contract with C. & Son & that they had entered into sub-underwriting contracts. B. paid C. & Son a cheque for the amount of the application money on the underwritten shares. C. & Son put in an application on behalf of B. for 30,000 shares, with others, upon the terms of his sub-underwriting contract, & paid the cheque to the co., & 23,375 shares were allotted to B. The allotment letter stated that the allotment was made upon the terms of the prospectus. The co. claimed from B. the balance of the sum payable per share on allotment after allowing for the money paid. B. claimed that he had only undertaken to sub-underwrite the shares at par, & moved under 1908 Act, s. 32, that the register of members of the co. should be rectified by expunging his name. It was decided that, this being a case where the interests of third parties were concerned, it was not for the ct. to exercise discretionary jurisdiction conferred upon it by the above sect., in the absence of C. & Son, even if satisfied, but that B. must seek to enforce his claim in an action to which C. & Son could be made parties. The appct. appealed:—Held: the insertion of the words "at par" in B.'s sub-underwriting contract did not avail him, & must be rejected as being inconsistent with the rest of the document; & therefore his claim to have the register of members of the co. rectified was not maintainable.—*Re GREATER BRITAIN INSURANCE CORPN., LTD., Ex p. By an agreement dated Nov. 30, 1912, W. agreed with a French co. to form within seven days an English co. with a capital of £105,000 divided into 100,000 ordinary shares of £1 & 100,000 participation shares of 1s. each; to place the ordinary share capital in three blocks of shares by certain short dates; to procure the English co. to enter into a contract of purchase with the French co. in the terms of an agreed draft; & that he should be at liberty to receive from the English co. 5 per cent. of its ordinary shares fully paid up for forming that co. & procuring the contract, & by an agreement dated Dec. 9, 1912, W. agreed with the English co. to procure the French co. to enter into the contract of purchase in the terms of the agreed draft in consideration of being allotted 5,000 fully-paid ordinary shares of the co. By another agreement, also dated Dec. 9, 1912, the French co. agreed to sell to the English co. certain rights in consideration, inter alia, of being paid in cash 10 per cent. of the ordinary share capital of the English co. as & when subscribed, & the agreement was upon the express condition that the ordinary share capital should be subscribed in three blocks of shares by the dates specified in the agreement of Nov. 30, 1912. On Dec. 10, 1912, the English co. was registered with the stipulated capital & with the object of carrying into effect the two agreements of Dec. 9, 1912. Its arts. authorised the payment to any person of a commission not exceeding 10 per cent. for procuring subscriptions for its share capital. Its prospectus, issued the same day, offered 50,000 ordinary shares for subscription at par, & stated that no underwriting commission had been or would be paid, & also that part of the purchase consideration was 5,000 fully paid up shares to be allotted to W. for forming the co. W. placed the first block of shares & died in Feb. without placing any further shares. A claim by the French co. to prove against his estate, which was being administered in bkpcy., for damages for breach of the agreement of Nov. 30, 1912, was objected to by the trustee on the grounds that that agreement was a contract personal to W. which determined at his death, & that the three agreements were one transaction which was in contravention of sect. 89 of 1908 Act:—Held: (1) the agreement of Nov. 30 was not a contract personal to W., but was enforceable against his exors., for the breach of which damages would lie; (2) the three agreements did not form a scheme which was in contravention of 1908 Act, s. 89; & (3) even if there was such a scheme, the commission of 5,000 shares payable to W. was sufficiently disclosed in the prospectus.—*Re WORTHINGTON, Ex p. 1181. Married woman.]—The separate estate of a married woman is bound by her debts, obligations, & engagements, contracted for herself upon the credit of that estate; & whether such obligations were so contracted must be judged of by the circumstances of each particular case. There is nothing in the nature of a joint-stock co., in the absence of any special clauses in the deed of settlement, to prevent a married woman being a shareholder in her own right, so as to bind her separate estate. Therefore, where a married woman, having separate estate, contracted to take shares in her own name in a joint stock co., which was afterwards wound up: the ct., being of opinion that such contract was entered into upon the credit of her separate estate, & that the deed of settlement did not exclude married women from being shareholders so as to bind their separate estate, placed the married woman on the list of contributories in her own right, so as to bind her separate estate.—Re LEEDS BANKING CO., MATTHEWMAN'S CASE (1866), L. The co. was registered on Mar. 5, 1885, & went into liquidation in July, 1886. In his affidavit E. stated that he had been induced to sign the memorandum & arts. of assocn. by P. who was a promoter of the co., & who had promised to give him a fully paid-up share as the share he had signed for; that in Mar. 1886, P. had accordingly handed him the certificate of a fully paid-up share; that the share was one out of 100 fully paid-up shares which were given by the co. to P. in part payment of money due to him from the co., & that the share was duly entered in the share register of the co. as having been fully paid-up on Sept. 18, 1885. was liable in respect of the share. The transaction between him & P. did not bind or affect the co. The present of a paid-up share by a third party did not satisfy the obligation of a subscriber of the memorandum. The issue of the certificate did not estop the co. so long as the certificate had not passed to a bona fide transferee for value. If E. had not, in fact, paid money or money's worth for the one share subscribed for, the co. was still entitled to prove the non-payment, & claim the value of the share; (2) as there were left shares available for allotment, the fact that none had been allotted to E. made no difference, & the liquidator was entitled to hold him to the contract which he had made with the co. when he signed the memorandum.—Re BOMBAY ELECTRICAL CO., LTD., ELMORE'S CASE (1888), 1 L. Subsequently to the receipt of the notice, the memorandum & arts. of assocn. so signed by deft. & others were presented for registration; but registration was refused on the ground that the documents were not printed. A printed copy of each was then procured & registered. The registered copies differed, in respect of the signatures subscribed thereto, from the copies signed by deft. Deft.'s name was put upon the register of the co. as the holder of 101 shares, but without deft.'s assent or knowledge, & two calls were made upon him in respect of the said shares. Deft. denied that he was a member of the co. or liable for calls.—Held: deft. was not a member of pltf. co., as a "subscriber of the memorandum of assocn." under the earlier part of Indian Cos. Act, sect. 22, inasmuch as the memorandum there referred to was the registered memorandum, of which the document signed by deft. was not even a true copy.—*GUZERAT SPINNING & WEAVING CO. v. t. —.]—On Apr. 13, 1886, L. signed a printed copy of the proposed memorandum of assocn. of a projected co. for ten shares, which was registered on Aug. 3. On that day L. received a notice from the secretary of the co., informing him that the co. had been duly registered & requesting him to pay R.100 as the deposit on the shares subscribed by him. On Aug. 5, L. replied, stating that he had decided not to take up the shares. On Aug. 6 the secretary wrote to L., stating that he had already become a shareholder, & could not withdraw. On Sept. 25 the directors held their first meeting, & resolved that the shares applied for be allotted, & application & allotment money be called in. On Oct. 1 the secretary notified to L. the allotment of ten shares, & requested him to pay the overdue deposit call of R.10 per share & the allotment call of R.15 per share. L. refused to pay, & repudiated his liability in respect of the shares. He contended that he had never become a member of the co.:—Held: deft. was not a member of the co., & was not liable to pltf.'s claim. e. Signature in blank—Effect of.]—L. signed the arts. of assocn. of a co. in blank & authorised the secretary to insert opposite his name such number of shares as might be necessary in order to obtain the registration of the co. The secretary acted on the authority. Liquidation having supervened, it was contended that L. had agreed to accept, as portion of the shares subscribed by him, certain shares due by the co. to vendors. There was no proof that the co. had agreed to allot any such shares to L., or that the latter had authorised or ratified such an allotment; but the secretary stated that he intended the shares filled in against L.'s signature to be assigned to certain vendors. There was no evidence that L. had been authorised to act for the vendors:—Held: L. was liable to be placed upon the list of contributories in respect of all shares opposite his name for such an amount as remained unpaid thereon.—*LONG'S EXECUTRIX v. registered in the joint names of a father & son on their application, & they paid £150 by way of deposit & allotment money. Shortly afterwards a call of £2 a share was made. The father became a director, & having, as he said, discovered that the co. was formed under circumstances of gross fraud, wrote to the chairman, warning the directors against involving the shareholders in any fresh liability. Shortly after he resigned his seat as director. Two months afterwards, the call being unpaid, the father wrote to the chairman, requesting the directors to declare the shares forfeited; & said that he & his son must be satisfied that their names were taken off the register. A resolution was thereupon passed that the shares be forfeited; but the names were not removed from the register of shareholders, & were on it when the winding-up order was made more than a year afterwards. No steps were taken on one side to enforce the call, or on the other to recover the deposit & allotment money. Ct. nonsuited the co., on appeal:—Held: (1) H.'s signature of the acceptances only was evidence of his consent to be a member if such consent were necessary; (2) without such consent proof of his name being in the register was prima facie proof of his being a shareholder; (3) the acts of the nine directors de facto were valid; & the nonsuit was wrong.—McIVOR HYDRAULIC SLUICING & GOLD MINING CO. v. n. — Under agreement to place shares—No ground for repudiation.]—A person who applied for shares in a co., & authorised his name to be placed on the register of members, becomes on allotment of the shares & registration of his name in terms of his authority a shareholder of the co., & is not entitled to have his name removed from the register by showing that he did not become a shareholder on his own account but merely that he might by agreement with the directors place the shares among such persons as he found willing to take them.—MILN v. NORTH BRITISH FRESH FISH SUPPLY

1192. — Whether condition precedent.]—W., T. & P. applied for shares in a limited co. established for the purpose of purchasing & working a concession from a foreign govt. T. & P. were directors of the co. The directors sent letters of allotment to the appcts., in which they called on them to pay the allotment money by a certain day. But their names were never entered on the register, nor was any allotment money paid nor certificates of shares issued. Three years afterwards the directors made a fresh arrangement with the owners of the concession under which they purported to cancel the old allotments & to allot all the shares, except a few reserved for the directors & other persons, to the vendor of the concession & his nominees. The shares were accordingly entered in the register in their names. Soon afterwards the co. was ordered to be wound up, & the liquidator applied to the ct. to rectify the register by placing on it the names of W., T. & P. for the number of shares allotted to them, & to diminish the number of shares for which the vendor of the concession was entered on the register to a like amount:—Held: whether the effect of the application & allotment was that W., T. & P. became actual members of the co. in respect of the shares allotted to them or only agreed to become such members, it was now too late, under the circumstances which had occurred, for the co. to insist on placing their names on the register. Semble: according to the true construction of 1862 Act, s. 23, they did not become members in respect of the allotted shares, the entry on the register being a condition precedent to such membership.—Re FLORENCE LAND & PUBLIC WORKS CO., NICOL'S CASE, TUFNELL & PONSONBY'S CASE (1885), 29 Ch. He signed copies of the memorandum & arts. of assocn., which were registered (without his name to them), & in which he was also represented as a director & holder of 1,000 shares. The co. was registered, but the capital was not subscribed & there was no allotment of shares or register of shareholders made out by the directors:—Held: (1) there was an agreement binding on P. to take shares, under which the directors should have inserted his name on the register; (2) he was estopped by his conduct from denying his liability as a contributory & the ct. directed him to be placed on the list.—Re OOLA LEAD & COPPER MINING Co., PALMER'S CASE, SMYTH'S CASE (1868), 2 I. The hotel was afterwards sold to the railway co., & the hotel co. was thereupon wound up:—Held: upon summons under the winding up, the two cos. being distinct & separate, the railway co. were not to be treated as shareholders in the hotel co., but as creditors, & were entitled to deduct from their purchase-money the advance made upon the security of the shares.—*Re CITY TERMINUS HOTEL Co., SOUTH EASTERN RY. resolution was passed for the conversion of the society into a co. limited by shares pursuant to sect. 71 of that Act. The objects of the co. under its memorandum were restricted to the objects of the society immediately prior to the conversion. There were no signatories to the memorandum of assocn. & no register of shareholders of the co. nor had any shares been in fact allotted. It was estimated that two years might elapse before the allotment of shares could be made. In 1914 a special resolution of the co. was passed altering & extending the object clauses of the memorandum. Upon a petition being presented by the co. for the confirmation by the ct. of this special resolution:—Held: the conversion of the society into a limited co. under Friendly Society Act, 1896 (c. 25), did not involve the simultaneous conversion of the members of the society into members of the co., & inasmuch as there were no members of the co. in existence within the definition of 1908 Act, s. 24, there was no special resolution properly passed which the ct. could confirm, & no such order as was asked could be made on the petition.—Re BLACKBURN PHILANTHROPIC ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1914] 2 Ch. 430; 84 L. The agreement extended to shares whether held by the exors. in that capacity or in their own personal capacity. W. was about to retire by rotation, & some of the exors. threatened to oppose his re-election:—Held: the agreement was valid as regarded shares held by the exors. either as such or as directors, & that on W. undertaking to retire, if required by the ct., at the ordinary meeting next after the trial, an injunction must be granted until the trial restraining such of the exors. as threatened to do so from voting against the re-election of W. on his retirement by rotation.—GREENWELL v. d. Suspensive condition in allotment letter—No liability until condition fulfilled.—A joint-stock co. formed for the purpose of purchasing & working certain mines in Canada & registered under 1862 & 1867 Acts issued a prospectus inviting applications for shares. No immediate allotment was made, but after the lapse of some days during which negotiations were going on between the vendors & directors, which resulted in an agreement that a deputation should be sent to Canada to inspect the mines & that the purchase of the mines should depend on the report, letters of allotment were issued requesting payment of £1 per share payable on allotment. At the end of the allotment letter this notandum was added: "after this payment no further call will be made till the deputation shall have reported on the mines. If the Board resolve not to purchase the mines the money will be returned to the shareholders without deduction." After the payments on allotment had been made the deputation reported unfavourably & the directors resolved not to complete the purchase of the mines. This resolution was approved of at a meeting of the "shareholders" (i.e. allottees of shares) & the money paid on application & allotment was returned to the allottees.

n. ——The object of Manitoba Joint-Stock Companies Act, R. S. M. 1902, c. 30, s. 81, as amended by 4 & 5 Edw. VII. c. 5, providing for the appointment by a judge, if he deems it necessary of an inspector to examine & report on the affairs of a joint-stock co. incorporated under the Act, on the application of shareholders, is simply that facts & circumstances not otherwise open may be disclosed to those concerned. A judge, therefore, should not make such order unless it is made to appear that there is reason on substantial grounds to believe that material information regarding the affairs or management of the co. is being concealed or withheld from shareholders whose interests entitle them to the disclosure, & it is not sufficient to adduce facts merely tending to show mismanagement by the directors.—Re TOWN TOPICS CO., LTD. 1220. — Resolution giving power to expropriate.]—Deft. co., not having power under its original arts. of assocn. to acquire compulsorily the shares of members, passed special resolutions altering its arts. & introducing a power enabling the majority of the shareholders to determine that the shares of any member, other than a certain named co., should be offered for sale by the directors to such person or persons, whether a member or members or not, as they should think fit at the fair value to be fixed from time to time at stated intervals by the directors.

The shareholders in deft. co. were principally cos. & persons manufacturing tinplates who were originally invited to become shareholders on the understanding that, although under no legal obligation to do so, they were to take the steel bars required for their tinplates from deft. co. which was formed as a private co., with the object of providing such supply. Pltf. co., which was an original shareholder of deft. co., subsequently withdrew its custom & transferred it to a new rival steel co. which pltf. co. had been instrumental in forming. Being unable to acquire pltf. co.'s shares by agreement, deft. co. passed the resolutions in question with the object of acquiring pltf. co.'s shares & of protecting deft. co. against conduct on the part of its shareholders detrimental to the interests of the co.:—Held: the resolutions in conferring an unrestricted & unlimited power on the majority of the shareholders to expropriate any shareholder they might think proper at their will & pleasure, went much further than was

c. *Secret profit made by two shareholders of company—Bargain with purchaser to use their power in influencing sale—Profit belongs to company—As part of purchase-money.]—*A secret agreement by an intending purchaser with one of several shareholders, to pay him a sum of money in consideration of his using his influence with the other shareholders to promote a sale of the co.'s assets at a certain price, is founded on an illegal consideration. Money paid under such an agreement, being really paid in order to obtain the property, must be treated as part of the purchase-money, & accounted for by the shareholder.

Two shareholders in a newspaper co. one being a contributor & the other managing director & editor, entered into an agreement for the purpose of preventing a projected sale of the co.'s assets, unless they individually received a consideration from the purchaser for the sale of their shares in addition to the price offered per share to the shareholders generally. They accordingly employed an agent necessary for the protection of co. from the conduct of shareholders detrimental to the co.'s interests, & the power thereby conferred could not be bonâ fide or genuinely for the benefit of the co. as a whole & was not such a power as could be assumed by the majority.—*DAFEN TINPLATE CO., LTD. v. 1223. — Authority of company to pledge credit of shareholder—Business in country not recognising limited liability.—An English limited co., registered under the Cos. Acts, was empowered by its memorandum & arts. of assocn. to do business in a foreign country, & to do all such things as might be necessary to comply with the statutory enactments of the country. By the law of the foreign country no corp'n. organised outside the country was allowed to do business within it on more favourable terms than were prescribed by law for corpns. organised within it. By the law of the foreign country each stockholder in a corp'n. was individually & personally liable for a part of the debts of the corp'n. proportionate to his share of its capital. The co. having failed to pay a debt which after having been registered in the foreign country it had in the course of business contracted there, the creditor brought an action in England against a shareholder whose shares were fully paid up, claiming to recover from him a part of the debt proportionate to his interest in the capital:—Held: there were no facts from which an authority from the shareholder to the co. to pledge his personal credit could be implied, & he was not liable.—*RISDON IRON & LOCOMOTIVE WORKS v. to treat with the purchaser, the result being that they received £100 per share for each held by them, the price paid to the other shareholders being £75 per share. They then attended meetings of the shareholders, & moved resolutions in favour of the sale. The transaction becoming known to the shareholders after the sale, legal proceedings were threatened by them, when one of the shareholders paid over the money received by him to the liquidators of the co., conditionally as he alleged, & afterwards sued to recover it. At the trial a verdict was entered by consent, for the amount claimed, with leave to debts. to move to enter a verdict for them:—Held: the transaction was fraudulent, & pltf. was a trustee for the co. in respect of the money received.—*STANFORD v. filed in the registry office a declaration that they were desirous of forming a joint-stock co., by the name of the Dominion Safety Gas Co., for the object of the manufacture & or sale of the machinery & materials for the manufacture or production of gas from evaporating fluids, & gas fixtures of all kinds, & also the lighting of cities, etc., with gas, with a capital stock of $6,000, in 300 shares of $20 each, & three of debts. were stated to be trustees. Subsequently these trustees met & passed bye-laws as to the government of the co. On Feb. 17, 1873, a meeting of the shareholders was held, when an agreement was entered into for the purchase of a patent for the manufacture of gas, & a resolution was passed that the shareholders should pay on their stock enough to make a working capital of $1,250. An agreement was made that the stock should be divided up between the five debts. in proportions stated, & these debts., as shareholders, subsequently met, increased the number of trustees from three to five, & elected themselves such trustees. No stock was ever subscribed for or anything ever paid thereon, the money required to carry on the business being raised from time to time by contribution. The co., in 1874, put up a gas machine in pltf.'s residence, which, on Feb. 12, 1874, exploded, & injured pltf., for which he sued the co. & recovered damages, & on Feb. 29, 1876, judgment was entered, & a fi. fa. issued against the co., which was returned nulla bona. This action was then brought against debts., as shareholders, for the amount of the unpaid stock, & also as trustees on their individual liability under the Act for neglecting to publish within twenty days after Jan. 1, 1875, as required by the Act, a report stating the amount of the capital stock actually paid & of the then existing debts of the co., or to insert therein pltf.'s claim as one of such existing debts:—Held: debts. were not liable as shareholders in the co. to pltf., as a creditor, for to create such liability, under the statute, there must be a subscription for stock; & the fact that they had acted & been treated as shareholders would not enable a creditor to proceed against them as such; & neither were they liable as trustees for neglecting to make the report, for pltf.'s claim was not an existing debt at the time of such neglect, nor until the entry of his judgment.—OSLER v. BOWELL (1878), 43 U. C. R. 40.—CAN.

1226 iv. —.]—A circular was issued with the knowledge of the directors of debt. co., which, amongst other things, set out that "loans can be paid at any time & a discharge of the mtge. will be given, the rule of the society being, when this privilege is taken advantage of, to charge three months' additional interest at the same rate at which the loan was made." Pltf. saw this circular exposed in the office of an appraiser of the co. through whom the loan was effected, & was thereby induced to mtge. his land for twenty years, the loan to be repayable on the instalment plan:—Held: although the mtge. recited that the mtgor. was a member of the society, having subscribed for 88 shares of the stock, which the society had agreed to pay him in advance on receiving that security therefor, etc., yet without express stipulation to that effect, the mtgor. could not be affected by rules made subsequently to the execution of the mtge., even if he could under the system under which the operations of the society were carried on be considered a member when he had received the amount of his shares; but that at all events

A subsequent clause declared, that after transfer "the former or last proprietor thereof shall thenceforth be for ever acquitted & discharged of & from all covenants, agreements, regulations, obligations, & liabilities whatsoever" in respect of the shares transferred, "save only in respect of any penalty, forfeiture, or liability which shall have been previously incurred by him, her, or them in regard thereto":—Held: (1) the saving as to liability in the first clause meant, in respect of any personal liability of the member to the company; (2) the saving in the latter clause must be construed to mean the same personal liability, for that to give it a larger construction would be to annul the discharge from liability previously given.—Re OUNDLE UNION BREWERY CO., CROXTON'S CASE (1852), 1 De G. 1. By transfer of shares—Transfer not registered—Estoppel.—Motion by A. that the register of shares of the City of Melbourne Bank be rectified by the removal of his name therefrom, & from the list of contributories, in respect of 350 shares. A., who originally had 1,130 shares in the Bank, employed a broker in Aug. 1893, to sell 350 of his shares. The broker sold them in the ordinary course, & gave him a bought & sold note, & paid him for the shares. There was at that date an undoubted bona fide sale of the shares to some person. After the sale A. through his son, a solr., immediately took steps to have the sale perfected by having the shares registered in the name of the purchaser. The solr. duly lodged a transfer signed by his father & attended many times at the Bank to inquire as to the progress of the transfer; & was ultimately informed by the share clerk that the transfer has been perfectd by registering the purchaser as transferee. Relying on the transfer having been completed A. subsequently applied to alter his scrip. He had sold 350 of the 1,130 shares & consequently required new certificates for 780 shares. Scrip was forwarded to him for 780 shares. Subsequently several applications were made to A. to pay calls of five shillings on the 780 shares only. It still, in fact, appeared in the register that A. held 1,130 shares, & the payments of calls by him were treated by the Bank as though made on 1,130 shares, although the amounts of the calls made showed that they were really made on 780 only. The Bank further wrote a letter which indicated that A.'s liability was limited to the 780 shares. The scrip for the 780 shares was signed by two directors, who must have known the state of affairs. A. had all the time no ground for supposing that the shares had not been transferred. It appeared that the real purchaser of the shares was probably the manager of the Bank. But he died in 1894.

In Feb. 1895, an application was made to A. for payment of a call on 1,130 shares, in accordance with a clause in the arts. of assocn. A. wrote denying that he had any obligation except in respect of 780 shares. After some delay, the solrs. for the Bank wrote, in May, 1895, intimating that the Bank knew nothing of the sale of 350 shares, & stating that they expected him to pay calls on 1,130, & asking him whether he would take action to have his name removed, or whether he preferred to be sued for calls. A. in answer said that he had not made up his mind. After some further correspondence the Bank went into liquidation in Aug. 1895:—Held: there was an estoppel against the Bank in favour of A., at all events up to Feb., 1895, & it was not now too late to agitate that question in his favour, to prevent his being made a contributory; & there was a sufficient person to prevent the transaction from amounting to a mere surrendering of the shares & to make it a bona fide transfer, & A. was not liable to be not be released from his proportion of losses, if any, sustained by the co. up to the period of his ceasing to be such shareholder. It was also provided that the directors should at every half-yearly meeting procure a balance-sheet of the affairs of the co., which they never did. Upon the winding up of the co.:—Held: a transferor of shares was liable in respect of losses that accrued prior to the date of the transfer, though, the liability being by way of specialty, a holder who transferred his shares more than twenty years before the date of the winding up was entitled to the benefit of Statute of Limitations.

The directors never presented any balance-sheet or summary of accounts, but they produced a report half-yearly in which the affairs of the co. were mis-stated. A winding up order was obtained:—Held: the shareholders were not bound by the directors' reports.—Re PORTSMOUTH BANKING CO., HELBY'S, STOKES' & HORSEY'S CASES (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 167; 14 L. 1238. By forfeiture of shares—Shares forfeited by consent—Shareholder remains liable as contributory.]—S. owned shares by allotment & purchase in a co., & as such shareholder executed a deed of settlement containing clauses regulating the admission & withdrawal of shareholders & the transfer of shares. In the course of business difficulties arose, & it was proposed to allow certain dissentient shareholders to retire, their shares to be forfeited. Notice of this proposition was given to all the shareholders, & it was adopted at a general public meeting. S. objected to the mode in which it was proposed to allow shareholders to retire, & sought to have the co. wound up. Cross litigation followed, & whilst this was pending the directors agreed to allow him to retire upon conditions which were not contained in the deed of settlement nor in the proposition adopted at the meeting. No notice of the agreement with S. was given to the shareholders, but they were aware of the retirement of S., & no fraudulent concealment was alleged against the directors. In accordance with the terms of the agreement, the name of S. was removed from the list of shareholders in 1849. Subsequently, the co. changed its mode of conducting business, & dividends were paid, but S. received no notice of the change, he received no dividends, & took no part in the affairs of the co.:—Held: the name of S. was rightly placed on the list of contributors.—SPACKMAN v. EVANS (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 171; 37 L. J. Ch. 752; 19 L. T. 151, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. Re AGRICULTURIST INSURANCE CO., SPACKMAN'S CASE (1865), 5 New Rep. 385, L. C.

The transfer was never filled up with the name of nor executed by the transferee. It appeared that these shares, among others, had been bought with the co.'s moneys under the direction of the manager & in accordance with a resolution of the directors to buy shares either for themselves or for the co. A friend of W. subsequently called on his behalf at the office of the co., & was informed by a clerk in the office who was in charge of the register that W.'s name was not on the register. The register was open for inspection. W.'s name, in fact, had never been removed, & he still appeared on the register as a shareholder in respect of these shares. Calls were afterwards made on the shares, but no notice was sent to W.; his account was, however, by direction of the auditors, credited with the payment of the calls. The

co. went into liquidation, & W. having died in the meanwhile, his representative was settled on the list of contributors. Upon an application by the representative of W. to rectify the register:—Held: W.'s name was rightly settled on the list of contributors, & the co. was not estopped by the statement of the clerk nor by crediting W.'s account with the payment of the calls from retaining W.'s name as a shareholder.—Re CITY & COUNTY PROPERTY BANK (IN LIQUIDATION), WEEDON'S CASE (1896), 22 V. 1240. Trustees accepting trust.]—A., being resident in Scotland, & a shareholder in an English co., by a trust disposition & deed of settlement assigned his shares to B. & C. upon trust, & by the same instrument appointed B. & C. his exors. The shares stood in A.'s name at his death. For some years after A.'s death the deed was not acted upon, & his eldest son took out administration to his personal estate in England. The co. was wound up, & the son's name was placed on the list of contributories. Afterwards the deed of settlement was set up, & declared by a decree of the Ct. of Session to be a valid document. The official manager thereupon applied to the master to have the names of B. & C. inserted in the list of contributories. The master granted the application:—Held: the decision of the master was right, & the names of B. & C. were properly added to the list.—Re ROYAL BANK OF AUSTRALIA, Ex p. DRUMMOND (1860), 2 Giff. 189; 2 L. T. 349; 6 Jur. N. S. 908; 8 W. R. 659; 66 E. R. 80.

1241. — Conduct amounting to acceptance of trust.]—In 1855 stock in the City of Glasgow Bank was transferred to trustees by an ante-nuptial contract of marriage. The law agent made a declaration of the contents of the deed, & notified it to the bank, who placed all the names of the trustees on the register of shareholders, as trustees. The marriage contract was not signed by any of the trustees; but they all subscribed subsequently a transfer of railway stock from the wife as extrix. of one B. to themselves; & in this transfer they were described as "trustees nominated under & by virtue of the said ante-nuptial contract of marriage." In 1856 A., one of the trustees, signed a dividend warrant, & shortly afterwards he left the neighbourhood. On the death of the husband in 1868, it being necessary to expedite confirmation to his estate, A. refused to act any longer, & sent to the law agent a formal letter declining his office of trustee, it was accepted by the other trustees, but not regularly intimated to, or acted upon, by the bank. A.'s name remained on the register until the stoppage of the bank on Oct. 2, 1878:—Held: A.'s name was rightly on the list of contributories, his acceptance of the trust being clearly established by his actings,

Under a partnership agreement G. became entitled to certain shares, which stood in his partner's name. A doubt arose as to the number of shares to which G. was entitled, & a suit was brought by him on Feb. 15, 1897, to ascertain his rights, & a decree was pronounced on Aug. 27, 1897. In Mar. & Nov., 1897, transfers of the shares to which G. had been declared entitled, were executed by G.'s partner to C. & R. respectively, & lodged by them with the co. for registration:—Held: G.'s partner being a constructive trustee for G., it was no negligence in G. to allow the shares to remain in his name, & G.'s equity being prior in date prevailed over that of C.—Re MOUNT DAVID GOLD MINING CO. l. Preferential dividend payable to "holder" of shares—Death of shareholder—Whether executor "holder."—The goodwill of a business, which a merchant had carried on, & the capital, property & assets with it, were transferred by him in 1864 to a joint-stock limited co., who agreed with him that, in consideration of the transfer by him of property, referred to in the contract as "the fixed assets," one hundred paid-up shares of £2,500 each, of which any assignment by him during the next five years from the registration of the co. should not be recognised by them as valid, should be allotted to him. It was also agreed that in consideration of the transfer, he & "his exors. or administrators shall be entitled, so long as they hold the said hundred shares, to an extra or preferential dividend." On this agreement the parties acted, & the shareholder held the shares till he died in England in 1888, having by will directed that his exors. or administrators should hold the hundred shares in trust for his surviving brothers, of whom the exor., who proved the will, was one. Administration with the will annexed was granted in India to pltf. in this suit as the attorney of the exor. A note of this was made in the register of the co. leaving the hundred shares still in the name of testator. The co. then discontinued to pay the preferential dividend, & contended that it was no longer payable, inasmuch as testator's estate had been administered, & that the exor. no longer held the shares as exor., but as trustee for the beneficiaries under the will:—Held: the contract was still in operation, the exor. still "holding" the shares within its meaning; & the preferential dividend continued payable to the estate of testator, the co. being only concerned with the legal title to the shares, & not with any claims if there were any, that might be made by beneficiaries under the will against the exor. as trustee.—BOMBAY BURMA TRADING CORPN. v. o. Shares in name of trustee—Beneficiary entitled to dividends.—Where the question was whether shares which were "subscribed & entered in the name of J. H." were in reality the property of his brother W for whom J.

was merely trustee:—Held: although in respect of the public, & of the other partners of the co., the shares were never effectually transferred into the person of W., yet in any question between J. & W. or his representatives, it must be held that W. was the actual partner or holder of the shares & entitled to all the profits thereof & liable to relieve J. of all demands or losses to which he might be liable in respect of others as the holder of the said shares.—HUME v. p. Notice of meeting—Trustee of debenture-holders not entitled to notice.—Notice of a meeting need not be sent to the trustee of an insolvent member at any rate until such time as the trustee has the shares registered in his own name or formally notifies the co. of the insolvency & enters his own registered address in the co.'s book. The same principle applies to the case of a deceased member. The trustee for the debenture-holders is not entitled to notice of a meeting for the winding up of a co.—HOOTON-SMITH v. q. Trustees accepting trust—When estopped from denying—Confirmation & adoption of registration.—Two of three trustees under a marriage contract purchased shares in a joint-stock bank registered under 1862 Act, & took the transfers in the names of the whole three trustees. The other trustee was not aware of the purchase, & did not sign the transfer. The two former signed as a majority & quorum, & the transfer was sent to the bank, & the names of the three trustees were entered as partners in the statutory register of members. The trustee who had not signed afterwards signed a minute approving of the purchase of the stock, & also signed, as one of a quorum of trustees, a mandate to the bank to pay the dividends on the stock, which was described as "belonging to the trustees," to the husband. In the liquidation of the bank:—Held: the trustee who had not signed the transfer was not entitled to have his

The stock was conveyed to them as "trust disponees" under the trust, & they accepted the same "as trust disponees aforesaid" subject to the arts. & regulations of the co. Applts. were also described in the books of the bank & in the share certificates as "trust disponees." The bank afterwards stopp'd payment, & a resolution was passed for a voluntary winding up:—Held: the trustees were personally liable as contributories to the co., & their liability was not limited to the amount of the trust estate.—*MUIR v. 1243. Shares held by party as trustee for married woman—Trustee receiving dividends—Name not returned as shareholder until company wound up.]—A widow was entitled, as extrix. of her deceased husband, to some shares in a joint-stock banking co., which stood in the name of her husband. On her second marriage she assigned them by deed to a trustee for her separate use. Verbal notice of that deed was given to the co., but no transfer of the shares was ever made in the manner required by the co.'s deed of settlement. The trustee received the dividends, & signed receipts for them as agent for the widow, but his name was never returned to the stamp office as a shareholder until the stoppage of the bank:—Held: these facts were not sufficient to authorise the master to insert the name of the trustee in the list of contributories, under the Joint Stock Cos. Winding-up Act; but leave was given to the official manager to try the question of the trustee's liability in an action at law, the ct. refusing an issue for that purpose.—*Re NORTH OF ENGLAND JOINT STOCK BANKING CO., Ex p. r. ———.]—By a trust-settlement the trustees were directed to sell the whole of the trust estate, part of which consisted of stock of a joint-stock bank registered under 1862 Act, & to invest the proceeds in certain safe kinds of securities. The trustees having been confirmed as exors., their agent sent the confirmation to the bank, & obtained a new certificate in name of the trustees as exors. Their names were entered in the books of the bank as holding the stock as exors. They sold a portion of the stock. Dividend warrants, which bore that the stock stood in the name of the exors., were issued to them, & signed by them for four years on account of the unsold portion of stock. They stated that the reason they did not sell the whole stock was that they could not find a suitable investment for the price. The bank having gone into liquidation, the trustees' names were entered on the list of contributories as personally liable for calls on the unsold portion of the stock:—Held: the trustees either knew or ought to have known that their names were entered in the books of the bank as partners thereof; their conduct inferred adoption of the act of their agent; & consequently, they were not entitled to have their names removed from the list of contributories.—*GORDON v. Shares held by party as trustee for company's vendor—Surrendered to company by way of compromise—Trustee's name remaining on register.]—A co., formed for the purpose of working a coal mine, of which C. was the owner, entered into a contract with him for the purchase of the same. By the agreement it was stipulated that a part of the purchase-money should be paid by an allotment of shares. The co. induced C. to take 250 additional shares, on the representation that a third person would, in that event, subscribe for 500 shares; & it was also suggested by the co. that it would give more solidity to the co. if these shares were taken in the name of B., a friend of C., which was acceded to by the former, on condition that he would incur no liability in respect of them. No minute appeared in the co.'s books of this understanding, but the shares were allotted to B., who was registered as the holder of the shares, & the deposit was paid by C. Subsequently C. took proceedings at law against the co., on the ground that the agreement had not been carried out. The action was compromised, upon the terms that the 250 shares held by C. should be given up to the co., which was accordingly done, & transfers were executed by C. in blank. The name of B. was struck out of the share ledger, but not from the register of shareholders. It did not appear that any of the transactions had been sanctioned by the general body of shareholders. On the co. being wound up, the name of B. was put on the list of contributories. 1247. — Trustees not consenting to registration.]—On a sale to a co. it was agreed that the vendor's shares should be transferred to two of the directors, as trustees for the co., as a security to the co. for the performance by the vendor of his guarantee that in any year, during the first five years of the co., in which the net profits were less than 10 per cent., he would make good the deficiency. The arts. of the co. provided that the trustees should not be registered as the holders of the vendor's shares without their written consent. The vendor executed a transfer of his shares to the trustees, & the co. issued to them a certificate of the transfer, which stated that the transfer had been registered in the books of the co., which, however, was not the fact. On the winding up of the co. the liquidators placed the trustees on the register & list of contributories in respect of the vendor's shares:—Held: as the trustees had been placed on the register without their consent, they were entitled to have their names removed, & therefore were not contributories.—Re WEST HARTLEPOOL IRON CO., GRAY'S CASE (1876), 1 Ch. 1248. Shares held by partners—For themselves & "survivor for behoof of firm."]—For some years previous to 1878 A. & B. had carried on in partnership the business of law agents in E. By contract of co-partnership, executed in Aug. & Oct. 1878, A. & B., on the narrative that the former partnership had ceased, agreed to continue the same, & to assume C. as a partner on the terms, inter alia, that the new firm should continue under the firm name of A. & B.; that the bank account should be kept in the name of the firm; & that A. & B. should supply the necessary capital required in equal proportions, either by holding bank stock in the name of the firm, or by advancing the requisite funds. Prior to the execution of this contract, but with a view to the arrangements of the new firm, £1,000 of stock of the City of Glasgow Bank, an unlimited joint-stock co., was purchased by A. & B. who supplied the price in equal proportions. A transfer was taken in favour of A. & B., " & the survivor of them for behoof of the firm " of A. & B. A similar entry appeared in the register of members. C. was not aware of the terms of the contract, or a party to the transfer. The bank stopped payment, & the liquidators placed A. & B. individually on the list of contributories as holders of £1,000 of stock as " trustee for the firm " of A. & B. In an application inter alia to vary the list by deleting the words " trustee for the firm " & to place A. & B. on the list as contributories each for a separate sum of £500:—Held: a trust was created for the benefit of the partnership, & as trustees A. & B. were jointly & severally liable for all calls in respect of the £1,000 of stock.—GILLESPIE v. CITY OF GLASGOW BANK (1879), 4 App. Cas. 632, H. L.

1249. Trustee acting in management of trust.]—In 1850 shares in the City of Glasgow Bank, which was a co. registered, but not formed under 1862 Act, were transferred into the names of A. & three others as trustees & exors. of a deceased trustee. A. signed mandates to the bank authorising the payment of dividends, sanctioned the purchase of additional bank stock, & signed the minutes of meetings of the trustees. On the voluntary winding up of the co.:—Held: A. was rightly put on the list of contributories.

Two surviving original trustees executed a deed assuming new trustees. Both new & old trustees passed an unanimous resolution to have stock standing in the names of the original trustees in the City of Glasgow Bank transferred into the names of the original & assumed trustees. A note of assumption, giving the names of all the assumed trustees was made by the bank officials on the stock ledger following the account of the original trustees. All the trustees signed a minute of a meeting of the trustees, which stated that " Mr. Lang, one of them, tabled the scrip of the bank stock showing that the same had been transferred into the names of all the trustees original & assumed as directed at the previous meeting." At the winding up of the co. the names of the assumed trustees were placed on the list of contributories. In a petition for rectification:—Held: the assumed trustees, except one, a female trustee, who had been a minor, & unmarried at the date of the resolution to transfer, were properly on the list of contributories; & declared as to the sometime minor, that her name should in hoc statu be removed from the list, without prejudice to the right of the liquidators to place thereon the names of her husband & order at Edinburgh." The bank having gone into liquidation the trustees applied to have their names removed from the list of contributories on the ground that they had given no authority for making them members of the co.:—Held: the whole trustees had by their actings adopted the act of their agent in having the stock transferred to their names, & they were precluded from maintaining that they were in ignorance of what he had done.—*SMITH, ETC. v. This was done after a meeting of the bank directors, the minute of which bore as follows:—" Letters were read intimating the following sales of stock, subject to the bank's right of pre-emption, & the transfers in favour of the purchasers were ordered to be prepared, viz. £385, good causes, A. T. S. to her marriage contract trustees," then came a list of other transfers. The bank failed, but at the date of the failure the names of the trustees had not been entered on the register of members. They were subsequently placed there, & also on the list of contributories. ii. Nature and Extent.

1251. Nature—Whether personal or representative—Shares held by directors as trustees for company.]—The directors of a joint-stock co., in order to procure their Act of Parliament, subscribed for a large number of shares, & signed a declaration that they held them in trust for the co., but did not pay the deposit, on, or register them. Afterwards, at a special general meeting of the co., it was resolved that the trust should be annulled, & the shares transferred to the secretary, to be held by him at the disposal of the board. The directors then proceeded to make calls on the registered shares:—Held: (1) the said directors were primarily liable in respect of the shares subscribed for in trust for the co., as any other trustee would be, although they might be entitled to indemnity from their cestui que trust; (2) they were not relieved from such liability by the proceeding taken to annul the trust & transfer the shares; (3) it was the duty of the directors to make the calls in respect of all such shares, equally with the calls on the registered shares; & the ct. would compel the directors to put all the shareholders on an equal footing according to their proportions, with respect to the calls to be made upon them.—*PRESTON v. 1252. ——— Trustee consenting to registration.]—A truster under his settlement appointed three persons A., B., & C., as his trustees, who were also to be his sole exors. with his heritable & moveable estate, which included City of Glasgow Bank stock. C. died, & the truster executed a codicil appointing D. as trustee, & with the same powers as A. & B. The truster having died in 1854, A., B., & D. accepted the trust, were confirmed exors., & were entered on the bank register as exors. for the stock. D. sometimes signed the dividend warrants as "trustee," & once as "sole surviving trustee & exor." The bank suspended payment on Oct. 2, 1878, & on

Oct. 22 D. resigned his office of trustee:—Held: (1) D. was personally liable, on the ground that more than twenty years before he had authorised the stock to be transferred into his name, & had ever since acted as a shareholder; (2) the resignation was of no effect to escape liability.

(3) An exor. whose testator has held shares in a joint-stock co. has generally one of two courses open to him. He may have the shares transferred into his own name, & become to all intents & purposes a partner in the co. He may, on the other hand, not wish to have the shares transferred into his name, & he ought in that case to have a reasonable time allowed him to sell the shares, & to produce a purchaser who will take a transfer of them. In any case where the bank transfers the shares into the name of the truster's exor., this House would require to be satisfied that the transfer had been authorised by a distinct & intelligent request on the part of the exor. (LORD CAIRNS).

(4) The case of trustees who take a transfer of shares in their names differs, in principle, from that of exors., who merely intimate their title as exors. to a co., in order to claim & exercise the rights which belong to them as the legal representatives of their testator. Trustees have not, in any proper sense of the word, a representative character, but exors. have. Having representative rights, it is impossible that they should not be entitled to produce the legal evidence of them to the co., for the purpose of having their title in some way recorded & recognised, without making themselves personally liable (LORD SELBORNE).—Re CITY OF GLASGOW BANK, BUCHAN'S CASE (1879), 4 App. Cas. 549, 583, H. A. did not sign the transfers, but he signed a subsequent letter to the co. authorising the payment of dividends. Therefore, where a trust estate so composed has been lost by the default of the trustee, the loss to the estate is not the amount of the shares, but of the shares less the amount paid for calls.—*BRIGGS v. iii. Termination.

1258. — — —.]—(1) If directors in the fair & bonâ fide exercise of their powers under the co.'s contract, as managers of the co., & in circumstances which make it a reasonable act of management, resolve not to record future transfers which may seriously affect & alter the liability of the partners, the resolution will be effectual, & the directors in declining to record the transfers cannot be held to be in default within the meaning of 1862 Act, s. 35.

(2) Before the commencement of the winding up, but after the stoppage, & after the publishing of a notice by the directors calling a special general meeting of the shareholders of the City of Glasgow Bank, for the purpose of passing a resolution to have the bank wound up by reason of its irretrievable insolvency; & after a resolution by the directors that they would not record any future transfers, one of four trustees whose names appeared as such on the bank register resigned his office of trusteeship under Trusts, S. Act, 1861 (c. 84), s. 1, with the consent of his co-trustees & the beneficiaries. A notarial copy of the resignation was sent the next day to the bank, but the directors refused to alter the register by affixing a note, or in any other way:—Held: the resignation was too late to exempt the trustee from personal liability.

The trustee's resignation of his trusteeship alone would not terminate his liability. He ceased to be a trustee; but it remained for him to terminate his liability in respect of the bank by a transfer, or something equivalent to a transfer, of his shares (LORD CAIRNS).

(3) After the issuing to the shareholders & the public of a circular calling a meeting, with a view to the necessary resolution for a voluntary winding up, it is too late for any shareholder to part with his shares, either to the copartnership itself or to any other person (LORD SELBORNE).—Re CITY OF GLASGOW BANK, MITCHELL'S CASE (1879), 4 App. Cas. 548, 567; *sub nom. 1259. — — —.]—In 1873 the names of four trustees were entered on the register of the City of Glasgow Bank as members. On Oct. 2, 1878, cate in the name of deceased, the confirmation, & a mandate signed by the trustees the same day, by which they requested the manager of the bank to pay all dividends due & to become due on the stock "standing in our names as trustees under the trust-disposition & settlement of," etc. The agent at the same time requested the secretary to send a new stock certificate. The names of the trustees were then entered in the register of shareholders as holders of the stock, & a certificate to that effect sent to their agent. In the subsequent liquidation of the bank the trustees presented a petition to have their names removed from the list of contributories, or otherwise, from the first to the second part thereof. A proof having been led, all the trustees deposed that they expressly instructed their agent not to make up a special title to the bank stock in such a way as to make them liable as partners:—Held: the trustees had not authorised or adopted the registration of the stock in their names, the inference which might otherwise have arisen from the res gestæ having been explained away by the parol evidence.—*STOTT, ETC. v. d. Shares transferred by trustee according to beneficiary's instruction—Liquidation of company—Trustee not personally liable.—M. an accountant in the Real Estate Bank took a transfer of shares in the C. Estate Co.,

& became registered as a holder in respect of such shares. A deed was executed between M. & the Real Estate Bank, whereby it was declared that M. should hold the shares subject to the bank's direction, & should transfer them as required by the bank, & until such transfer should stand possessed of the shares, in trust for the bank; the bank undertook to indemnify M. against all losses. Subsequently, after the execution of the deed, M. transferred the shares at the bank's direction to some nominee of the bank, whose name did not appear. The C. Estate Co. went into liquidation. M. then applied to have the co.'s register rectified by removing his name & substituting the name of the bank therefor:—Held: as soon as the shares had been transferred to M. at the request of the bank, his duties as trustee ceased, & he was entitled to have the register rectified.—*Re CHATSWORTH ESTATE CO., Ex p. The bank failed, & calls were made upon the trustee, who filed a bill to enforce repayment out of the wife's savings:—Held: (1) the savings of the wife's separate estate were liable to indemnify the trustee against all calls & liabilities incurred on her behalf in respect of the shares; (2) money arising from savings of separate estate which had been invested by the wife in the names of the trustees of the settlement without any intimation that it was to be held on the trusts of the settlement, was liable to indemnify the trustee of the shares.—*BUTLER v. 1. Notice of trust—Marriage settlement—Debt of trustee—Company may not ignore rights of which they have knowledge.]—B. was entitled in her own right to shares in a bank, of which she was the registered holder. In 1877 she married R., & by her marriage settlement purported to convey the shares to C. & D. as trustees.

In 1882 the bank was incorporated under 1862 Act. The arts. of assocn. provided that (1) no person should be recognised by the co. as holding any share upon any trust, & that the co. should not be bound by any equitable interest in any share, or any other right except an absolute right to the entirety thereof in the registered holder. (2) The co. should have a first & paramount lien on all the shares registered in the name of a member, whether solely or jointly with others, for all moneys due to the co. from him, either alone or jointly with any other person, whether a member or not, & whether such shares were presently payable or not. After the incorporation of the co. the shares were transferred into the joint names of the trustees, such transfer being made in 1885. Both before & after incorporation the bank had notice that C. & D. were trustees in respect of the shares, that the shares had been put in settlement, & that neither of the trustees had any beneficial interest therein. In 1891 D. became indebted to the bank. C. died in 1893. The bank claimed to hold the shares answerable for D.'s debt, & refused to pay any further dividends on the same till the debt was discharged:—Held: the bank were not entitled to a lien on the shares in respect of D.'s debt. The object of 1862 Act, s. 20, & of similar provisions in arts. of assocn., is to spare a co. the responsibility of attending to any trusts or equities whatever attached to their shares, so that they may safely deal with the person who is registered owner, recognising no other person & no different right, & freeing them from inquiry into conflicting claims as to shares, transfers, calls, dividends, etc., & enabling them to treat the registered holder as owner of the shares for all purposes, without regard to contracts between himself & third persons. But it was not the object of the Legislature to enable a co. to ignore, for their own purposes and interest, the rights of persons of which they have knowledge.—REARDEN v. m. What is a register—Particulars entered in different books—If taken together containing all information required by the statute.]—The register of shareholders may consist of particulars entered in different books, which taken together substantially contain all the information which the Act requires. If there be a substantial compliance with the requisitions of the Act, the register is not invalidated by reason of slight deviations from its office, & no return of their names was ever made to the Registrar of Joint-stock Cos. In 1867 the co. was wound up & in 1869 the English shareholders were placed on the list of contributories & calls made on them, by means of which all the debts, etc., were paid. In 1874, the official liquidator filed a supplemental list of contributories, on which he placed all the Indian shareholders, with a view of making them contribute rateably to the debts which the English shareholders had paid:—Held: (1) S., whose name was on the register which had been kept at Bombay, & who had accepted shares & paid calls on them, was properly placed on such supplemental list; (2) under 1862 Act, s. 25, which requires a register of shareholders to be kept, "in one or more books," a co. which has foreign as well as English shareholders can keep a register abroad as well as at home.—Re EAST INDIA COTTON AGENCY, LTD., SAND'S CASE (1875), 32 L. s. — Notice of equitable rights.—B. was entitled in her own right to shares in a bank, of which she was the registered holder. In 1877 she married R., & by her marriage settlement purported to convey the shares to C. & D. as trustees, upon usual trusts.

In 1882 the bank was incorporated under 1862 Act. Clause 8 of the arts. of assocn. provided that no person should be recognised by the co. as holding any share upon any trust, & that the co. should not be bound by or recognise any equitable interest in any share, or any other right in respect of any share, except an absolute right to the entirety thereof in the registered holder. Clause 11 provided that the co. should have a first & paramount lien & charge on all the shares registered in the name of a member (whether solely or jointly with others) for all moneys due to the co. from him or his estate, either alone or jointly with any other person, whether a member or not, & whether such shares were presently payable or not. After the incorporation of the co., as it was then permissible, the shares were transferred into the joint names of the trustees, such transfer being made in 1885, after some further correspondence between the trustee C. & the secretary of the bank. Both before & after incorporation the bank had notice that C. & D. were trustees in respect of the shares, that the shares had been put in settlement, & that neither of the trustees had any beneficial interest therein. From 1885 the dividends on the shares were paid to the husband R., as the nominee of the trustees, till his death in 1888. From that date till Aug. 1892, they were by arrangement paid to B. In 1891, D. became indebted to the bank, & left the country in that year. C. died in 1893. The bank claimed to hold the shares answerable for D.'s debt, & refused to pay any further dividends on the same till the debt was discharged:—Held: the bank were not entitled to a lien on the shares in respect of D.'s debt. The effect of the section is to relieve co.'s from liabilities arising, not from the joint operation of notice & an act or omission of the co., but from notice per se; & not to extinguish or affect any obligation to which they would otherwise be subject by their own unconscientious conduct.—*REARDEN v. formal transfer of shares.]—G., a shareholder in a completely registered co., being in prison, two of the directors, being desirous to procure his discharge, entered into an agreement with B., one of his creditors, by which B. agreed to accept 1,500 shares in part payment of his debt, & to consent to G.'s discharge; & the two directors stated that they were authorised by G. & the co. to transfer the shares, declared the shares to be transferable by delivery, & agreed that if it should appear that the shares could not be legally vested in B., without his executing the deed of settlement, they would pay him £1,500. They handed over to him scrip certificates for 1,500 shares, which described the co. as only provisionally registered, & purported to be transferable by delivery. The directors placed B. on the register of shareholders without his knowledge, & in the register of transfers they entered the shares as transferred to him by G., but it was not shown that any deed of transfer had ever been executed, & he never executed the deed of settlement, or any deed of accession to it. An order was afterwards made for winding up the co.:—Held: inasmuch as the shares in the co. were not transferable by delivery, & could not be vested in B. without his executing the deed of settlement, B., in the absence of conduct estopping him from disputing his being a shareholder, was not liable to be placed on the list of contributories.—Re ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH CO. A shareholder had compromised actions pending between himself & the co. & the directors on the terms that he should pay a certain sum, & should transfer his shares to one of the directors. He paid the sum & executed a transfer of his shares to the director, who also executed the same. The transfer was deposited with the attorney who acted for the co. & the directors in the action. No further steps were taken for more than two years,

& till after an order had been made to wind up the co., when the shareholder applied for a rectification of the register:—Held: the register, on which the name of the shareholder appeared, was conclusive & could not be altered.—Re ANGLO-DANUBIAN STEAM NAVIGATION & COLLIERY CO., WALKER'S CASE (1868), L. 1293. ——— In proceedings under 1862 Act, s. 26.]—According to the true construction of 1862 Act, s. 26, the forwarding to the Registrar of Joint Stock Cos. of a list of members & summary which upon the face of them purport to satisfy the requirements of the Act, is not a sufficient compliance with that sect. unless such list & summary are in accordance with the facts; & a metropolitan police magistrate has jurisdiction upon a summons for penalties under sect. 27 to inquire into the truth or falsehood of the statements contained in the list & summary so forwarded, & is not precluded from hearing evidence on the complaint brought before him merely by the circumstance that the list & summary are in accordance with the co.'s register. Such register is only prima facie evidence of certain matters, & upon evidence that it contained fictitious entries the magistrate would be justified in disregarding such entries, & in treating a summary based upon them as false & misleading. But questions of nicety as to the title to shares & the right to be on the register cannot properly be determined by a magistrate upon such a summons, & with reference to such questions he ought to accept the co.'s register as practically conclusive.—Re BRITON MEDICAL & GENERAL LIFE ASSOCN. a. ——— Other evidence adduced—Contradicting or impugning register.]—The evidence adduced by the official liquidator to show that deft. was a member of the co. & so liable as a contributory consisted of the register of members, a letter written by the objector, a reply thereto written by a managing director of the co. & the oral testimony of the director himself. The objector adduced no evidence at all:—Held: the official liquidator might, if he had chosen to do so, have put the register in evidence,

& waited, before giving any further evidence until the objector had given some to displace the prima facie evidence afforded by the register, or to impugn the character of the register; but his case must be looked at as a whole, & having taken the line which he did, he must take the consequences of his other evidence contradicting or impugning the prima facie evidence of the register, & notwithstanding that the objector gave no evidence, the register was not conclusive.—*RAM DAS CHAKARBATI v. in the staff this circumstance was overlooked & G.'s name was placed on the register. Subsequently & before a new certificate was issued to G. the secretary of the Navigation Co., having discovered the correspondence with H. purported to amend the register by striking out the entries showing G. to be the owner of the shares & restoring the entries showing H. to be the owner thereof. Some correspondence followed, in which H. took up the position that he was now on the register, & that if G. wished to be registered he should apply to rectify the register under the above sect. As neither H. nor G. moved further in the matter the Navigation Co., took out this summons under the sect. asking for an order that the co., might be authorised to restore & retain G.'s name as the owner of the shares. Prior to the issue of the summons the transfer had been duly stamped with an ad valorem stamp & a penalty paid. It was not now disputed that the 60 shares in question formed part of the 930 shares sold by H. to M. H. & Co. The arts. of assocn. of the Navigation Co., did not require a transfer to be made by deed, but only by an instrument in writing:—Held: (1) under the circumstances the summons was properly taken out by the Navigation Co.; (2) the alteration in the register made by the secretary of the Navigation Co. was a mere nullity; (3) the registration of the transfer to G. having been made by the Navigation Co., without notice of the insufficiency of the stamp duty & the ad valorem, stamp duty & penalty having been since paid, the name of G. ought to remain on the register & the costs of this summons must be paid by H.—Re INDO-CHINA STEAM NAVIGATION CO., [1917] 2 Ch. 100; 86 L. S. afterwards agreed to make over these shares to H., & then refused to execute a transfer. H. thereupon persuaded W. to execute a fresh transfer direct to him, which H. took in for registration; but the directors, in consequence of a notice from S., refused to register it. H. then filed a bill for specific performance against S. S. put in an answer stating the transfer from W. to H., & his own willingness to concur in vesting the shares in H. in any way not involving his becoming a shareholder himself. Four days after this a petition for winding up was presented, upon which an order was made, W. being still the registered holder. The Master of the Rolls decided that the register ought to be rectified, & H. placed on the list of contributories instead of W.:—Held: (TURNER, L.J.) the jurisdiction given by 1862 Act, s. 35, to rectify the register is general, & not confined to cases where there has

1315. — — —.]—The arts. of assocn. of a co. (duly incorporated under 1862 Act) contained a provision, that in case the whole of the shares into which the nominal capital of the co. was divided were not subscribed for or allotted, the registered members of the co. for the time being should, if the directors should by resolution so declare, be & continue associated for the objects thereof, & that the business of the co. might be commenced from that time. W. applied for twenty shares, which were allotted to him. The whole of the capital was not subscribed for, but the directors never passed any resolution under the arts. of assocn. The co. continued, however, to carry on the undertaking, & made a call which W. refused to pay. In an action brought to enforce payment, the Ct. of Exch. decided in deft.'s favour, on the ground that there was no power to make calls, which decision was afterwards affirmed by the Ct. of Exch. Chamber. W. thereupon applied, under 1862 Act, s. 35, to have his name taken off the register of shareholders:—Held: inasmuch as that sect. only applies to cases where a person's name has been placed upon or omitted from the register without sufficient cause, or where default has been made in entering upon the register the fact that a person has ceased to be a shareholder, neither of which cases had been shown to have occurred, the ct. had no power to grant the application.—*Re NORTH STAFFORD STEEL, IRON & COAL Co. In such case the ct. has no jurisdiction to make such person disputing the title pay the costs of the summons rendered necessary by his opposition.

The pledgee of shares with transfers executed by the pledgor with the date & name of transferee in blank has, & also his transferee has, implied power to fill up the blanks. Such transfers, although executed as deeds by the original pledgor, will not operate as deeds, & if the regulations of the co. require a deed will only confer an equitable interest & operate as contracts to transfer, but where the arts. of assocn. did not require a deed & the blanks had been filled up by the transferee of the pledgor:—Held: they operated as valid transfers & conferred on him a right to be registered as a shareholder, which the ct. would enforce on summons under the above sect.

The co.'s arts. provided that the registration of transfers should be subject to the approval of the directors, & that until registration the transferor should be deemed to be the holder of the shares. In the subsequent winding up under supervision, the liquidator, finding the transfer unregistered, substituted the name of the transferee for that of the transferor on the register & list of contributories. 1333. Exercisable after liquidation begun.]—The power given to the ct. by 1862 Act, s. 35, of rectifying the register of members of a limited co. is exercisable in any of the cases therein mentioned, whether a co. is in liquidation or not; & accordingly, in a liquidation the power is not, by sect. 98, limited to rectification for the purpose of settling the list of contributories. In ordering rectification of the register under sect. 35, whether the co. is in liquidation or not, the ct. has power, in a proper case, to fix a particular date at which the registration shall become operative, even to the extent of making it retrospective; but subject, if necessary, to conditions protecting the rights of third persons. The transferee of shares in a limited co. sent in his transfer to the co. for registration in the usual course, but by mistake or oversight registration of the transfer was omitted. Subsequently the co. passed resolutions for a voluntary winding up with a view to reconstruction, whereupon the transferee, in the belief that his transfer had been registered, & purporting to act under sect. 161 of the above Act, served the liquidator with notice of dissent, which, however, the liquidator disregarded on the ground that the transferee was not a "member" of the co. as required by the sect. Upon an application by the transferee, under sect. 35, for rectification of the register so as to render his notice of dissent effectual:—Held: (1) there had been such "default or unnecessary delay" in registration as entitled appct. to an order for rectification by entering his name on the register as on a day prior to the passing of the winding-up resolutions; (2) the order did not invalidate the notices to registered members by which the meetings for a voluntary liquidation had been called, & would not, in the circumstances, work any injustice to other members of the co.—Re SUSSEX BRICK Co., [1904] 1 Ch. 598; 73 L. 1336. Principles of equity apply—Fraudulent transfer to escape liability for call.]—In adjudicating on an application under 1862 Act, s. 35, a ct. of equity is not bound to follow what a ct. of law would do in such a case, but will take into consideration any principle of equity applicable to the subject.

The arts. of a co. provided that on proof of title & execution of transfer, the co. should register the transferee, but that no transfer of shares should be made or registered after a call on such shares had been made until payment thereof. At a meeting of the board of directors the propriety of making a call was discussed. A shareholder present induced the directors to postpone consideration of the matter, & then, without informing them of his intention, transferred his shares to a pauper, in order to escape all further liability. The directors having declined to register the transfer:—Held: the ct. would not, under the above sect., rectify the register by removing the name of the transferor, & substituting that of the transferee. Semble: in a case of doubt, the ct. may, instead of adjudicating between a co. & a person claiming to be registered as a share-

n. Transfer before winding up—Register not altered at time of winding up—No unnecessary delay or default by company.]—Appct., a shareholder in the Indian Specie Bank, Ltd., sold some of his shares to respts. by various transfers which were lodged with the co. for registration. The co., however, went into liquidation before the transfers were in due course approved of by the Board of Directors. According to the practice observed by the co., transfers lodged up to the end of the previous week were placed before the Board of Directors at their meeting in the following week. The co. went into liquidation on Nov. 29, 1913. At a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the previous day, the transfers lodged in the previous week up to Nov. 22 only were considered. The transfers in dispute were lodged with the co. between Nov. 25 & 28, 1913. Appct. was accordingly placed by the liquidator on the list of contributories in Sched. A., for the shares which stood in his name on Nov. 29, 1913. Appct. contended that the register of shareholders should be rectified by the ct. under Indian Companies Act, ss. 58, 157, by substituting the names of respts. as transferees in place of his own name:—Held: as appct. had not proved that there was either absence of sufficient cause, or default, or unnecessary delay on the part of the co. in dealing with the transfers, the register of shareholders could not be rectified.—*Re INDIAN SPECIE BANK, LTD., SORABJI NUSSEERWANJI v. J., & KEATING, J.) appct. had precluded himself by his negligence from availing himself of the equitable jurisdiction of the ct. under the statutes; (2) (WILLES, & BYLES, JJ.), the property in the shares had not been changed by the forged transfers; (3) the motion failed.—*Re NORTH BRITISH AUSTRALASIAN CO., LTD., Ex p. 1343. — Includes names entered but struck out—On forfeiture of shares.—(1) L. was a holder of 102 shares in the I. Bank which was subsequently amalgamated with the Bank of H., etc. The directors of that bank put the name of L. on the register of its shareholders for 102 shares in it. They gave him notice thereof, & then made a call upon him in respect of the shares. He repudiated the shares & the call, whereupon the directors erased his name from the register, & declared his shares forfeited, but threatened to sue him at law under their special powers, for the unpaid calls. L. thereupon moved, under 1862 Act, s. 35, for an order to rectify the register, with respect to the 102 shares :—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the motion.

(2) L. having had due notice of the amalgamation of the two banks, & of the voluntary winding up of the I. Bank, was informed by the secretary of the Bank of H. that he would be entitled to 102 shares in it & certain other advantages, if he would declare his option to take them, & sign an accompanying document, then sent to him, to that effect within a given time. He signed the document & returned it within the time; but he altered the terms of it. He was then told that the altered document could not be accepted as a declaration by him of his option; that he must either accept or reject the proposed shares, etc., unconditionally, as offered to him in the first instance. He then, some time afterwards, wrote to the secretary stating that he would have nothing to do with the 102 shares. The directors of the Bank of H., who had put his name on the register of that bank for the 102 shares, then erased the name, & declared the share forfeited. Upon the above-stated motion being made :—Held: the name of L. ought never to have been put upon the register of the Bank of H. for the 102 shares; & he was entitled to a declaration of the ct. to that effect, with costs as against the co.

Is the name of the appct., in this case, "entered in" the register of members of a co.? In my opinion it was entered in without sufficient cause,

& that by the co.'s own admissions. The question is whether the fact of their having forfeited the shares since they made the entry deprives this ct. of any jurisdiction to rectify the first entry, which, in the opinion of the ct. was an improper one. I am of opinion it does not (ROMILLY, M.R.).—Re BANK OF HINDUSTAN, CHINA & JAPAN, LTD., Ex p. LOS (1865), 6 New Rep. 327; 34 L. J. Ch. 609; 12 L. T. 690; 11 Jur. N. S. 661; 13 W. R. 883.

But if he do not express his dissent from the agreement in the manner or within the time specified in that sect., he can get no other consideration for his shares, & must submit to lose them utterly if he refuses to accept the new shares. General powers of amalgamation given to the directors in the arts. of assocn. do not authorise them to bind non-assenting shareholders to accept the new shares. Semble: no power which could be given to directors, short of express words to that effect, would enable them to do so.

Appct. did not execute the deed, but the co. inserted his name on the register of shareholders, & returned his name to the Registry Office :—Held: appct. had authorised the co. to put his name on the register without execution of the deed, & his name had been properly placed on the list of contributories.—Re MERCHANT TRADERS' SHIP, LOAN, & INSURANCE CO., YELLAND'S CASE (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 395; 64 E. 1359. No meeting of directors before presentation of winding-up petition.—S. executed a transfer of shares to H. in Dec. 1865. The transfer according to the arts. of assocn., required the sanction of the directors, who might refuse it in certain cases. The transfer was not left at the office for approval till Mar. 3, 1866. In the ordinary course of business, the directors met once a week. Their last meeting had been on Mar. 1, & their next was to be on the 8th. On Mar. 7 a petition to wind up the co. was presented, & on the 17th a winding-up order was made. The transfer had never been registered:—Held: there had been no default or unnecessary delay on the part of the co. in placing H. on the register of shareholders; & an application by S., to which H. consented, to have the register rectified, & the name of H. substituted for that of S. on the list of contributories, was refused.—Re JOINT STOCK DISCOUNT CO., SHEPHERD'S CASE (1866), 2 Ch. The weekly board meeting of the directors took place three days after the transfer was left at the office, but the directors had not registered the transfer when the winding up commenced, & L.'s name was placed on the list of shareholders:—Held: there had been improper delay in registration & L.'s name must be taken off the register.—Re HERCULES INSURANCE CO., LOWE'S CASE (1870), L. Owing to non-attendance on previous occasions, he was unable to examine the whole of the entries:—Held: the co. were guilty of unnecessary delay, & a transferor whose name might have been removed from the register but for such delay was entitled to have his name removed from the list of contributories.

(2) In a second case the clerk of the co. did not enter a transfer which had been lodged in such book, because a call had been made, though not due, & not paid on the shares transferred:—

Form of order—Refusal to prevent full use of voting power—In time for meeting.]—The arts. of assocn. of a co. provided that every member should have one vote for every share up to 100, one for every five shares in the next 100, & one for every ten shares after 200. The directors were empowered to decline to register any transfer of shares made by a member who was indebted to the co., or, in the case of shares not fully paid up, to a transferee of whom they did not approve. Notices having been issued of a meeting at which would be proposed resolutions for winding up the co. voluntarily, & for the appointment of a liquidator, the largest creditors of the co., who were also the holders of 1,000 fully paid-up shares, in order to secure full voting powers at the meeting, made nine transfers of 100 shares each to as many nominees of their own, & sent them in for registration; but the co. refused to register the transfers. On motion on behalf of the transferors under 1862 Act, s. 25, the co. were ordered to register the transfers in time to enable the transferees to vote at the meeting. Where there is no reason to the contrary under the arts. of assocn. of a co., it is the duty of directors to receive & register transfers at once, & this, although the object of the transfers is to distribute the shares & so to obtain a larger number of votes & command greater influence at a meeting of shareholders already summoned.—Re STRANTON IRON & STEEL CO. (1873), L. They subsequently registered pltf. as the holder of 675 partly unpaid shares. Pltf. being threatened with an action by judgment-creditors of the co. applied to the ct. to rectify the register, & restrain the judgment-creditors from proceeding against him at law:—Held: the co. had no authority to place him on the register in any other capacity than as the holder of fully paid-up shares.—*ASHWORTH v. On a motion on behalf of W. to have the register rectified by inserting his name as a holder of fully paid-up shares:—Held: the above sect. was quite inapplicable, & the register must be rectified shareholder's name from the register, his name was included by the liquidator in the list of contributories.

The shareholders having presented a petition under sect. 32 of the Cos. Act, 1908, for rectification of the register by removal of his name therefrom & also for removal of his

S. executed the transfer deed, & his name was placed on the register of members, neither P. nor the co. being then aware of the fact of his infancy. In Oct., 1864, a call was made in respect of the twenty shares upon P., who, in Nov., 1864, was informed that the directors had disallowed the transfer, having discovered that S. was not a person whose means would justify the co. in accepting him as a shareholder. In May, 1865, an action for call moneys was commenced by the co. against S., who, in July, 1865, pleaded infancy, & the action was not prosecuted. Several calls were subsequently made; but P. was not applied to for payment in respect of any of them. In Jan. 1868, a winding-up order was made. At that date S. was still an infant. On application by the official liquidator to have the register & list amended by substituting P.'s name for that of S.:—Held: the laches of the co. in permitting S.'s name to remain on the register, & their omission to inform P. of the fact of S.'s infancy, disentitled the official liquidator to have P.'s name substituted for that of S. on the list of contributories, & application refused.—Re EUROPEAN CENTRAL RY. CO., PARSONS' CASE (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 656; 39 L. J. Ch. 64.

1418 i. Claimed on ground of infancy of shareholder—Delay by shareholder.]—Shares were put into the name of S., an infant, without any application being made by him for the same. S. became of age in Sept., 1913, & in Oct., 1913, he applied to the managing director of the co. who, under the arts. of assocn., had very extensive powers, to have the shares taken out of his name. The latter promised to have this done, but neglected to do so. In June, 1917, at the direction of the managing director, S. executed transfers of the shares standing in his name to D. an infant; S. knew that D. was an infant at the time. The transfers were entered in the transfer journal & approved by the co., but S.'s name was not removed from the register of shareholders. A petition for the winding up of the co. was presented in Aug., 1914, & an order winding up the co. was made on Sept. 8, 1914. On Sept. 16, 1914, S. applied to the co. to have his name removed from the register of shareholders, on the ground that the transfer to D., having been approved by the co., should have been registered by it, & also on the ground that his name had been put on the register, without any application having been made by him for shares:—Held: (1) the co. was justified in not registering the transfer to D. as he was an infant; (2) S. was not precluded from obtaining relief by reason of the fact that he had executed the transfer to D. or by reason of any delay on his part, & in consequence his name should be removed from the register, as he had made no application for the shares allotted to him.—Re EARLE, HERMANNE, LTD., SPENCE'S CASE, [1914] 14 S. 1432. Made on same day—As consent order for rectification.]—In Mar. 1871, W., a creditor & contributory of a limited co., the directors of which had power to accept surrenders of shares, presented a petition for a winding-up order, & on May 29, 1871, on the hearing of the petition, an order was made, as on a motion to rectify the register, by consent of the parties, rectifying the

the new co. or attended its meetings in person or by proxy.—DOMINION TRUST CO. v. ALLEN, [1917] 3 W. W. R. 483.—CAN.

l. Delay on part of company.]—A mining co. purchased some of its own shares from certain shareholders whose names were taken off the co.'s register. Three months afterwards a call was made upon the shares, which then stood in the name of the co. The co. took no steps to have the register rectified until the lapse of more than three weeks from the date of the call.

Upon an application on behalf of the co. to have the names of the shareholders inserted upon the register in respect of the shares transferred by them to the co.:—Held: the purchase of the shares was illegal, but, as the shares would have been forfeited for non-payment of calls if the shareholders' names had remained on the register, & as the co. had done nothing to protect itself from having them forfeited, the names could not be reinstated on the register, & they were not liable for the call.—Re EUROPEAN GOLD-MINING CO., (LTD.) (1898) 16 N. SECT. 14.—SHARES GENERALLY.

1433. Nature—Distinguished from sum of money.]—Provisions in a co.'s arts. of assocn. compelling a shareholder at any time during the continuance of the co. to transfer his shares to particular persons at a particular price are not void as being repugnant to absolute ownership or as tending to perpetuity.

There is nothing obnoxious to the bkpcy. law in arts. which bond fide provide that a shareholder shall, in the event of his bkpcy., sell his shares to particular persons at a particular price, which is fixed for all persons alike, & is not shown to be less than the fair price which might otherwise be obtained.

A share in a co. cannot properly be likened to a sum of money settled upon & subject to executory limitations to arise in the future; it is rather to be regarded as the interest of the shareholder in the co., measured, for the purposes of liability & dividend, by a sum of money, but consisting of a series of mutual covenants entered into by all the shareholders inter se in accordance with 1862 Act, s. 16, & made up of various rights & liabilities contained in the contract, including the right to a certain sum of money.—BORLAND'S TRUSTEE v. STEEL BROTHERS & Co., LTD., [1901] 1 Ch. 279; 70 L. J. Ch. 51; 47 W. R. 120; 17 T. L. R. 45.

1434. —Whether chose in action.]—Shares in a co. are not an interest in land, nor "goods, executed between M. & the Real Estate Bank, whereby it was declared that M. should hold the shares subject to the bank's direction, & should transfer them as required by the bank, & until such transfer should stand possessed of the shares, in trust for the bank; the bank undertook to indemnify M. against all losses. Subsequently, after the execution of the deed, M. transferred the shares at the bank's direction to some nominee of the bank, whose name did not appear. The Chatsworth Estate Co. went into liquidation. M. then applied to have the co.'s register rectified by removing his name & substituting the name of the bank therefore:—Held: as soon as the shares had been transferred to M. at the request of the bank, his duties as trustee ceased, & he was entitled to have the register rectified.—Re CHATSWORTH ESTATE CO., Ex p. MARRIOTT (1892), 18 V. L. R. 400.—AUS.

c. Transfer made before winding up—Alteration not effected in register.]—In 1893, B. was the registered holder of 600 shares in a co., which shares he held as trustee for S., as was well known to the directors & officers of the co. On Sept. 11, 1893, B. transferred the shares to S. & the transfer was lodged for registration the same day, & was approved at the meeting of directors, though calls were due on the shares, which had since been paid. S. was chairman of the meeting & informed B. that the transfer had been approved by the Board & that it was "all right." No alteration in the register of shareholders was, however, made. From that time up to 1900, calls were made, but B. received no notice of the calls in respect of these shares, though he did receive notices in respect of other shares held by him. In 1900, B. learnt for the first time, from a letter from the manager of the co., that his name was still on the co.'s register, & he wrote protesting. No other action was taken by him, & no action was taken by the co. until 1904, when the co. went into voluntary liquidation, & the liquidator placed B. on the list of contributories. The letter from the manager stated as a reason for the transfer not having been registered that no transfer had or could have been registered since May, 1897, because of a scheme of arrangement sanctioned at that date. B. applied to have his name removed from the register & the list of contributories:—Held: B.'s name should have been removed from the register on Sept. 11, 1893, & must now be removed from the list of contributories & from the register as from that date; B. was not precluded from this relief by reason of the scheme of arrangement or by any delay on his part.—Re COLONIAL FINANCE, ETC., CORPN. (1905), 5 S. p. Rescission before winding up—Shareholder entitled to have his name removed from list of contributories.]—A distinct unequivocal repudiation of a subscription by a subscriber who is entitled to repudiate conveyed to the directors of a co. so that it becomes the duty of the latter to remove the former's name from the list of shareholders is sufficient, if made before the commencement of winding-up proceedings, to entitle the subscriber to have his name removed from the list of contributories without the necessity for the further step of initiating proceedings before the commencement of winding-up proceedings.—Re WESTERN CANADIAN FIRE INSURANCE CO., COWPER'S CASE (1915), 30 W. q. Acquiescence before winding up.]—C. purchased shares in a co. in 1878, but the papers required to make a formal transfer to him in the books of the co. were not furnished to the co. till Dec. 20, 1881. On Feb. 11, 1882, C.'s name was entered on the list of shareholders, but there was no formal approval of the transfer by the board of directors until May 19, 1883. Before this, however, on Nov. 15, 1882, C. was notified of a call on the shares for which he was sued, & defended the action, but the action, for some reason not explained, was not proceeded with. This was the first intimation C. received that the papers furnished by him had been acted upon, but he appeared to have made no inquiries from the co. subsequently to Dec. 20, 1881. The co. ceased to do business on May 13, 1883, & the winding-up order was made on Oct. 9, 1883. It did not appear that C. had taken any steps to repudiate his position as a shareholder before these winding-up proceedings; nor did he show any prejudice resulting to him from the failure of the co. to notify him that the transfer to his name had been actually consummated on the books of the co.:—Held: C. was rightly placed on the list of contributories in the winding-up proceedings.—Re COLE & CANADA FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO., CLOSE'S CASE (1884), 8 O. board of directors power to divide the shares into shares of smaller amount. The directors exercised this power & converted each £100 share into £20 shares:—Held: such conversion was unauthorised & void; for that, under 1862 Act, s. 12, the memorandum can only be altered in certain particulars, of which this was not one.

An express power in the memorandum to reduce the nominal amounts of the shares would be ineffectual (LORD CAIRNS, L.J.).

(2) After the attempted conversion, F. transferred to R. fifty of the new £20 shares. These shares could be identified in the books of the co. as being the shares into which ten of the original £100 shares had been divided:—Held: the transfer was effectual to pass the ten £100 shares, & that R., & not F., must be on the list of contributories.

(3) K. at the time of the attempted conversion was a holder of £100 shares, the certificates of which he never exchanged. The directors, after the conversion, made a call on the £20 shares, & K. not paying it, they forfeited his shares in Jan. 1865, in a way which, if the conversion had been legal, would have been quite regular. K. wrote a letter asking a remission of the forfeiture, treating the shares as £20 shares, & making no objection to the regularity of the proceedings. No notice was taken of the letter, & he never afterwards claimed to be a member. In May, 1866, a winding-up order was made:—Held: the forfeiture must be treated as valid, & K. was not a contributory.—Re FINANCIAL CORPN., FEILING'S & RIMINGTON'S CASE, KING'S CASE, HOLMES'S, PRITCHARD'S & ADAMS'S CASES (1867), 2 Ch. 1448. Conversion into stock—Whether authorised.]—The original capital of a co. consisted of preference & ordinary shares, the preference shares having a fixed dividend but no priority as to capital. The co. having power to convert its paid-up shares into stock converted its ordinary shares into ordinary stock at face value, but in converting its preference shares into preference stock bearing a lower rate of interest it gave the holders extra bonus stock to maintain their former dividends. The co. also made direct issues of fully-paid preference & ordinary stock for cash without going through the formality of first issuing fully-paid shares & converting them. The co. also made direct issues of partly-paid ordinary shares & partly-paid ordinary stock for cash. All the holders were placed on the register & received dividends. Many years after these issues were made the co. was wound up voluntarily, & after paying all the creditors the liquidator had a balance of surplus assets for distribution among the members:—Held: (1) having regard to the lapse of time, the irregularity in the direct issues of the fully-paid preference & ordinary stock must be treated as waived, & the holders were entitled to rank for the full amount of their holding; (2) the original holders & transferees of preference stock converted from fully-paid preference shares could only rank for the amount representing conversion at face value & not for the bonus stock, which was wholly ultra vires & must be treated as non-existent; (3) the holders of partly-paid shares were entitled to rank for the amount paid & were subject to a call for equalisation; (4) the original holders & transferees of partly-paid ordinary stock were not entitled to rank at all, as their stock was wholly ultra vires & must be treated as non-existent; (5) that no call could be made on the holders of the bonus or partly-paid stock.—Re HOME & FOREIGN INVESTMENT & AGENCY CO., LTD., [1912] 1 Ch. 72; 81 L. 1450. — Power to increase capital by issue of new shares—Creation of preference shares.]—By the arts. of assocn. of a joint-stock co. limited, authority was given to borrow money on such terms as they might think fit; & also, by the resolution of a special meeting to be convened by not less than fourteen days' notice, to increase the capital of the co. by the issue of new shares; &

6 per cent., out of the profits available therefor, & the balance of the profits after payment of expenses was to be applied on the stock until the maturity value thereof was reached, as stated in the report, the owners of such stock having the right of withdrawal after 3 years by giving 30 days' notice in writing to the co., on the conditions mentioned in the report. Pltf. was also the holder of dividend-bearing terminating stock certificates fully paid, issued under by-laws of the E. Co., which were by certificates repayable at a date subsequent to the agreement for sale of the assets of the E. Co. In 1903 the E. Co. entered into an agreement with the S. Co. for sale to latter co. of all its assets, subject to ratification by the shareholders of the respective cos., which was subsequently procured, the agreement being filed with the corpn.'s registrar, but no schedule of names of shareholders of the E. Co. was attached to agreement. Permanent stock was then issued by the S. Co. in lieu of stock held by shareholders of the E. Co. Pltf., on being notified of the meeting of shareholders of the E. Co. wrote protesting against sale, stating that he would withdraw his money from the co. before the merging took place, & subsequently he again wrote that he positively refused to allow his certificates to be delivered up in exchange for the substituted stock. Two dividend cheques on the new stock were sent & received by pltf., one of which he cashed. Pltf. alleged that the transaction between him & the E. Co. was, in fact, a loan; & he brought an action to have it declared that he was a creditor of the E. Co. & entitled to be repaid the amount so paid by him, &, before commencing the action, he tendered back to the co. the amount of the cashed dividend cheque together with the unused one:—Held: in the circumstances, the sale was valid & binding, & was not affected by the fact that the schedule was not attached to agreement, & pltf. was a shareholder in the E. Co., & not a creditor in respect of either class of shares, & was bound by the terms of the agreement of sale.—LENNON v. EMPIRE LOAN & SAVINGS CO. (1906), 12 O. L. R. 560; 8 O. W. R. 162.—CAN.

1451. — — — — —.]—A co., on increasing its capital, either under the provisions of the memorandum or under 1862 Act, ss. 8 & 12, may issue preference shares; & a provision in the arts. of assocn. authorising the increase of capital by the issue of preference shares, being a matter merely of internal regulation, is not inconsistent with a memorandum which is silent as to the mode of issue of the new shares, & therefore is not ultra vires.

1452. — — — — — Subject to conditions to be determined—Shares originally divided into ordinary & preference shares—Power to create second preference shares.]—The memorandum of assocn. of a joint-stock co., provided that the capital of the co. should consist of a certain number of ordinary & a certain number of preference shares. One of the arts. of assocn. provided that the capital might, with the sanction of a special resolution, be increased by the issue of new shares of such nominal amount, & on such conditions as the resolution might determine. At a general meeting of the co. a special resolution was passed that the capital of the co. should be increased by a certain sum to be divided into shares, & that the directors should be authorised to issue any of such new shares as second preference shares. 1453. — — — — — Power to create preference shares.]—(1) If the memorandum & arts. of assocn. of a co. are silent on the subject, it is an implied condition that the shareholders are entitled to rank equally as regards dividend, without preference or priority between themselves; but such implication will be rebutted if the arts. of assocn., contemporaneous with the memorandum, contain clear provisions as to the preference or priority of classes of shares. The memorandum of assocn. of a co. incorporated under 1862 Act, declared that the capital was £2,700,000, divided into 135,000 shares of £20 each. It was provided by the arts. of assocn. that the directors might, with the sanction of a special resolution of the co. previously given in general meeting, increase the capital by the issue of new shares, such increase of capital to be made in such manner, to such amount, & to be with & subject to such rules, regulations, privileges, & conditions as the co. in general meeting should think fit:—Held: special resolutions authorising an increase of the capital by the issuing of preferred shares were not in excess of the powers of the company.

(2) The object of issuing the preference shares was to satisfy creditors who were willing to take them in payment for their debts:—Held: the object was a proper one.—HARRISON v. MEXICAN RY. Co. (1875), L. R. 19 Eq. 358; 44 L. J. Ch. 403; 32 L. T. 82; 23 W. R. 403.

About half the capital of the co. should be £1,000,000 divided into 100,000 shares of £10 each. The arts. of assocn. provided that the co. might, by special resolution, increase the capital & determine the conditions on which such increase should be made, the number & amount of the shares into which such increased capital should be divided, & the time, mode, & terms, at & according to which such last mentioned shares should be issued:—Held: a special resolution of the co. to increase the capital of the co. by the creation of

SUB-SECT. 2.—DEFINITION OF CLASS RIGHTS.

1460. By memorandum.]—By the memorandum of assocn. of a co. limited by shares it was stated that the objects of the co. were, the cultivation of lands in Ireland, & other similar purposes there specified, & to do all such other things as the co. might deem incidental or conducive to the attainment of any of those objects, & that the capital of the co. was £1,050,000, divided into 140,000 A shares of £5 each, & 3,500 B shares of £100 each. By Art. 8 of the contemporaneous arts. of assocn. it was provided that the capital produced by the issue of B shares should be invested, & that the income, & so far as necessary the capital, should be applied so as to make good to the holders of A shares a preferential dividend of £5 per cent. on the amounts paid up on the A shares. Subject to this, the B fund was to belong to the owners of B shares. The profits of the co., after paying the £5 per cent. dividend to the A shareholders, were to be applied in payment of a non-cumulative dividend of £5 per cent. to the B shareholders, & the surplus was to be divided rateably between the A shareholders & B shareholders according to the amounts paid up on their respective shares:—Held: art. 8 was invalid, as it purported to make the B capital applicable to purposes not within the objects of the co. as defined by the memorandum of assocn., & in a way not incidental or conducive to the attainment of those objects, & that the directors must be restrained from acting upon it.

The arts. of assocn. of a co. cannot, except in the cases provided for by sect. 12 of the 1862 Act, modify the memorandum of assocn. in any of the particulars required by the Act to be stated in the memorandum.—GUINNESS v. LAND CORPN. OF k. Power to modify rights by extraordinary resolution—Provision in articles of association.]—The preference shareholders in a co. limited by shares were entitled to receive out of the profits a fixed cumulative preferential dividend of 5 per cent. per annum. By art. 46 of arts. of assocn. it was provided that all or any of the rights & privileges attached to any class of shares might be modified by an extraordinary resolution of the holders of that class. Power of general meeting—On reconstruction.—At a general meeting of a limited co., having its capital divided into preferred & deferred shares, resolutions were passed by the statutory majority for a voluntary liquidation & transfer of the business to a new co. in consideration of shares in the new co. being allotted to the two classes of shareholders in the old co., so as to give to the preferred shareholders a different proportion of the capital of the new co. from that which they were entitled to in the old co.:—Held: 1862 Act, s. 161, only enables the general meeting to decide on the nature of the consideration to be accepted, & not on the mode of its distribution.

Semble: the only proper mode in which such consideration could be divided among the members of a co. would be, under sect. 133 of the Act, according to their rights & interests in the co.—*GRIFFITH v. These arts. were said to be in the common form:—Held: although the provisions as to general meetings were to apply, mutatis mutandis, to class meetings, they must be so applied subject to the provision above quoted, which was inserted in art. 13 for the purpose of protecting the rights of the privileged class of shareholders; & accordingly at all class meetings, whether adjourned or not, the quorum must be three-fourths of the members of the class required by art. 13.—*HEMANS v. To raise working capital a co. offered shares at par to the applt. & some other persons with an option to take further shares at par within a certain time. 1468. — Agreement to allot to vendor on increase of capital.]—A contract by a newly-formed co. to allot to the vendor to the co. or his nominees, in fully-paid shares, one-fifth of each increase of share capital in the co. is not wholly invalid & bad altogether, but merely imposes an obligation on the co. to allot such shares, if demanded, on the vendor paying for them. The co. cannot be compelled under such a contract to allot such shares as fully paid without further consideration, & the vendor to the co. or his nominee so demanding such shares under the contract must accordingly pay the nominal price of such share capital if he wishes to take it up.—HONG KONG & CHINA GAS CO., LTD. v. GLEN, [1914] 1 Ch. 527; 83 L. J. Ch. 561; 110 L. T. 859; 30 T. L. R. 339; 58 Sol. Jo. 380; 21 Mans. 242.

1470. Effect of option—On exercise of company's powers.]—The fact that a co. has given to any person the option of taking its unissued shares at a future date at an agreed price does not fetter the co. in any way in the conduct of its business in the interval, & it may exercise all the powers conferred upon it by the memorandum or arts. of assocn., & either dispose of its business to another co. or agree to a voluntary liquidation. After liquidation proceedings have commenced a person holding an option of taking shares is entitled, if he chooses to exercise his option, to have shares issued to him & to be put on the list of contributories, & if the liquidators refuse to do so, the measure of his damages is his share in the existing assets of the co. after deducting the price he had agreed to pay for the shares.—*HIRSCH & Co. v. 1472. Exercise of option—Whether specific performance decreed—All shares already allotted.]—Pltf. advanced money to a co. upon the faith of a resolution that, when the time for which the loan was made expired, he should be entitled to be repaid in money with interest, or by an allotment of shares to the amount of his advance. He elected to accept shares in payment, but the co. refused to allot him any, & he filed a bill for specific performance of the agreement, & for damages for the breach thereof against the directors & the co. At that time there were no shares remaining unallotted, & the pltf. was aware of the fact:—Held: under such circumstances he could not maintain a bill for specific performance; & that as at the time when the bill was filed the pltf. had no title to the equitable relief sought, the ct. could not under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, award him damages; for that Act was never intended to transfer the jurisdiction of a ct. of law to a ct. of equity, but to enable a ct. of equity to do complete justice between the parties in matters actually within its own jurisdiction.—FERGUSON v. WILSON (1866), 2 Ch. App. 77; 15 L. T. 230; 30 J. P. 788; 12 Jur. N. S. 912; 15 W. R. 80, L. JJ.

PART III. SECT. 16.

1. Exercise of option—Within what time.]—Where the directors of a co. gave a mining engineer the option of taking 10,000 of the co.'s reserved shares within a fortnight at a price below par, & the shares went from considerably below par to a high premium, whereupon the engineer exercised his option & made a large profit:—Held: a fortnight was not an unreasonable time to allow for the exercise of an option.—ORANGE RIVER LAND & ASBESTOS CO.'S, TRUSTEES v. HIRSCH (1892), 6 H. C. 71.—S. AF.

1474. — Measure of damages.]—HIRSCH & Co. v. BURNS, No. 1470, ante.

1475. — Within what time—Under reconstruction scheme.]—A syndicate in which M. held an eighth interest, sold certain gold mines to co. No. 1, receiving in part payment certain fully paid-up shares in the co. Z. & others became the owners of M.'s interest, but it was not ascertained how much of M.'s interest Z. & the others individually acquired. Neither M. nor Z. ever was registered as a member of the co. No. 1. This co. about two years later than the purchase from the syndicate, went into voluntary liquidation & sold its assets to co. No. 2, & as consideration for the sale, each holder of a certain number of fully-paid shares in co. No. 1 was to be entitled to require to be allotted to him a certain number of shares in co. No. 2, on which he would, on allotment, have to pay 2s. per share, which would then leave 1s. per share unpaid. No time was named within which this option was to be exercised. The sale was duly carried out & co. No. 1 was dissolved. About a year after this purchase co. No. 2 went into voluntary liquidation & sold its assets to co. No. 3, which paid for them by allotment of its shares to shareholders in co. No. 2. During the whole year of the latter co.'s existence A. made no claim to have any shares in that co. allotted to him, but a year after the sale by the second to the third co. the shares in this last rose to a premium & then Z. claimed an allotment of shares in the second co. under the option given by that co. to shareholders in the first co.:—Held: the option to shareholders of co. No. 1, to take shares in co. No. 2 was one which required to be exercised within a reasonable time, & the delay which had occurred was fatal to Z.'s claim; also, his claim being practically one for specific performance he could not have obtained this owing to his share of M.'s interest in the syndicate not being determined.—ZUCCANI v. 1476. —]—A shareholder in a co. which had by special resolution resolved that the co. should be wound up, & its assets transferred to a new co. to be formed, had notice of resolutions which gave her the option of exchanging within a limited time her shares for shares in the new co. at a fixed rate. She also had notice of an agreement between the liquidator of the old co. & new co., in which no date was fixed for exercising the option, & of a deed-poll by which the co. covenanted to perform the agreement. She did not exercise the option, & protested against the proposed arrangement, & took proceedings unsuccessfully to prevent it from being carried out. Some months afterwards when the shares in the new co. had risen considerably in value, she applied for an allotment of shares, & on being refused, brought the present action claiming an allotment of shares or damages:—Held: the action could not be maintained.—WESTON v.

SECT. 17.—THE CONTRACT TO TAKE SHARES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—THE CONTRACT GENERALLY.

A. What constitutes.

(a) In General.

1477. General rule.]—F., with a view of qualifying himself as a director of a co., applied for shares in it simpliciter, without annexing any condition to his application, & paid the deposit money upon such shares. At a board meeting, at which he was present, a resolution was passed "that the shares in the co. now applied for be allotted & letters of allotment issued forthwith"; & he afterwards attended meetings of the board as a director. Subsequently, upon his request, the directors cancelled the allotment to him, & repaid to him his deposit. There was no evidence of there ever having been any express notice to him of the allotment:—Held: the contract was complete & binding, & the directors had no power to cancel the allotment.

Three things are required to establish a complete contract to take shares: (1) application for shares; (2) allotment; (3) that the allotment should be communicated to & acquiesced in by the shareholder.—Re SALOON STEAM PACKET Co., Ex p. FLETCHER (1867), 37 L. J. Ch. 49; 17 L. T. 136; 16 W. R. 75.

1478. — Application—Persons applying on behalf of others.]—The rule that, to make a binding contract to take shares, there must be application, allotment by the co., & communication to the allottee of that allotment, applies as strongly to a person who applies as trustee for a third person, as to one who applies simply on his own behalf. R. applied for shares in A. co. at the instigation of the managing director of B. co., who gave him a letter on behalf of B. co., indemnifying him against all responsibility. R. sent in the application himself from his own address, & paid the deposit by a cheque on his own banker, although the money was supplied by B. co. The shares were allotted to R., & his name was placed on the register; no notice of allotment was sent to him, but the notice was sent to the office of the B. co. Co. A. was afterwards wound up:—Held: there was no contract to take the shares, & R.'s name must be removed from the list of contributors.—*Re PERUVIAN RYS. PART III. SECT. 17, SUB-SECT. 1.— A. (a).

1477 i. General rule.]—To constitute a binding contract to take shares in a co., when such contract is constituted by application & allotment, there must be an application by the intending shareholder, an allotment by the directors of the co. of the shares applied for, & a communication by the directors to the appct. of the fact of the allotment having been made.—HODGINS v.

1478 i. — Application—Persons applying on behalf of others.]—A person who applies for shares in a co. registered under the Cos. Acts & authorises his name to be placed on the register of members, becomes, on allotment of the shares & registration of his name in terms of his authority, a shareholder of the co.; & is not entitled to have his name removed from the register by showing that he did not become a shareholder on his own account but merely that he might by agreement with the directors place the shares among such persons as he found willing to take them.—MILN v. NORTH BRITISH FRESH FISH SUPPLY Co (1887), 15 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 21; 25 Sc. L. R. 36.—SCOT.

1479. — & payment of deposit—By partner in pursuance of contract by firm—No allotment or entry in register.]—A firm of T. & Co. were appointed agents of a co. on condition of taking 250 shares in the co. D., a member of the firm, applied for fifty shares, & paid thereon a deposit of £1 per share, but no notice of allotment was sent to him, nor was he entered on the register of shareholders. T., another member of the firm, applied for 200 shares & paid the deposit thereon:—Held: D. was liable in respect of the fifty shares, & must remain on the list of contributories.—Re VALPARAISO WATER WORKS CO., DAVIES' CASE (1872), 41 L. 1480. "Agreement to take"—Agreement to place—Whether evidence of.]—An agreement to place shares in a co. is not equivalent to an agreement to take shares, & the person making it is not liable to be placed on the register as a member, although he may be liable to an action for damages if he fails to perform his contract.

G. agreed with the directors of a co. that he would place 1,000 shares in consideration of his being appointed their agent at Hamburg. The directors placed his name on the register of shareholders for 1,000 shares; but did not inform him of it, & sent him no letter of allotment. It was afterwards proposed that there should be a second issue of shares, & in Oct. 1869, G. wrote a letter to the manager promising to keep for himself the 1,000 shares which he had undertaken to place, & to pay for them out of his commission on the second issue. The second issue of shares was never made, by reason of the failing credit of the co. In Feb. 1870, G. was called upon by the directors to pay the calls on 1,000 shares, & in reply he repudiated the shares on the ground that no second issue had been made, but took no measures to have his name removed from the register. About a month afterwards the co. was wound up:—Held: (1) G. could not be put on the list of contributories in respect of his undertaking to place the 1,000 shares; (2) his subsequent agreement to keep the shares for himself was conditional on the second issue of shares being made, & as the condition failed through no fault of his, he was not bound to take the shares; (3) he was guilty of no laches in not applying to have his name removed from the register before the co. was wound up.—Re MONARCH INSURANCE CO., GORRISSEN'S CASE (1873), 8 Ch. 1481. Instructions to agent.]—In May, 1865, F. sent P., the manager of the O. Bank, £800, requesting him to invest it in the bank. In Mar. 1866, P. sent F. certificates of 160 shares in the bank of £20 each, £5 only being paid on each

as being desirous of taking twenty shares in a co. about to be formed. The co. was subsequently formed, & twenty shares were allotted to appct. by resolution of the board. No formal application for shares was signed by appct., no notice of allotment was given to him, & no payment had been made by him, either on application or allotment. Subsequently the co. was placed under liquidation, a list of contributories upon which appct.'s name appeared was attached to the liquidator's report, & after notice in the public press, was confirmed by the ct. Upon application by H., who had been unaware that his name was on the list of contributories:—Held: appct. could not be regarded as a member of the society, & was entitled to have his name erased from the list of contributories.—HEDDERWICK v. SOUTH AFRICAN GENERAL WORKERS' UNION CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. (1908), 25 S. C. 5.—S. AF.

n. "Agreement to take"—Payment on account.]—Deft. signed the following memorandum, which was written upon a page of a book, kept as a minute book of the meetings of various persons who intended forming a co. "We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to pay for the amount of stock after our respective names, & we further agree & bind ourselves to abide by the bye-laws, rules, & regulations of the assocn." Deft. did not sign the petition for letters patent, nor any memorandum of assocn., but paid $10 on account of his subscription for a share. In an action by pltf., a creditor of the co., for unpaid calls:—Held: deft. was not liable.—ALLAN v. GORDON (1884), 1 Man. L. R. 132.—CAN.

o. — Payment not made.]—On an application by G., a shareholder of an incorporated co., in his own name, & that of the co., for an order directing the removal of the name of

B. from the register of shareholders:—Held: B. was, by agreement with the co., bound to pay at least par for the shares which stood in his name, & he was not the less a shareholder, because he had not yet paid, the price to be paid not having been settled.—Re GRAMM MOTOR TRUCK CO. OF CANADA & BENNETT (1915), 9 O. W. N. 321; 35 O. L. R. 224.—CAN.

q. Whether implied—By acceptance of scrip—& retention of shares.]—Pltf. was induced by L. to take one share in a co. which he was forming to buy land, to consist of 100 shares of £1,000 each. L. found a co. but it consisted of 110,000 shares of £1 each, & 5,500 shares, paid up to 4s. each, were allotted to pltf. In an action by pltf.:—Held: pltf. never antecedently agreed to become a member of the co. formed, but having accepted scrip in it without objection, & retained the shares without any attempt until this action to repudiate them, he must, as between himself & the co., be deemed to have assented to take such shares.—CURWEN v. YAR YEAN LAND CO. (1891), 17 V. L. R. 64, 745.—AUS.

r. Verbal application—Signature of acceptances.]—H. applied verbally to the M. & Co. Ltd. for thirty shares offering to pay by two bills at three & four months. The co. accepted the offer. H. accepted the two bills for the price & left the shares as security. Scrip were filled in but not signed or issued. H. signed no application & did not sign the deed or the register but his name was entered on the register as a member. The directors made calls & sued H. for them pending the currency of his bills which they had negotiated:—Held: H.'s signature of the acceptances only was evidence of his consent to be a member if such consent were necessary.—McIVOR HYDRAULIC SLUICING & GOLD MINING CO. v. HUGHES (1867), 4 W. W. & A.B. 111.—AUS.

s. Authority to secretary to subscribe.]—Deft. had taken shares in a road co., for which he subscribed his name, & the secretary called to solicit a further subscription. Deft. told him he would take another £100, & the secretary afterwards, in deft.'s absence, put down his name for these shares:—Held: not sufficient to charge deft.—INGERSOLL & THAMESFORD GRAVEL ROAD CO. v. MCCARTHY (1858), 16 U. C. R. 162.—CAN.

t. Substitution of applicant.]—Defts. were an incorporated co., the capital of which was $30,000, in 100 shares of $300 each, ninety of which had been subscribed for, & paid up in full by duly made calls thereon. Defts. employed pltf. to take charge of their business, & he was appointed president, at a salary of $1,200. He subscribed for seven shares of the unallotted stock, debited himself with the amount thereof, $2,100, in the co.'s books, & afterwards paid this sum. Afterwards, desiring to obtain control of the co., he arranged with four of the stockholders for the transfer to him of their stock, but one of them, M., to enable him to remain a director, was to, & he did, subscribe for the three remaining shares unallotted. Pltf. wished to withdraw from this arrangement, & the parties agreed to cancel it; but M. was to be relieved of the three shares, & M.'s name was accordingly erased, & pltf.'s inserted as subscriber for these shares, the substitution being made either by pltf. himself or by the book keeper by his direction. It was also arranged between pltf. & the other directors, that this stock should be entered in share, & at the same time sent him a cheque for the amount of the dividend due upon the shares. In July, 1866, the bank was ordered to be wound up, & F.'s name appearing on the register of shareholders, he was settled on the list of contributories in respect of 160 shares. Calls having been made which F. was unable to pay, he proposed a compromise, which was, however, refused. In Aug. 1870, F. took out a summons to have his name removed from the list of contributories:—Held: (1) F., having agreed to take shares in the bank, & his name appearing in the registry of shareholders, he was rightly settled on the list of contributories; (2) P., for the purposes of this transaction, was the agent of F. & also of the bank.—Re ORIENTAL COMMERCIAL BANK, Ex p. FRASER (1871), 24 L. T. 746; 19 W. R. 844.

1482. Whether implied—By acceptance of shares not applied for.—A co. was formed for acquiring the business of two persons who were manufacturers of medicated food & wine. It was agreed that the purchase-money should be paid partly in cash & partly in fully paid-up ordinary shares of £1 each; & in addition to this forty fully paid-up "founders' shares" of £25 each were to be allotted to the vendors or their nominees. This agreement was never registered. The promoters of the co. & the co. after its incorporation entered into negotiations with various medical men to induce them to recommend to their patients & others the goods sold by the co., promising them each one of the founders' fully paid-up £25 shares. As soon as the co. was incorporated the directors signed certificates for the "founders' shares" with the names in blank. These the secretary filled up & sent one to each of the medical men who had consented to accept shares. It did not appear on the certificates that the shares were paid-up, but the secretary in his correspondence with the recipients told them expressly that the shares would be fully paid-up & would involve no liability. The recipients acknowledged the receipt of the certificates without any condition or qualification. None of the recipients were placed on the register of shareholders, nor was any agreement with them registered. A few months afterwards the co. held a meeting & passed a resolution for a voluntary winding up; & in contemplation of the meeting the secretary wrote to all the medical men who had received the certificates of "founders' shares" asking for a return of the certificates on the ground that the shares had never been allotted. The certificates were accordingly returned. The liquidator placed the recipients of the certificates on the list of contributories; & they applied to have their names removed:—Held: (1) though the acceptance of the certificates might have amounted to an implied contract to take the shares & an authority to the secretary to place resps.' names on the register, such contract & authority were, while they existed, subject to the condition that there should be no liability for calls, & ceased to exist when the certificates were returned; (2) resps. could not be made contributories in the winding up of the co.

Are these gentlemen members according to the definition in [1862 Act], s. 23? Clearly & plainly they are not. In order to be members they must be registered as shareholders, & they are not. Then can they be regarded as members by estoppel? Now they are certainly not estopped by any plea put forward by themselves. If the stock book as paid up in full, but pltf. was to be debited with the $900, to be paid out of his salary as president. Pltf., with his knowledge & assent, was so debited, & from time to time, as his salary became payable, it was set off against the debt, & a balance afterwards struck in the books on this basis. There was no bye-law regulating calls or transfers of stock, & no calls were made on pltf. for either amounts subscribed by him, & no transfer from M. to pltf., except in the manner stated:—Held: no transfer was necessary, as pltf.'s subscription must be held to be an original one, nor were any calls required, for pltf. by his conduct had impliedly agreed that none need be made, & both he & the co. were estopped from denying his ownership of the shares.—SMART v. BOWMANVILLE MACHINE & IMPLEMENT CO. (1875), 25 C. P. 503.—CAN.

a. Subscription without allotment.—In winding-up proceedings, the master placed the subscribers to the stock book upon the list of contributories. The contributories appealed upon the ground that although they were subscribers for stock still no stock had been allotted to them by the directors:—Held: the master was right; the contract signed was an unqualified taking of shares.—Re QUEEN CITY REFINING CO. OF TORONTO (1886), 10 O. R. 264.—CAN.

b. Subscription before incorporation.—P. signed an instrument purporting to be a subscription for shares in a co. proposed to be incorporated, in which he agreed with the co. & the signatories thereto, to take the number of shares set opposite to his name. B. signed an instrument purporting to be an agreement to accept shares in a co., not at the time incorporated. P. & B. were not incorporators named in the letters patent, & no shares were in fact ever allotted to them, but they were entered in the books as shareholders, & notices of meetings & demands for payment of calls were sent to them, & in winding-up proceedings they were placed on the list of contributories:—Held: there being no co. in existence when the instruments in question were signed, they did not constitute binding contracts to take shares so as, without more, to make P. & B. liable as contributories.—Re LONDON SPEAKER PRINTING CO., PEARCE'S CASE, Re SPEIGHT MANUFACTURING CO., BOULTREE'S CASE (1889), 16 A. R. 508.—CAN.

c. Subscriber not receiving copy of prospectus.—Subscribers for shares in a co., who have not received copies of the prospectus, there being no prospectus, have thereby a good answer to a motion to place their names on the list of contributories in the winding up of the co., apart from the possible effect of acquiescence or waiver.—Re RETAIL MERCHANTS' ASSOCN., LTD. (1914), 27 W. L. R. 50.—CAN.

d. One application by two persons — Allotment to one only.—A. & B. applied for shares in a co. in the following terms "I hereby subscribe for & require & request you to allot me five shares of stock" etc. both signing the one application. The minute book of the co. showed that the directors allotted five shares to B. only, although five shares were entered in the share ledger to A. & B. jointly, & a share certificate for five shares was issued to them jointly, but never delivered, being held by the co. pending payment, for the shares in full. The co. went into liquidation, & A. & B. were both placed upon the list of contributories by the registrar, whose report was affirmed by the ct.:—Held: there was no allotment of shares to A.; there was not a concluded contract between A. & the co. & A.'s name must be removed from the list of contributories.—Re FEDERAL MORTGAGE CORPN., LTD.

& KIPP (1917), 24 B. C. R. 12.—CAN.

e. Direct application — Allotment of shares transferred from other shareholders.—Where an application is made direct to a co. for shares in the capital stock thereof but the share certificates issued to the appct. are for shares transferred from other shareholders there is no contract between the co. & the appct., & the appct. is entitled on a motion made after the co. goes into liquidation to have his name removed from the list of contributories, even though he has assigned his shares in pursuance of an abortive attempt to reorganise the co.—WESTERN UNION FIRE INSURANCE CO. v. ALEXANDER, [1918] 2 W. W. R. 546; 39 D. L. R. 632.—CAN.

f. Signing duplicate of memorandum — Before registration of company.—When a person signs a duplicate of the memorandum of assocn. after the registration of the original memorandum, he does not thereby become a subscriber. Such signature is equivalent to a proposal to the co. to take shares, & if such a proposal is accepted, the person signing is a person who has agreed with the co. to become a member, & is liable to calls if entered on the register.—*BOMBAY NATIONAL MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. Whether question for judge or jury—Contract not depending entirely upon written instruments.]—In an action for money had & received by an allottee of railway scrip, for the recovery of his deposit on the abandonment of the scheme, the letter of allotment was offered in evidence by pltf., who called upon deft. to produce the letter of application, which he refused to do. The deposit was paid into one of the banks mentioned in the prospectus of the co., on account of the co., & to their credit, deft. being a member of the managing & also of the provisional committee; & upon application by pltf. for a return of his deposit, he received from the attorney of the co. an answer, to the effect that arrangements for that purpose were being made:—Held: (1) the letter of allotment was receivable in evidence without a stamp, as there was no presumption that the two letters were ad idem, & the contract depended upon them alone; (2) there was evidence that the money was had & received by deft.; (3) as the evidence in the case did not depend altogether upon written instruments, but upon other matters of fact, it was a question for the jury, & not for the judge what was the contract between the parties.—*MOORE v. *pany — Compromise.]—*An agreement was made between two cos., A. & B., for the amalgamation of A. Co. with B. Co. on the terms that B. Co. should take over the whole assets & business of A. Co., & give in exchange to the shareholders of A. Co. a certain number of partly paid-up shares in B. Co., or pay them a certain sum in lieu thereof, at their election. This agreement was admittedly ultra vires & void. The assets & business of the amalgamated co. were taken over, but disputes arose as to the further carrying out of the agreement. An action was brought by A. Co. against B. Co. for breach of this agreement, which was defended by B. Co. on the specific ground that the agreement was ultra vires. On the eve of the trial the action was compromised by the two cos. on the terms that B. Co. should give to A. Co. for distribution among the shareholders of the latter a somewhat less number of shares than was originally arranged for:—Held: the first agreement being void, the compromise entered into was equally void, & a shareholder in A. Co. who had applied for & taken shares in B. Co. under the compromise was entitled to have his name removed from the register of the latter co.—*Re NEW ZEALAND NATIVE LAND SETTLEMENT CO. The memorandum & arts. were before deft., together with the prospectus, when he made his application:—Held: the arts. & not the prospectus constituted the contract between the co. & deft., & the fact that a call had been made less than one month after another was no defence to an action against deft. for the call

The letter of allotment, allotting to him 100 shares, was headed "Not transferable," & indorsed on it was a memorandum that the committee of management, being of opinion that it would be an accommodation to the subscribers if they were allowed the option of either paying the whole or a portion of their respective deposits at present & the remainder at a future day, & considering it unnecessary to lock up the large sum of money over & above what any expenses could require, informed him that the bankers were authorised to receive, in part of his deposit, 10s. per share before Nov. 17. This pltf. duly paid. In an action to recover back this deposit, the scheme having been abandoned:—Held: (1) the contract to subscribe arose from the offer contained in the letter of allotment, & the acceptance of it by pltf.'s complying with its terms & paying the deposit; & the entire contract, not being in writing, could not be stamped; (2) the deposit was paid for defraying the preliminary expenses, & being so applied, pltf. could not recover any part of it back.

On Nov. 27 the committeeman replied thus: "Inform me whether a sufficient amount of deposits has been paid up to enable the co. to go to Parliament this session, & if all the provisional committee have paid their deposits. On May 11, 1893, circular letters were addressed to the shareholders calling upon them to state within ten days whether they wished to take the new shares to which they were entitled. One of these letters was addressed to "the executor" of the deceased member at an address which was not the registered address of the deceased member, & the letter never reached pltf.

In May, 1894, pltf. became aware of the allotment of the new shares, & applied for the allotment to her of the shares to which the deceased member would have been entitled. No entry of the transaction was, however, made in the books of the co. C. was never required to make any payment in respect of deposit or otherwise, nor was any scrip allotted to him. The co. was wound up in the year 1861:—Held: the legal status or character of a shareholder was not complete in C. at the time of the winding up, & his name was therefore removed from the list of contributories. If there be an equity to avoid a contract to take shares in a co. on the ground of misrepresentation by a director or agent of a co., which contract has been legally completed & no proceeding taken to set it aside before the winding-up order, it is not available to the shareholder as a defence against being made a contributory.—Re BRITISH PROVIDENT, ETC., ASSURANCE SOCIETY, COLEMAN'S CASE (1863), 1 De G. He paid the amount due on application. His firm obtained the appointment as surveyors for the Edinburgh district, but were never made advisory surveyors to the Board for Scotland, the co. having gone into liquidation before that board was constituted:—Held: the application was one for an immediate allotment of shares provided the co. agreed to the conditions specified, & the condition as to the advisory surveyorship was not a condition precedent but subsequent & collateral to the contract, & meant that his firm should obtain the appointment when the board was constituted.—*NATIONAL HOUSE PROPERTY INVESTMENT CO., LTD. v. —S., a builder, wrote a letter to the directors of a hotel co., stating that in consideration of the contract for making the alterations at the hotel being secured to him, he agreed to subscribe for 300 shares, & pay the deposit, as soon as he was satisfied that 1,500 shares, including his, had been subscribed for, & that the directors had passed a resolution that he should have the contract for the alterations. The calls on the shares were to be set off against the amount due on the contract. The directors accepted the application on the terms of his letter, & passed a resolution to the effect required. They then sent an unconditional notice of allotment of 300 shares to S., & entered his name for that amount on the register. S. did not return the notice of allotment; but, having ascertained that the resolution had been passed & 1,500 shares taken up, sent in a formal application & paid the deposit. No further allotment was made to S.; the certificates were not delivered to him, nor was he called upon to pay any calls. He afterwards attended two meetings of shareholders for the purpose of seeing that the contract was secured to him. No contract for alterations was ever prepared, & shortly afterwards the co. was wound up voluntarily:—Held: (1) the price of the shares was merely a method of paying the price.—Re MANCHESTER STORES, LTD. (1922), 69 D. L. R. 669; 51 O. L. R. 637; 2 C. B. R. 365.—CAN.

1504 i. Condition of obtaining contract for work.]—Pltf., as a creditor of the co., sued deft., as a shareholder, for the amount remaining due on his shares. Deft. pleaded that it was agreed between deft. & the co. that if he would sign an agreement to take the shares the co. would give him a contract for the construction of the railway then to be constructed, & that unless & until the contract should be so given deft. should not be bound by the agreement or become thereby a shareholder; & in pursuance of said agreement, & not otherwise, deft. signed the agreement. Deft. alleged that without any default on his part, the co. refused to give him the contract, & gave it to another; & that, except as aforesaid, he never subscribed for or became the owner of the shares. In another plea deft. alleged that he did subscribe for the shares on the same agreement; & that until the contract should be given to him he was not to be bound by such subscription; that the contract was given to another, as in the former plea; & that deft. had never paid, nor been asked to pay, anything on the shares, nor had he been recognised or treated, or done any act, as a shareholder in respect of said shares; & that, other than as aforesaid, he never subscribed for or became the owner of said shares:—Held: both pleas were good, as showing that deft. never became a shareholder so as to be liable to creditors.—BULLIVANT v. MANNING (1877), 41 U. C. R. 517.—CAN.

1504 ii. —Pltf., a creditor of a railway co., sued deft., as a shareholder for the amount unpaid on the shares. It appeared that deft. had signed the stock book of the co. for forty shares, but he alleged that this was done upon the faith of an oral agreement with L., a provisional director & chief promoter of the co., that deft. & another should receive the contract for building the road. Deft. had not received any formal notice of the allotment of the shares, but he paid 10 per cent thereon, because, as he alleged, L. told him that he would not get the contract unless he paid it. He also attended a meeting of the shareholders, & seconded a resolution granting an allowance to the directors:—Held: the payment of the 10 per cent made him a shareholder, & he could not repudiate his liability on the ground that he had not been awarded the contract, for L. had no power to bind the co. by annexing such an agreement to his subscription.—WILSON v. GINTY (1878), 3 A. R. 124.—CAN.

1504 iii. —Pltf., a creditor of a railway co., sued deft., as a shareholder therein, for unpaid stock. Deft. had signed the stock-book which was headed with an agreement by the subscribers to become stockholders for the amount set opposite their respective names, & upon allotment by the co., "of my or our said respective shares," they covenanted to pay the co. 10 per cent of the amount of said shares & all further calls. A resolution was subsequently passed by the co. instructing their secretary to issue allotment certificates to each shareholder for the shares held by him. The secretary accordingly prepared such certificates, the one for deft. representing that the co. "in accordance with your application for fifty shares," etc., "have allotted you shares amounting to $5,000." These certificates were not sent to the shareholders, but were handed to the co.'s brokers for delivery to them. The brokers published a notice in a daily paper that these certificates were lying at their office, but did not send written contract to take the shares was conditional on S. having the contract to make the alterations; (2) the condition was not performed by the mere passing of the resolution that S. should have the contract; (3) S. had not waived the condition by not returning the notice of allotment, or by attending the meetings of shareholders; (4) S. was, therefore, not a contributory of the co. —Re ALDBOROUGH HOTEL CO., SIMPSON'S CASE (1869), 4 Ch. 1505. —.]—Messrs. R., contractors, made an offer to the H. co. to execute certain works contemplated by the co. on certain terms, & to take paid-up shares in the co. to the extent of one-fourth of the contract. Their offer was accepted with certain modifications, & an agreement was accordingly executed in July, 1865, between Messrs. R. & the co., whereby it was agreed that Messrs. R. should take 2,000 £10 shares in the co., on which they were to pay £3 per share, & that the co. should give them possession of the land required for the works within six weeks from the date of the agreement, or as soon thereafter as might be practicable. The co. did not get possession of the land till Mar. 1866, & were consequently unable to fulfil their part of the agreement. Messrs. R. in Dec. 1865, threatened to file a bill to set aside the contract, but they did not do so till Apr. 1867, having in the meantime negotiated with the co. with a view to having the contract price raised:—Held: time was of the essence of the contract, & the agreement to take the shares was conditional on Messrs. R. having the contract, but the delay made by them in filing their bill was fatal.—RANKIN v. HOP & MALT EXCHANGE CO. (1869), 20 L. T. 207.

1506. Agreements to take shares on amalgamation of companies—Conditional on amalgamation being carried out.—A contract was entered into between co. H. & co. L., that the former co. should purchase the business & property of the latter co. The contract contained a proviso that if by July 1, 1869, there should not be allotted & registered in the books of co. H., in the names of responsible parties, at least 2,500 shares, either co. might, within ten days, rescind the contract. £6,000 part of the purchase-money, was to be paid at once, & the balance partly in shares of the H. co., which were to be allotted to such of the shareholders in the L. co. as should agree to accept them in lieu of their shares in the L. co., & paid-up to the same extent. S., the chairman of the L. co., signed an undertaking to the H. co. that if certain specified shareholders in the L. co. did not apply for shares in the H. co., he himself would apply for & take an allotment of such shares. The £6,000 deposit was paid by the H. co. to the L. co. & was by them handed over to S. in discharge of some liabilities which he had incurred for them. The requisite number of shares in the H. co. was not allotted by July 1, 1869, & within ten days the L. co. rescinded the contract. The H. co. put S. on their register for the shares referred to in his undertaking:—Held: the undertaking signed by S. was only an agreement to take shares, conditionally upon the contract for purchase being carried out, & therefore, he was entitled to have his name removed from the register of co. H.—SIMPSON v. HEATON'S STEEL & IRON CO., LTD. (1871), 25 L. T. 179; 19 W. R. 614, L. JJ.

The agreement was approved by the shareholders of the S. co. at a general meeting, &

notices to the subscribers. Deft. never called for or received his certificates of allotment & never paid the 10 per cent. He swore that he signed upon a verbal agreement with one L., a promoter & a provisional director of the co., that he & another should receive the contract for building the road, which was never awarded to them; & that he never had any notice of the allotment having been made to him:—Held: deft. was not liable, as the evidence was not sufficient to prove notice of allotment to him; & if he had received notice of allotment, the fact that the contract was not awarded, as promised, would have formed no defence, as L. had no power to bind the co. by annexing such an agreement to his subscription.—NASMITH v. MANING (1881), 5 S. C. R. 417.—CAN.

d. Application for shares — Subsequent compromise.—C. subscribed for 160 shares in the H. Co., the subscription list being headed: "We subscribe for & agree to take the number of shares of the capital stock of the H. Co. set opposite our signatures, & to pay on account thereof 50 per cent to the secretary-treasurer of the co. in quarterly payments of 12½ per cent each of the amounts subscribed for by us respectively, the first of such payments to be made on Feb. 1, 1882." One of the by-laws of the co. provided for the calling of the second 50 per cent of the stock subscribed at any time after Nov. 1, 1882, on thirty days' notice. In Aug., 1883, the president of the co. arranged with C. that he should sign for eighty shares on the terms of a new stock-book which had been opened, & that C.'s original stock was to be treated as cancelled. C. accordingly signed the new book. This arrangement with C. was never communicated to the shareholders of the co. In Jan., 1884, a winding-up order was made, & C. was subsequently declared a contributory to the amount of 160 shares. C. appealed, claiming to be a contributory only to the amount of eighty shares, on the ground that the arrangement of Aug. 1883, was a valid compromise, entered into with him because he subscribed originally on the understanding that the co. was not to go into operation before all the stock was subscribed for, & that only 50 per cent of his subscription would have to be paid:—Held: the subscription was unconditional, & though expressly providing for payment of 50 per cent, it was not inconsistent with the balance being paid when required.—*FUCHES v. e. Conditional acceptance of shares —Condition not carried out—Collateral agreement.—An agent for promoters of co. about to be formed told persons residing at S. that if they took shares in the proposed co. the whole of the money paid for shares taken up at S. would be applied in building a butter factory which would then become their own property, & if the factory was not erected the money would be returned intact. In some cases this was stated on receipts for money subscribed. Shares were allotted to applicants, notices of meeting & calls sent to them, & they paid calls. Before the factory was erected the co. went into liquidation:—Held: there was a contract in presenti to take shares containing agreement that something should be done after membership was completed & those persons must be on list of contributories.—Re AUSTRALIAN PRODUCERS & TRADERS, LTD., [1906] V. The co. failed to complete the contract of sale. His name, therefore, was removed from the list of contributories.

certain specified ones, were correctly set forth in the schedule, & provided that if, upon investigation & examination, it turned out that the assets or any of them were not forthcoming & could not be delivered, the value of the deficiency should be estimated by arbitrators & the amount of their award deducted from the purchase money. Deft. alleged a deficiency in timber lands set forth in the schedule, & an arbitration was held & an award made finding the extent of the deficiency of the timber & the value thereof. The award was set aside, by an order of the ct., not appealed from, on the ground that the arbitrators had no power to decide upon the extent of the deficiency, but only upon the value, after the extent had been otherwise ascertained. Pltfs. having brought this action for the balance of the price of the shares, deft. alleged a deficiency in the timber, but did not counterclaim in respect thereof:—Held: the covenant to pay the purchase money was independent of the covenants contained in clauses 2 & 6; & assuming that clause 2 was independent of 6, it was open to deft. to counterclaim under 2, & to prove the deficiency, if any, & the value of it, & in this way obtain the fulfilment by pltfs. of the guaranty; but deft. had not done this; & he should not, upon appeal from a judgment in favour of pltfs., be allowed to amend.—*CUDDY v. On this petition J., one of petitioners, subscribed $7,000 stock. After incorporation J. & M. each subscribed shares to the value of $20,000, which they agreed to pay up as & when demanded by the co. These were duly allotted to them. In Sept. an agreement between J. & M. & the co. was executed by which the co., for the consideration therein expressed, agreed to issue fully paid-up & non-assessable shares to them, being those for which they had already subscribed, & it was in consequence of this agreement that J. & M. sought to escape liability:—Held: the original agreement under which J. & M. subscribed for the shares was separate from the later agreement of Sept., the former not being conditional on the terms of the latter. *1510. Application for shares in company "if limited"—Applicant with notice that company unlimited—Application not conditional.]—A shareholder in a limited co. A., which was being amalgamated with an unlimited co. B., received a printed form of application for shares in B. co., which he filled up with an application for ten shares, inserting, in writing, after the word "co.," the words "if limited." The answer he received in May, 1869, was, that the directors of B. co., had considered his application & had allotted him ten shares "in pursuance thereof," & had entered his name in the register. On June 1, 1869, he wrote, "Send me certificate for my ten shares in exchange for this allotment letter." The certificates were sent. Nothing more was done until Nov. 6, 1869, when the co. was ordered to be wound up. In the form of application for shares, & in the allotment letter, the A. co. was always properly described as "limited," & the B. co. was properly described without that word. The appct. upon being settled on the list of contributories, sought to be relieved, on the ground that what he had contracted for were shares in a limited co.:—Held: (1) the absence of the word "limited" was sufficient notice to the appct., especially to a shareholder in a limited co., that the co. for shares in which he was applying was unlimited; & the insertion by him of the words "if limited" into*

of license from the commr. of Crown lands. Dofts. were shareholders in the co., & after the sheriff's sale they & pltf. agreed to take steps to reorganise the co., pltf. to accept shares in satisfaction of his claim. This agreement, which pltf. had refused to carry out, was relied on as a defence to this action. At the trial the judge held that the agreement was too vague for specific performance, & was therefore no defence; & being of opinion that nothing passed by the sheriff's sale to pltf., he gave judgment for the whole amount of the original judgment of G. & M. with costs & interest, against the wish of pltf., who claimed only the reduced amount. Dofts. moved against the judgment respecting the agreement, & a div. ct. of two judges, while agreeing that it was too vague for specific performance, differed as to its affording a defence to the action. Pltf. also moved to reduce his judgment by deducting the amount of his bid at the sheriff's sale; but that order, by reason of the judges disagreeing, was not granted:—Held: the agreement was only to accept shares in case the co. was reorganised, & such agreement afforded no defence to this action; & the judgment could properly be varied by entering it for the reduced amount.—*BRUNDAGE v. Application for shares—Conditional on no further calls being made thereon.]—Deft. applied for shares on condition that no further calls would be made thereon, & the shares were allotted him on said condition. He gave his cheque in payment, & proxy to vote on said shares, but objection was raised as to his right to vote on the shares, as they had been sold at a very large discount. When deft. was informed of the objection being raised he at once stopped payment of his cheque & informed the president that he would have nothing to do

1513. Illegal condition—No defence to statutable liability for calls.]—By an agreement, dated July, 1847, A. agreed with an incorporated railway co. to take certain shares & to pay £4 per share in respect thereof on or before Aug. 15, 1847, & that so soon as £15 per share should have been paid on the shares, & the co. was in a position legally to do so, they should deliver to A. mtge. debentures of the railway co., bearing interest, for the sum of £24,675 being at the rate of £5 per share. This agreement was duly confirmed by the co. & A.'s name was in consequence of it, & without any other authority, entered in the register of shareholders, & he had notice of such entry & register on such authority, & confirmed & ratified the same & assented thereto. A. was elected & acted as a director of the co. after the making the agreement, & his name remained on the register as the person entitled to these shares, until a call was, in Dec. 1847, duly made upon them, of which he had due notice. In an action against A. to recover the call, the register of shareholders, duly authenticated & containing an entry of A.'s name as a shareholder, was produced at the trial:—Held: (1) A. was liable as a registered shareholder to the call; (2) assuming the stipulation as to the delivery of the mtge. debentures to be illegal, it would be no defence to an action brought, not upon an executory contract, but on the statutable liability to pay calls; (3) but, the stipulation being merely that the co. would deliver the mtge. debentures when they were in a position legally to do so, was not illegal, & would not vitiate the contract on the part of A., & therefore an action for the call made in Dec. 1847, might be maintained without proof that A. had paid the £4 per share.—*WEST CORNWALL RY. 1514. Condition must be intra vires the company.]—In July, 1863, P. applied for fifty £10 shares in a co. on the faith of an agreement with a director that he should receive orders for goods to the extent of at least £1,000, that he should only pay 30s. per share in cash, & that the calls for the rest should be set off against the goods. He paid, on application, a deposit of 10s. per share. The agreement was, with an additional term, ratified by the board of directors in Nov. 1863. In Dec. 1863, P. wrote to the co., declining to proceed further in the matter. In July, 1864, the secretary wrote to P., requiring him to pay £3 10s. per share for calls. No letter of allotment had ever been sent to P., but he had been put on the register. In Nov. 1866, an order was made for winding-up the co.:—Held: (1) P. was not a contributory, for he had only agreed to take shares upon the conditions of the special agreement as to set-off, which, if ultra vires of the directors, was not binding on the co., & therefore, for want of mutuality, not binding on P.: & if intra vires, was still not enforceable against P., because the stipulations on the part of the co. had become incapable of being performed. An agreement that the calls payable by a tradesman who is a shareholder in a co. shall not be payable in cash, but only by set-off against goods supplied by him, is in general ultra vires; (2) where a person applies for shares in a co., there is in general no binding contract to take shares until the co. have communicated to him an allotment of shares.—Re RICHMOND HILL HOTEL CO., PELLATT'S CASE (1867), 2 Ch. n. Sub-underwriter applying for shares—Sub-underwriting contract not known to company.]—An offer to underwrite a specified number of shares was made on a printed form of letter by a sub-underwriter who forwarded the complete letter to the underwriter, along with an application addressed to the co. issuing the shares for the specified number of shares & a cheque in their favour for the amount payable on application. The letter bore that the sub-underwriting contract & the application should be irrevocable. The underwriter signed a docquet of acceptance printed on the letter & retained the letter, but made no intimation of his acceptance to the sub-underwriter. The sub-underwriter's application for shares & his cheque were afterwards forwarded by the underwriter to the co., but no mention was made to the co. of the sub-underwriting contract. The sub-underwriter received an allotment of shares to the number applied for, & his cheque was cashed by the co. Thereafter he refused to pay instalments on the ground that the underwriter having failed to intimate acceptance of his offer, had no authority to transmit his application to the co. In an action at the instance of the co. against the subunderwriter:—Held: the application to the co. for the shares was a firm application, but was not conditioned by the terms of the sub-underwriting letter; & accordingly the allotment to the sub-underwriter was valid.—*PREMIER BRIQUETTE CO. v. The question was whether such a term or condition was one which could be validly attached to the issue of shares under the Act & whether, if not, the company could repudiate such terms & conditions as being ultra vires.—Held: such term as to redemption was contrary to public policy & ultra vires, & the shareholders became shareholders & must remain as such.—*POTT & MURRAY v. The shares were duly allotted to A., & registered in his name, & he paid £500, in respect of them. He afterwards, in 1859, gave notice in accordance with the condition; the £500 was thereupon repaid to him, & he transferred the shares to a nominee of the directors, & his name thenceforth ceased to appear on the register. The winding up of the co. commenced in 1868:—Held: the condition subject to which A. took the shares was ultra vires & void, & his name must be fixed on the list of contributories, notwithstanding the lapse of time during which his name had not appeared on the register.—Re PATENT PAPER MANUFACTURING CO., ADDISON'S CASE (1869), 21 L. Appls. failed to make title to the land, & a new arrangement was entered into, by which the shares were at once allotted, & a bond was taken in a penal sum, conditioned upon the making of title. A. & B. held each 500 original shares in a co. It was afterwards determined that new shares in the co. should be created; 1,000 original shares were to be transferred to C., who was thereupon to join the direction of the concern. That arrangement was effected by A. & B. transferring their original shares to C., & by each receiving an allotment of 500 of the new shares, which were duly created, in lieu of the old ones, & on being paid 10s. per share by the co. C. afterwards sold his 1,000 shares at a large profit, but never joined the concern. The co. was ordered to be wound up, when A. & B. each repudiated their liability in respect of their 500 shares, on the ground that they only consented to take them if C. joined the direction:—Held: (1) the test of the liability of A. & B. to be placed on the list of contributories was, whether specific performance of their agreement to take the shares could have been decreed against them; &, as the ct. thought it could not, they were not contributories; (2) there was not sufficient part performance to compel the ct. to settle A. & B. as contributories.

Effect of cancellation of collateral agreement—Appointment as agent—Agreement to take shares not cancelled.]—A., upon his appointment as agent to a limited assurance co., agreed to take shares upon the terms that the payment for them should be deducted from his commission as agent, & no deposit was ever paid by him upon them, but he was registered as the holder of the shares. The co., very soon after his appointment, dismissed him; but, as he contended, wrongfully. On the winding up of the co.:—Held: the co.'s cancellation of A.'s appointment as agent, whether justifiable or not, could not operate as a cancellation of A.'s agreement to become a shareholder, &, subject to any question of account as to payment for the shares, A. was liable as a contributory.—*Re LIFE ASSOCN. C. Fraudulent Agreements.

1532. Allottee not to incur any liability.]—The manager of a banking co., in which he held shares, induced a friend D., living in the country, to subscribe the co.'s deed for 100 shares, upon the understanding, of which a minute was entered in the co.'s books, that all the shares that should not be transferred by him to other parties should be transferred for him by the directors, & that he should receive nothing, nor incur any liability, in respect of the shares. After disposing of thirty shares, the purchase-money for which was paid to the directors, D., in pursuance of the arrangement, transferred the remainder back to the manager by assigning it to him & his successors in office. He never received or paid anything in respect of the shares, &, eight years after the last transaction, the affairs of the co. were wound up under the Joint Stock Cos. Winding-up Act, 1848 (c. 45):—Held: the effect of the transaction was to hold out D. as a partner, to induce others to become members of the co., & he was properly placed on the list as a contributory.—*Re BOROUGH OF ST. 1533. Price of shares to be paid by company—Agreements separable—Agreement to take shares enforced against allottee.]—An action was brought by a co. for the specific performance by deft. of an agreement which he had entered into to take 2,000 £10 shares in the co., & pay for them in such numbers & at such times as should be required for the purposes of the co. His name had been placed on the register of shareholders, & a call had been made upon him which he refused to pay. Contemporaneously with the agreement to take the shares the board of directors had agreed with deft. to pay him £4,000 in consideration of services rendered by him to the co. This sum was to be paid twelve months after the shares should have been paid for in full. The directors afterwards called on deft. to pay up the full amount of 1,000 of his shares, which he refused to do. Deft. alleged that the two agreements formed really only one contract for the issue of the shares at a discount; sense of his letter of application & he was in consequence liable in payment of the calls.—SWEDISH MATCH CO., LTD. v. SEIVWRIGHT (1889), 16 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 989; 26 Sc. L. R. 689.—SCOT.

a. — Or waiver by shareholder.] Pltf. subscribed for shares in deft. co. subject to the term that the co. would erect a steel plant at M. He paid for the shares in instalments & some time after receipt of the full amount share certificates were sent him. They reached his office during his absence. There was no evidence of his actual receipt thereof, but they were retained. There was no evidence of formal allotment of shares to him nor of any notice of allotment. He never attended meetings but received notices of meetings accompanied by proxies which he filled out & sent. His name was not entered in the register of shareholders, but it appeared in a ledger account, for the price of his shares, in the book which contained elsewhere what purported to be a register of shareholders. He said that during certain years he regarded himself as a shareholder, but understood that he could rescind & withdraw or the co. could cancel his shares if the co. abandoned the steel project. The co. did not erect the plant. Pltf. sued for rescission of the agreement to take the shares & for a return of the purchase-price & in the alternative for damages:—Held: pltf. must fail; in all the circumstances in evidence, pltf. de facto became a shareholder of the co. The term attached to his subscription was, as shown by the conduct of the parties, a condition subsequent & this ceased to be operative as a condition subsequent, & this ceased to be operative as a condition when pltf. became a shareholder. Thereafter it could operate, if at all, only as a collateral agreement entitling him to surrender his shares & demand the return of the money paid for them; & such an agreement was ultra vires of the co.—*CHRISTIE v. that he had not rendered any services to the co. ; & that the contract was divided into two parts for the express purpose of evading a provision of the co.'s arts. of assocn. which prohibited the directors from issuing shares at a price below par without the consent of a general meeting. No such consent had been given to the contract with deft. :—Held : (1) as deft. had acted in collusion with the directors to defraud the co., he could not be heard to set up this fraud for the purpose of making invalid the agreement, which was ex facie valid, to take & pay for the shares ; (2) as the parties had contemplated a piecemeal performance of the one agreement, the ct. could compel the performance of a part ; (3) in the absence of any proof of mala fides, the resolution of the directors to call up the amount of the shares was conclusive evidence that the money was required for the purposes of the co. Specific performance of the agreement to take & pay for the shares was accordingly decreed.—ODESSA TRAMWAYS CO. v. MENDEL (1878), 8 Ch. D. 235 ; 47 L. J. Ch. 505 ; 38 L. T. 731 ; 26 W. R. 887, C. There was no evidence of any application by pltf. for shares, or that his allotted shares had been exchanged for scrip ; & it appeared that he had never signed the parliamentary contract or subscribers' agreement. The project proving abortive :—Held : (1) money had & received lay, to recover back the deposit paid ; (2) the letter of allotment & circular were admissible in evidence without being stamped, inasmuch as they did not constitute the whole agreement between the directors & the allottees ; (3) the sending of the letter of allotment & circular to pltf. was sufficiently proved by the statement of the secretary of the co., that he had received instructions to send them to all the allottees, that pltf. was one of them, & he believed he had sent them

1539. Burden of proof—On allottee disputing validity of allotment—Allotment book prima facie evidence.]—The seven subscribers to the memorandum of assocn. of a co., regulated by 1862 Act, s. 154, Table A. without meeting together for the purpose, all signed a document in writing dated July 27, 1888, appointing four persons to be the first directors of the co., & these four persons met & resolved that two directors should form a quorum to transact the business of the co. At the first ordinary meeting, which was held on Aug. 20, 1888, these four persons did not retire from office as provided by art. 58 of Table A. ; but a resolution was passed at the meeting authorising them to continue to act as directors ; & two of these four persons on the same day allotted to K., an appct., 200 ordinary shares in the co. :—Held : (1) as the subscribers to the memorandum of assocn. had all concurred in appointing the first directors of the co., the fact that they had not met together for the purpose of coming to their determination did not invalidate their act, & accordingly, the appointment in writing of July 27, 1888, was good ; (2) the resolution passed at the general meeting of Aug. 20, 1888, was valid to the extent of continuing in office the then present directors ; (3) the allotment of 200 shares made to K. by two of these four directors was valid.

(4) K. afterwards, as he admitted, applied for 300 preference shares, & received an allotment of them. By the co.'s allotment book it appeared that 300 shares were allotted to him on Sept. 29, 1888, but no minutes were kept after Aug. 20, 1888. The co. was afterwards ordered to be wound up, & at that time K. was on the register of shareholders as the holder of 500 shares. K. disputed the validity of both allotments to him :—Held : as K. was a contributory in respect of his 200 shares, the allotment book of the co. was, under 1862 Act, s. 154, prima facie evidence against him of an allotment to him on Sept. 29, 1888, & although there was no record of any board or committee meeting on that day, the entry in the allotment book, coupled with his admission, threw upon him the burden of proving that the allotment was invalid ; & not having discharged it, he must be settled upon the list as a contributory for the 300 shares as well as the 200 shares.—*Re GREAT NORTHERN SALT & CHEMICAL WORKS, Ex p. This fact & the statute were set up by plea:—Held: (1) the agreement was a good agreement to do that which the statute required; (2) the decree would not be nugatory, as in a joint-stock partnership a partner cannot put an end to the partnership, but only to his own quality of shareholder; he must remain shareholder, or constitute another person shareholder in his place.—*NEW BRUNSWICK, ETC. 1551. Disclaimer by trustee in bankruptcy—Measure of damages.]—By a contract made in Feb. 1898, H. agreed to sell to a co. certain properties; & by the same contract H. agreed to subscribe & pay for in cash so much of the share capital of the co. as should not be taken up by the public. In the events which happened H. became bound under the contract to take up & pay for certain preference shares & 25,000 ordinary shares of £1 each in the co. In June, 1898, H. became bkpt., & in July following his trustee in bkpcy. disclaimed the contract. Soon afterwards the co. went into liquidation, & the liquidator lodged a proof against H.'s estate for damages for breach of the contract. H.'s estate was estimated to realise not more than 4s. in the pound. The liabilities of the co. were about £16,000 whilst its assets comprised, practically, about £4,000, at a bank & the claim against H.'s estate. The liquidator made a call of £1 per share on the ordinary shares of the co., & claimed that the proof against H.'s estate should stand at £25,000 on the ground that the measure of damages for the injury caused to the co. by the disclaimer was the loss of the call of £1 per share on the 25,000 shares which H. was bound to take up. The trustee admitted the proof for £10,500 only, that being the difference between the then estimated assets & liabilities of the co.:—Held: as the disclaimer had put an end to the contract, & the claim of the co. could only be for damages for breach of contract, the trustee had assessed the damages on the right principle, & the proof must stand at £10,500.—*Re HOOLEY, Ex p. g. Notice of avoidance by applicant—Companies Act, 1908, s. 96.]—The above sect. is in effect a statute of limitation. Its real meaning is that no avoidance of an allotment of shares can be effective unless the note of avoidance is given before the expiration of one month after the statutory meeting. It does not mean that notice of avoidance can only be given within the confines of that month. It may be given before the statutory meeting is held.—Re HARRIS (FRANK) GRANITE CO., LTD. (No. 1) (1913), 32 N. Z. L. R. 835.—N.Z.

k. ———.]—A contract to deliver shares, or their value, on flotation of a co. binds the contractor, in lieu of delivery, to pay the value of the shares at the time of flotation, & failure to deliver or pay at such time does not render him liable to pay the highest value of the shares prior to payment.—*TEUBES v. 1553. Nature of relief.]—A person purchasing a chattel or goods, concerning which the vendor makes a fraudulent misrepresentation, may on finding out the fraud elect to retain the chattel or goods, & still have his action to recover any damage he has sustained. But the same principle does not apply to shares or stock in a joint-stock co., for a person induced by the fraud of the agents of a joint-stock co. to become a partner in that co. can bring no action for damages against the co. whilst he remains in it; his only remedy is restitutio in integrum & rescission of the contract; & if that becomes impossible, by the winding-up of the co. or by any other means, his action for damages is irrelevant, & cannot be maintained.—

(b) Nature of Misrepresentation.

Misrepresentation in prospectus.]—See Sect. 8, sub-sect. 3, ante.

1554. Statement that allotment completed.]—In an action for money had & received brought by a depositor against one of the committee of management of a projected railway co., it appeared from the prospectus that the capital was to have been £3,000,000, in 120,000 shares, deposit £1 7s. 6d. per share. Pltf. requested an allotment of sixty shares, stating "I undertake to accept the same, subject to the regulations of the co., & to sign the legal documents, & to pay, when required, the deposit." To this the following answer, in substance, was sent: "Not transferable. The L. Co., capital £3,000,000, in 120,000 shares of £25 each, etc.—Sir,—The committee have, at your request, allotted you sixty shares, upon condition that the deposit be paid on or before Oct. 18; in default of which such allotment will be forfeited." Before the day so appointed for the payment of the deposit, the committee of management issued an advertisement, stating that they had completed the allotment of shares, & apologising to disappointed appcts. There was evidence that pltf. saw this advertisement; within a day or two he paid his deposit, & he afterwards executed the subscription deed, which gave authority to the committee to pay expenses out of the sum subscribed. The committee allotted only 58,000 shares, though they had had the opportunity of allotting the whole 120,000. The deposits had been expended, & there were no funds to make the deposit required by the House of Commons. Pltf., with a knowledge of the last two circumstances, attended a meeting which was called of the shareholders, & moved that the deposits should be returned, but was outvoted. Afterwards the scheme was abandoned:—Held: (1) the application for & the allotment of the shares did not, at the time when pltf. paid the deposit, constitute a contract binding upon pltf. to take & pay for shares in a concern consisting of 58,000 shares only; (2) the application being unconditional, & the form of the allotment conditional, the contract was not, upon that account, binding upon pltf.; (3) the jury were warranted in saying that the advertisement, stating that the committee had completed the allotment of shares, was a fraudulent misrepresentation, & a material inducement to pltf. to pay his money; & pltf. was therefore entitled to recover it back in 1553 i. Nature of relief.]—In an action by a shareholder of an investment assocn. to have it declared that his subscription for shares had been obtained by fraud & misrepresentation, & that it was not binding upon him, & for other relief, it appeared that in 1882 the association had amalgamated with a loan society, of which he was shareholder & manager. There were many material misrepresentations, falsely & fraudulently made, in a certain report of the association, which had been an important factor in bringing about the assent to the amalgamation by the society, & in inducing pltf. to subscribe for the shares in the association, & that pltf. had not become aware of their falsity until shortly before bringing this action. After the amalgamation the association borrowed large sums of money upon debentures, etc., on the faith of the apparently existing state of affairs, but it was not shown that the association was insolvent, or on the eve of insolvency:—Held: pltf. was entitled to a rescission of the contract made by his subscription for stock in the association.—NELLES v. ONTARIO INVESTMENT ASSOCN. (1889), 17 O. R. 129.—CAN.

1553 ii. —.]—Pltf., without asking to have the sale to him rescinded, or offering to return the stock or bonds, claimed to recover damages he had sustained by reason of deft's. alleged fraud & misrepresentation, being the difference between the amount paid for the stock, & the real value of the stock at the time the purchase was made:—Held: it was no answer to offer to take the stock & bonds & pay the purchase price with interest & expenses, less all sums paid for interest or dividends; for, if there had been fraud & misrepresentation, pltf. must recover at least nominal damages.—WEATHERBE v. WHITNEY (1897), 30 N. S. R. 49.—CAN.

n. Representation as to title to company's property.—Exclusion of intoxicating liquors.]—Pltf., a co. formed for the purpose of colonising lands in the North-West Territories, represented to deft. that the Dominion Govt. had agreed to the selection by the co. of a compact choice tract of land in the said territories for the purpose of settlement, free from the use of intoxicating liquors. Deft., on the faith of these representations, entered into two agreements with the co., agreeing in each to purchase & pay for 320 acres of land, & paid certain instalments thereon. The co. never had, & could not obtain, the choice compact tract stated, nor any special privileges as to the exclusion of liquors:—Held: these were material misrepresentations; & deft., having been induced to enter into the agreement thereby, was therefore entitled to have them rescinded, & to recover back the money paid by him.—TEMPERANCE COLONISATION CO. v. 1556. — Company on verge of insolvency—Representation by single director.—A. became a shareholder & director of a co., on the representations of one of the directors, that it was in a flourishing condition, whereas it was on the verge of insolvency:—Held: the misrepresentation did not relieve A. from being a contributory.—

gold-mining syndicate promoted by themselves & of which they were the directors. The misrepresentations complained of were that auriferous reefs extended for miles through the properties in which the syndicate was interested & that the results of work done by defts. on these reefs showed that they were exceptionally rich:—Held: the evidence as to negative results obtained in subsequent independent operations did not, in all the circumstances, disprove the genuine character of the positive results previously obtained by defts., & pltf. had not proved that the representations contained in the prospectus were of the character alleged by him. Though the conduct of defts. had not been satisfactory & they had not exercised sufficient vigilance to see that their said representations were in accordance with fact, yet there had not been such distinct misconduct on their part, contributing to the action, as to make it proper to deprive them of their costs.—*BENJAMIN v. It was proved that neither C. nor M. had subscribed or promised to subscribe for $10,000 each, either conditionally or unconditionally, nor did they do so at any time after deft.'s subscription, nor was $50,000 subscribed on or before Jan. 1, 1893:—Held: the representations were proved to have been made; & by reason of them deft. was induced to subscribe for the stock as a sort of escrow; it was not to be effective nor operative unless the $50,000 was obtained within the limited period of 1558. Representation that liability limited.—A. & B. were partners, & A., on the faith of representations made to him by the secretary of a co., informed B. that the liabilities were limited, & thereupon B. consented to shares being taken in the co. A. executed the co.'s deed alone, in the name of the firm. Two calls were paid by the firm, & dividends were received by the firm, as part of the partnership assets. The firm then dissolved partnership & all the assets & liabilities, the above shares being particularly specified, were transferred from A. to B. The co. failed, & was wound up. It then appeared that the liabilities of the co. were not limited, & B. alleged that A. alone was liable as a contributory:—Held: the misrepresentation as to the limited liabilities not being wilful, & the co. assenting, B. was primarily liable, & A. secondarily liable, as contributories.—*Re PROTESTANT ASSURANCE ASSOCN., Ex p. 1559. Representation as to number of officers to be appointed—Medical referees—Shareholder appointed medical referee.—(1) W. having agreed to become one of the medical referees of an insurance co., on the understanding that there would only be two of them, the secretary of the co. called upon him, produced the deed of settlement, & induced him to execute it for 200 shares, representing that on his doing so he would be appointed one of the medical referees, of whom there would be only two; that the business would be equally divided between them; that the directors would not consent to his appointment unless he took 200 shares; & that all the office-bearers were required to take & had taken that number. Soon after this, W. discovered that four medical referees had been named. He thereupon claimed to be released from his shares, & demanded a return of his calls. He afterwards discovered that most of the office-bearers had never taken 200 shares:—Held: whatever breach of contract there might have been on the part of the co. towards W., there was time.—ONTARIO LADIES' COLLEGE v. KENDRY (1905), 5 O. W. R. 605; 10 O. L. R. 324.—CAN.

q. Representation as to disposition of certain assets.—Pltfs., exors. of F., brought an action to rescind a contract for the purchase of shares in a co., on the ground of fraud & misrepresentation on the part of defts. The question was as to the disposition of certain liquid or quick assets of the co. to which pltfs. claimed to be entitled under the terms of the contract but which defts. contended were to be applied in reduction of the current liabilities of the co. F. knew from the beginning that the quick assets were not to form part of the assets to be retained by the co., but were to be applied in reduction of the liabilities:—Held: pltfs.' action must be dismissed with costs.—DAVISON v. PRIEST (1920), 53 N. S. R. 426; 51 D. L. R. 158.—CAN.

nothing in the above circumstances to entitle him to be discharged from his liabilities as a shareholder.

(2) The deed of settlement provided, that if a shareholder should fail to pay a call for two months, the secretary should send him a notice requiring payment within 21 days, & if the sum should not be paid within that time, the directors might declare the shares forfeited. W & others having failed to pay for more than two months, the directors passed a resolution that notices should be sent to them requiring immediate payment, & that unless the calls were paid within 21 days the shares should be irremediably forfeited. A notice was accordingly sent to W. He did not pay. The co. went on for three years, during which he was not treated as a shareholder, & did not claim to be one, though his name remained on the register. 1561. Representation that shares would rise.]—In an action by a shareholder against a director of a joint-stock co. for fraudulent representations, by which pltf. had been induced to become a shareholder, the representations proved being, that deft. believed that money might be made by the shares, holding them a month; & the facts, as known to deft. at the time, being, that the co. could not get rid of their first issue of shares, & could not get on without further capital; & that he had undertaken for a large number of shares, which he was selling, after employing various brokers to make contracts for purchases, with the effect of raising the shares to a premium, which they maintained, until after pltf.'s purchases:—Held: the question was, whether deft. wrote the letter bond fide, & in the belief that the shares would maintain their rise for a month.—GRAY v. COLLINS (1865), 4 F. & F. 302.

1562. Representation that dividend guaranteed—During progress of certain works—Documents referred to but not set out in memorandum & articles.]—Where one party makes statements as to the contents of documents, he cannot afterwards say that those statements were known by the other party to be untrue, unless he shows that the business proceeded on that footing. Where an appct. for shares agrees to be bound by the arts. & memorandum of assocn., he must be taken to have notice of their contents, but not of documents referred to in them, & misrepresented by the prospectus.

Where a prospectus stated that the contractor had guaranteed interest at £2 10s. per cent. on the paid-up capital until the works were completed, & that a foreign government had guaranteed interest at £9 per cent., whilst, in fact, the contractor's liability was limited to £20,000, & the guarantee by the foreign government was only whilst the line did not produce £9 per cent. from no default of the co.:—Held: a shareholder who had taken shares on the faith of the prospectus would be relieved from them in equity.—*KISCH v. the co. on the faith of which pltf. was induced to subscribe & pay for a number of a new issue of preference shares. One of the principal matters complained of was a statement to the effect that undrawn profits or assets of the co. to a large amount had been appropriated to a "reserve fund," whereas, as pltf. alleged, the co. never had any reserve or sinking fund. The evidence showed that profits which were supposed to have been earned, instead of being distributed in dividends, were transferred to an account referred to & known as the "reserve account":—Held: the words "reserve fund," as used in the prospectus, did not necessarily mean a reserve fund which was invested, but the important thing was the reserving of the amount out of property available for distribution in dividends, & appropriating it in the books of the co. to meet contingencies, which was shown in this case to have been done. Even if pltf. understood the fund to be invested, this, in the case of a manufacturing co., would not be a material representation which would influence the conduct of plaintiff in taking shares.—KENNEDY v. ACADIA PULP & PAPER MILLS CO., LTD. (1905), 38 N. S. R. 291.—CAN.

Co. to him bore an endorsement that the nominal capital of the co. £62,500, whereas in fact the registered nominal capital was more than £22,500 at the date of the issue of the certificate:—Held: the summons disclosed no cause of action such as was claimed though it did disclose a claim for issue of a certificate correctly reflecting the capital of the co.—AGRICULTURAL CO-OPERATIVE UNION, LTD. v. CHADWICK (1922), 43 N. L. R. 135.—S. AF.

1563. Issue of erroneous report—Inducement to take up reserved shares.]—The directors of a banking co., in Feb. 1864, issued a report declaring a dividend of 15 per cent. upon the shares, & a bonus of 10 per cent., & a large addition to the reserve fund. In June, 1864, they offered to the shareholders the option of taking, according to the proportion of shares held by each shareholder, certain reserved shares at a premium. The exors. of a person deceased accepted some of these reserved shares. The report of Feb. 1864, was, in fact, utterly erroneous, & in Sept. the bank stopped payment. No evidence of wilfulness on the part of the directors in misrepresenting the affairs of the co. was given:—Held: there was not enough on this state of facts to constitute a misrepresentation which would avoid the acceptance of the shares, & so prevent applts. from being put, personally, upon the lists of contributories.—*JACKSON v. 1564. Representation as to identity of company.]—Shortly before Nov. 1895, B. took steps with a view to becoming a Fellow of an old established society called "The Auctioneers' Institute of the United Kingdom." In Nov. 1895, X., an officer of a recently incorporated society, with unlimited liability, named "The Institute of Auctioneers & Valuers," called on B. & asked him to become a member of it. B. believed the new society to be the old one, & in this belief, which was known to & fostered by X., B. applied for membership in the new society, & received a certificate of membership. In answer to his subsequent inquiries of the new society, untruthful statements were made to B. which resulted in his remaining in his error as to the identity of the society:—Held: there was not even a voidable contract to become a member, but no contract at all; & B. was entitled to have his name removed from the list of contributories in the winding-up of the new society, although he had not before the winding-up commenced taken any step to have it declared that he was under no liability.—Re INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY OF AUCTIONEERS & VALUERS, BAILLIE'S CASE, [1898] 1 Ch. 110; 67 L. b. Representation as to time of commencement of operations.]—The co. gave V. authority to establish agencies in Canada in connection with its accident insurance business & to appoint medical examiners there. At the time the co. had no licence to carry on the business of insurance in Canada, nor any immediate intention of making arrangements to do so, & V. was an official of the co. & was aware of these facts. V. appointed pltf. the sole medical examiner of the co. for Vancouver, assuring him that the co. would commence to carry on its accident business there within a couple of months, & then obtained from him a subscription for a number of shares of the co.'s unissued capital, which were paid for partly by pltf.'s cheques, payable to the co., & as to the balance by a series of promissory notes. The co. did not commence business in Vancouver within the time specified by V., nor did it obtain a licence to carry on the business of insurance in Canada until many months later. Whether amounting to warranty.]—Pltf. asked the local manager of a firm of rubber merchants, who had underwritten a large number of shares in a rubber & produce co. then in the course of formation, whether his firm were bringing out a rubber co. He replied that they were. Pltf. then asked him whether the co. was all right. The manager replied that his firm were bringing it out, to which pltf., rejoined that that was good enough for him. In answer to further inquiries the manager told pltf. that he could let him have 5,000 shares at a certain premium. Pltf. agreed to take the shares, which were subsequently allotted to him. The shares having fallen in value, pltf. brought an action against the firm for fraudulent misrepresentation & for breach of warranty, the alleged warranty being that the co. was a rubber co. The jury negatived fraudulent misrepresentation but found that the co. could not be properly described as a rubber co., & that the manager had given a warranty as alleged:—Held: there was no evidence proper to be submitted to the jury upon the question of warranty.

The question whether an affirmation made by the vendor at the time of sale constitutes a warranty depends on the intention of the parties to be deduced from the whole of the evidence, & the circumstance that the vendor assumed to assert a fact of which the purchaser is ignorant, though valuable as evidence of intention, is not conclusive of the question.—*HELLBUT, SYMONS & CO. v. e. How far act of company—Statement by directors—Through agent.]—Deft. was induced to sign an application for shares in a co. on representation by pltf.'s agent that the shares subscribed for were treasury stock, afterwards industriously circulated, the representations in those reports become after this adoption those of the co., & therefore binding on the co.; & if those reports, so circulated can be shown to be the proximate & immediate cause of shares being bought by individuals, the co. cannot retain the benefit of the contract & keep the purchase-money which has been paid. Representations made by the secretary to a person in a general conversation, without a view to any definite statement by that person that he wants to purchase shares, are not binding on the co.

If an incorporated co., acting by its agent, induces a person to enter into a contract for the benefit of the co., that co. can no more repudiate the fraudulent agent than an individual could repudiate him, & the co. are bound by the misrepresentations of their agent. But the principle cannot be carried so far that an action can be brought against the co. on the ground of deceit, because the directors have done an act which might render them liable to such an action. If the ground alleged for rescinding a contract, executed, to become a shareholder in a co., is a representation that the co. had a good title to certain land, whereas it was not a good title but a defeasible title, the opinion of the ct., that the title was doubtful, is not sufficient to warrant the ct. to interfere with regard to such a contract (LORD CRANWORTH).—*NEW BRUNSWICK & CANADA RAILWAY & LAND CO. v. 1568. — Statements by directors.] — 100 shares were sold in one parcel by a broker, for two vendors, of fifty shares each, in a joint-stock co. Five of the shares were transferred by deed by one of the vendors to the purchaser, & the purchase-money of the 100 shares was paid to the broker. The purchaser was accepted by the directors as the proprietor of the 100 shares, & his name was entered accordingly in the co.'s books:—Held: the 100 shares formed the subject of one contract, & the whole must be governed by the terms of the deed of transfer of the five shares. Directors fraudulently inducing a person to become a purchaser of shares in a co. may be personally liable to him, but they cannot be considered as the agents of the body of shareholders to commit a fraud of this kind, nor is such a fraud a valid objection, the purchaser's name being on the list of contributories.—Re NORTH OF ENGLAND JOINT STOCK BANKING CO., DODGSON'S CASE (1849), 3 De G. & Sm. 85; 14 L. 1570. — — — Influencing stranger.] — If the directors of a joint-stock co., in the course of their dealings on behalf of the co. with third parties, by fraud induce such parties to contract with them, & the co. benefits by the transaction, the co. will be bound by such fraud; even where the fraud consist in false reports submitted by the directors at their annual meetings to the co., the co. will be bound by such reports, when dealing with third parties who rely on the representations therein made.

Where A., a principal, knowing a material objection to his property, employs B., an agent, who is ignorant of such objection, to sell or let the property, & B. unconsciously makes a false representation to the purchaser, thereby inducing a contract, A. will be bound by such misrepresentation (LORD ST. LEONARDS).

The N. joint-stock co., who were bankers & brokers, sued D. for money lent to him to purchase certain shares in their co. D. pleaded that the directors of the co. had in their annual reports to the co. falsely represented their affairs to be flourishing, whereas the co. was insolvent; & paid large dividends, whereas such dividends were paid out of the capital & that B., their manager, falsely representing the said shares to be of great value, induced D. to purchase them, & at the same time, on the part of the co., offered to advance the money necessary to make the purchase, & promised that the co. would hold the said shares for D. until they could be sold at a profit, without D. being called upon for the price, & D. relying on such representations accepted the shares, which

& that the money paid was to go into the treasury of the co. & was to be used for certain specified purposes. The shares were, as a matter of fact, the property of pltf., & the promissory note given by deft. in payment was indorsed to pltf. In an action on the note:—Held: that pltf. was responsible for the fraud practised on deft. by the misrepresentations of the agent who sold them.—GOULD v. GILLIES (1907), 40 S. C. R. 437.—CAN.

1568 i. — — —.] — S., a director of a joint-stock bank, upon a false representation to F., & an offer of indemnity, induced him to allow a number of shares to be entered in his name; & without the knowledge of F., issued a great number of the unappropriated shares, & entered them in the share-register book in the name of F., debiting him in the books of the bank for the price of them. To procure purchasers for those shares, two documents were prepared one purporting to be a prospectus of the co., which falsely treated the paid up capital as £100,000, made the number of appropriated shares far exceed the real number, & falsely stated the names of the directors. The other document was a false & fabricated balance-sheet of the bank. Those documents were transmitted to England, & circulated by J., the brother of S. G., induced by false representations, & the statements contained in those documents, bought a number of the shares entered in the name of F. The transfer deeds were executed by F., & certificates of transfer, describing the shares according to the false entries in the bank books, were given to G., signed by S., K., & J., of whom S. alone was a director. The purchase-money was placed in the books to the credit of the bank. G.'s name was entered in the share-register book, & returned to the Stamp-office as the proprietor; & on the next dividend day, he received a dividend upon them, as if they had been old shares transferred by a bond fide holder. Upon a petition presented for winding up the co.:—Held: G., having been induced to purchase the shares by the frauds & misrepresentations of S. & his agents, was at liberty to repudiate the contract as against the existing shareholders, & that should be removed from the list of contributories.

Semble: the rule that directors are not the agents of a co. to commit a fraud cannot apply to a case where the fraud complained of relates to a matter which is of the essence of the contract, & a part of it.—Re TIPPERARY JOINT-STOCK BANK, Ex p. GINGER (1857), 9 Ir. Jur. 221.—IR.

1574. ———.]—(1) The charter of a co. empowered the directors to increase the capital by the issue of new shares of £100 each, but not by less than £10,000 at a time, & it was provided that the additional capital derived from such new shares should not be published & declared as a portion of the capital of the co. till the Board of Trade was satisfied that the whole amount of the increase of capital from time to time determined on had been subscribed for the shares issued, at least £50 per share paid up, & a supplementary deed executed by the persons taking the shares. An issue of 2,000 new shares was determined upon, the subscribers to be entitled to £5 per cent. interest on the sums paid by them until they had paid up £50 per share, & afterwards to participate in dividends. M. took some of them, paid up £50 per share, & executed a supplementary deed, obtained certificates of shares & received interest, but only a small part of the 2,000 shares were ever subscribed for. The sums received in respect of them were entered in the reports under the head of liabilities:—Held: M. was a shareholder liable to be placed on the list of contributories, & not entitled to rank as a creditor for what he had paid.

(2) The directors of a co. from time to time made to the general meetings of shareholders & printed & published false & fraudulent reports of the affairs of the co. There was nothing to show that the shareholders were aware of the falsehood of these reports. An issue of new shares being made, M. was induced by these reports to take some of them:—Held: that, notwithstanding the fraud, he was liable to be placed on the list of contributories.

I think it was a fraud on the part of the directors which cannot be attributed to the co. Supposing it was a fraud on the part of the co., I do not think that applt. is now entitled to avail himself of it & rescind the contract. It is a settled rule that a contract obtained by fraud is not void, but that the party defrauded has a right to avoid it if he does so while matters can be replaced in their former position. In each case we must look to see whether the contract has been acted upon. If it has been acted upon by the party defrauded so that others who are interested cannot be restored to their former rights, the contract cannot be rescinded, & nothing remains to the party defrauded but a reparation in damages (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).—Re ROYAL BRITISH BANK, MIXER'S CASE (1859), 4 De G. & J. 575; 28 L. (2) Notwithstanding numerous irreconcilable decisions, the true doctrine seems to be, that where a person has been drawn into a contract to purchase shares by the fraudulent misrepresentations of directors, & where the directors, in the name of the co., seek to enforce that contract, or where the person who has been deceived institutes a suit to rescind it, the misrepresentations are imputable to the co., & the purchaser cannot be held to his contract (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).

(3) If an untrue statement is made, founded on a belief destitute of all reasonable grounds, or which the least inquiry would immediately have corrected, it may fairly & correctly be characterised as misrepresentation & deceit (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).

(4) If the directors employed the manager to make false representations as to the stability of the co., the effect would have been the same as if made by the directors themselves (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).

(5) I entertain considerable doubt whether the pursuer in this case has connected the directors sufficiently with the alleged misrepresentations to make them imputable to the co. That the directors knew of the manager's endeavours to get pursuer to take shares is nowhere alleged; nor is it alleged that the manager gave authority to the local agent from whom the misrepresentations were immediately derived (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).

(6) A co. cannot retain any benefit which they have gained through the fraud of their agent (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).

(7) If, instead of seeking to set aside the contract, the person defrauded prefers an action of damages for the deceit, such action cannot be maintained against the co., but only against the directors (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).

An incorporated co. cannot, in its corporate character, be called on to answer in an action for deceit (LORD CRANWORTH).

(8) The incorporated co. cannot be sued for frauds committed by directors before the incorporation (LORD CRANWORTH).

(9) That the complainant was himself a member of the co., whose agents had committed the fraud, would not be a valid objection to his suit for redress; nor would it be an answer that his suit might prejudice those who had innocently acquired their shares after he had acquired his (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).—*WESTERN BANK OF SCOTLAND v. In answer to questions left to them the jury found (1) that deft. was induced to apply for shares by representations fraudulently made by L., a director of pltf. co.; (2) that the representations were made both before & after the co. had been incorporated & L. had become a director; & (3) that they were made for the purposes of the co. & in its supposed interests. It appeared that after the formation of the co. all the interested parties, directors & signatories, well knew that L. was continuing what he had been doing previously, namely, endeavouring to raise money on behalf of the co.:—Held: in these circumstances L. was the agent of the co., the co. was bound by his acts, & the deft. was entitled to judgment on the claim & counterclaim.—*HILO MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. 1582. ———.]—In March, 1869, P. wrote to the secretary of the A. co. making certain inquiries as to the state of the co. He received a letter in reply signed by the secretary, & giving, as P. alleged, an untrue account of the state of the co. Just before the winding-up of the co. in Sept. 1869, P. filed a bill against the co. & against the directors, alleging that he had been induced by the fraudulent misrepresentations of the officers of the co. to purchase shares, & praying that the co. or the directors might be ordered to repay him the price of the shares, & to indemnify him for all calls, etc. P.'s inquiry had been communicated by the secretary to the manager, but it did not appear that the correspondence between P. & the secretary had been brought to the knowledge of the directors. It having been decided that P.'s name must be placed on the list of contributories:—Held: the answering of inquiries such as those addressed by P. to the secretary did not fall within the business of the co. deputed to the manager & secretary, & consequently that in the absence of proof connecting the directors personally with the replies made to P., no action or suit for misrepresentation could be maintained against them.—*PARTRIDGE v. He shortly afterwards acquired thirty other shares, but did not execute any deed in respect of them; he then obtained a certificate that he was the holder of fifty shares. In answer to inquiries respecting the circumstances of the co., which he shortly afterwards made, the manager of the co. informed him, among other particulars, that the dividends were payable half-yearly, whereas, in fact, the liabilities of the co. at that time greatly exceeded its assets. He then purchased fifty more shares in the co., being shares forfeited by former owners, & then held by the directors in trust for the co., of which circumstance, however, he was ignorant, & received a certificate that he was the holder of 100 shares. He received the dividends on these 100 shares

1603. — — — — — Voluntary winding-up without supervision included.]—The principle that a shareholder who has been induced to take shares in a co. by the fraudulent representations of the directors, cannot repudiate his shares or recover back the price paid for them after the co. has been wound up, if at the time of the intended repudiation there are any debts of the co. unpaid, extends to the case of a voluntary winding-up without supervision.

By the arts. of assocn. of a bank every shareholder was required to pay calls to the person & at the time & place appointed by the directors; & 21 days' notice was to be given of the time & place appointed. By a resolution of the directors before a voluntary winding-up, they made a call payable by instalments at certain dates, but no place or person at which or to whom the call was to be paid was mentioned, & no notice of the call was given by the directors. After the winding-up the liquidator gave notice to the shareholders that a call had been made, & requested them to pay it to certain persons at a specified place & time:—Held: the liquidator had power to enforce the call made by the directors, & the notice given by him was sufficient under 1862 Act, s. 95 (4), (8), s. 133 (5), (7).—*STONE v. On Oct. 18, a report made by independent investigators was sent to all the shareholders, which showed that the insolvency of the co. was of such an overwhelming character that large calls would have to be made to meet its liabilities. On Oct. 21, A. raised an action for reduction of his contract to take stock, on the ground that he was induced to purchase by the fraudulent misrepresentation of the directors. The summons in this action was served on the co. on the same day. On Oct. 22, an extraordinary resolution to wind up the co. voluntarily was passed. A. was put on the list of contributories. Sect. 1 of the Act provided that the persons therein named "& such other persons as shall become shareholders in the co. hereby established, & their successors, shall be a body corporate for the purpose of, etc." There was no reference to any past acts of the promoters of the co. or adoption of them. Some time before Apr. 2, 1891, deft. signed a subscription list headed, "We, the

He attended none of the meetings of the co., & before the organisation of it, wrote the secretary stating that he would refuse any calls made upon him:—Held: deft. was not liable, the Act contemplating subscription to a share list, or some act or other to be done after its passage which would constitute deft. a shareholder.—*HALIFAX STREET CARPETTE CO. v. P., a medical man, not being a shareholder, was invited by the directors to take a seat at the board & the office of medical examiner, & he accepted this office by letter, & acted as a director during a short period, but no shares were ever allotted to him. He subsequently resigned, but his resignation was declined, & an action, afterwards dismissed for want of prosecution, was brought against him to recover calls due on the qualification shares. The co. having gone into liquidation:—Held: the action for calls was no bar to the liquidator's claim to place P. on the list of contributories for the qualification shares; his acceptance of the offer was, at least, equivalent to an application for the shares, & his name must be placed upon the list accordingly.—Re HAMPSHIRE CO-OPERATIVE MILK CO., LTD., PURCELL'S CASE (1880), 29 W. general meeting would be held to consider whether the shares should be created or the co. go into liquidation. A., a shareholder, filled up the schedule expressing his willingness to take fifty of the new shares. At the meeting it was decided to create the shares. A second circular was then issued in these terms: "I — hereby apply for — shares of the new Preference stock." To this circular A. sent no reply, but the directors proceeding on his reply to the first circular allotted to him fifty of the shares. There was conflict of evidence as to whether he ever received the allotment letter, but it was admitted that he received but paid no attention to several call letters. The co. went into liquidation & the liquidators entered A.'s name in the list of contributories in respect of the said shares:—Held: the answer sent to the first circular was not sufficient to bind him to become a shareholder of the co. & his name must be struck off the list.—MASON v. c. Please forward letter of allotment to my address as under. Script to be issued when the shares are fully paid." At the same time pltf. gave the agent a promissory note for £25 in favour of the latter, payable four months after date, the agent undertaking that the note should not in the meantime be discounted. The agent having discounted the note before it fell due & paid the purchase price of the shares to the co. before any letter of allotment had been sent to pltf., the latter wrote to the co. purporting to withdraw his application for shares:—Held: (1) the document signed by pltf. did not constitute an out-&-out purchase of shares, but was an application for shares on allotment; (2) pltf. was entitled to withdraw the application before allotment & claim from the co. a refund of the amount paid by him to redeem the promissory note on its due

d. Sharebroker acting for client—Liability on transfer of shares for purpose of re-transfer only.]—A sharebroker purchased shares in a bank for a client who requested that the shares should be transferred to three other persons named by her. The sharebroker applied to the bank to have the shares so transferred, but the bank refused on the ground that, as one transfer for all the shares had been executed by the holder, it would be necessary to transfer the shares into the name of one person, who could apply to have the new scrip issued in the three different lots, so that the holder could transfer to the owners of the shares. At the bank's suggestion & request, the sharebroker allowed the shares to be transferred into his name for the purposes of re-transfer only:—Held: the broker had agreed to become a member of the co. within 1890 Act, s. 24, & that, after registration, his name was rightly put on the list of contributories.—Re MERCANTILE BANK (IN LIQUIDATION), Ex p. though one partner could not bind the others in such a matter, it should have been averred that when the calls were made upon defts. as alleged, they refused to pay on the ground that they were not shareholders or liable.—MOORE v. GURNEY (1861), 21 U. C. R. 127.—CAN.

In an action for payment of calls, S. swore that the stock was to be given to him in part-payment for the goodwill of his business, which the co. were to take over. The promoter testified that the shares subscribed for were to be in addition to those to be received for the goodwill:—Held: though S. could, before incorporation, constitute the promoter his agent to procure the allotment of shares for him & give his note in payment, yet the possession by the promoter did not relieve the co. from the duty of inquiring into the extent of his authority, & whichever of the two statements at the trial was true, the promoter could not bind S. by an unconditional application.—OTTAWA DAIRY CO. v. By a subsequent arrangement between the directors & C., but which was not within the powers of the

Upon an application by B. that his name might be removed from the register of shareholders, coupled with an appeal from the order placing him on the list of contributories:—Held: whatever might be the equities as between B. & C. the co. had a right to retain B. as a contributory, & the application & appeal were dismissed, notwithstanding the submission of C. to have his own name substituted for that of B.—Re MOSELEY GREEN COAL & COKE CO., LTD., BARRETT'S CASE (1864), 4 De G. 1615. ———.]—M. applied that shares, to which he was beneficially entitled, should be allotted, some to John Francis, others to W. & Eliza Aire & others to Bessie M. He had a son whose christian names were John Francis. His sister Eliza was married to a W. Hare, & he had a daughter, an infant, called Bessie. W. & Eliza Hare, had given him leave to use their names for the purposes of an allotment, but he caused the allotment to be made to W. & Eliza Aire. M. subsequently sold all the shares, & blank transfers were executed. At this time John Francis, the son, was dead; still the blank transfers of the shares allotted to John Francis purported to be executed by John Francis. W. & Eliza Hare did not execute the transfers which purported to be executed by W. & Eliza Aire. Bessie M., who had then attained her majority, signed the transfers of the shares which stood in her name, but without knowing anything about the documents she was asked to sign. M. sent in the transfers to the co. for registration, but they were never registered, & the names in which the shares had originally been allotted remained on the register at the date of the winding up of the co. The liquidator applied to have those names removed, & that M. might be settled on the list of contributories instead:—Held: John Francis & W. & Eliza Aire represented fictitious persons, & M. must be settled on the list of contributories in respect of the shares standing in those names; although Bessie M. was a real person, she had never assented to be a shareholder, nor acquiesced in being on the register after she came of age, M. had merely made use of her & her name, & he must be settled on the list of contributories in respect of the shares standing in her name.—Re YEOLAND'S CONSOLS, MANLEY'S CASE (1890), 2 Meg. 74.

The action was dismissed by consent. Later, when the co. was being wound up, the liquidator sought to place deft.'s name on the list of contributories:—Held: a pre-

On Feb. 28 the manager replied that when probate had been exhibited to the London agents of the bank he would send share certificates in the bank "in the name of the exors. individually." A certificate was made out to the exors. of 100 shares in the C. Bank, & an entry made in the share register with the description, "exors. of A." The exors. wrote that they objected to have the certificate in their names, & requested the bank to forward them one in the name of A. of shares. The agreement further provided that a claim must be made within 21 days from the date thereof by sending in to the M. co. or to the liquidators of the C. co. a signed claim in writing, & that the liquidators should within seven days from that date give notice in writing to each member of the C. co. stating the number of bonds or shares which he was entitled to claim as of right, with proper forms of claim. Before any acceptance of the offer or the allotment of the shares subsequently made, W. wrote to the M. co. withdrawing his application:—Held: the document sent by W. was an application which could be withdrawn by him before acceptance, & not an acceptance of a prior offer by the M. co., & he was not liable as a contributory.—Re METROPOLITAN FIRE INSURANCE CO., WALLACE'S CASE, [1900] 2 Ch. 671; 69 L. A. In General.

1636. Meaning of allotment.]—What was an allotment? Broadly speaking, it was an appropriation of shares to a particular person. Its legal meaning & effect depended on the circumstances under which it was made. It did not of itself necessarily create the status of membership. It might be subject to a condition—as, for instance, the performance of some act such as the payment of a sum of money by the allottee (STIRLING, J.).—*SPITZEL v. An allotment was made, but as in consequence of certain statements in the prospectus the co. could not obtain a trading certificate, the directors called the allottees together & returned them their money:—Held: there had been an "allotment" within the meaning of the agreement between pltf. & deft., & pltf. was entitled to recover the £100.—*ELLETT v. 1638. When complete—Entry in minute-book of resolution acceding to application.]—Upon the purchase of the business of the co. A., & amalgamating with the purchasing co. B., the shareholders in co. A. were entitled to receive shares in the amalgamated co. in exchange for the shares held by them in co. A., & a form of application was sent to the A. shareholders for their signature, requesting an allotment of shares in the amalgamated co., with an agreement to accept the same, & an authority to insert their names in the register of shareholders.

X., one of the A. directors & shareholders, signed the form of application for fifty shares, & a resolution was passed on Apr. 22, 1869, & confirmed on Apr. 29, for allotting the same to him. On May 15, X. wrote withdrawing his application, as he had determined to take no shares, requesting the directors not to allot any shares to him, & to return his application. The consideration of this letter was from time to time postponed, & X. was put off with assurances that no shares had been allotted to him. On Aug. 15, in answer to a letter from X.'s solr., threatening immediate legal proceedings to restrain the co. from placing his name on the register as a shareholder, unless the promised minute cancelling his application for shares was received by return of post, the solr. of the co. wrote stating that at the last meeting of the directors "a resolution was passed cancelling the allotment of shares to" X. No entry of such a resolution was to be found in the minute-books, & its existence was denied by one of the directors who was present at the meetings before & after Aug. 15:—Held: X. was liable as a contributory, the allotment of shares to him being complete by the terms of the arrangement between the two cos., as soon as the resolution acceding to his application was entered in the book; & independently of there being no evidence that the allotment was ever cancelled, the directors had no power to release a shareholder who wished to have his shares cancelled.—*Re UNITED PORTS CO., ADAMS' CASE (1872), L. 1639. May be conditional—Condition to be performed by allottee—Allottee not a member until condition performed.]—(1) An allotment of shares is an appropriation by the directors or managing body of a co. of shares to a particular person, but it does not necessarily create the status of membership. The allotment may be subject to a condition; e.g., that the allottee should not only indicate his acceptance, but perform some other act such as make payment of a sum of money;

On May 9 J. received a letter from the canvasser to the effect that before getting his letter of withdrawal, the application had been sent in to the head office & J.'s notes had been discounted:—Held: canvasser had no authority to receive a notice of withdrawal, & as J. had not brought home to the co. knowledge of the receipt of his letter of withdrawal before allotment or at any time, he was entered on the list of contributories.

a co. therefore may offer specified shares to a person on the terms that no title to the shares shall arise until a condition provided for in the contract to accept the shares has been fulfilled, & after the allotment & registration of such shares, the co. may decline to treat such person as a member if he has neglected to comply with the condition.

(2) A person who agrees to become a member of a co. & whose name is entered on the register of shareholders as the holder of certain shares is not thereby constituted a member entitled to vote at meetings of the co. in respect of such shares unless it can be shown that the co. have agreed to accept such person as a member; when, therefore, a co. have agreed to give a person certain shares upon certain conditions which remain unfulfilled, such person does not become a member, notwithstanding the allotment of shares to him in part performance of the agreement incorporating such conditions & registration of the same in his name, so long as the certificates for such shares are deposited with the intention that they shall not operate according to their purport until the event happens on which they are to issue.

Apparently there was no formal allotment of the shares by the co., beyond a resolution empowering the president to dispose of the shares, but the president placed the shares & the note in escrow in the bank, the shares to be delivered up on payment of the note:—Held: upon the signing of the application & the delivery of the note, deft. became the owner of the 50 shares, with power forthwith validly to assign them to any one else, or to have bound himself to do so on the issue of the certificates if the co.'s arts. of assocn. required indorsement of the certificates; & there was no notice of allotment necessary.—ANGLO-AMERICAN LUMBER

1646. "Named in the prospectus as the minimum subscription"—"The prospectus"—Document on which application based.]—(1) The expression "the prospectus" in 1900 Act, s. 4 (1), (4), means that document offering capital to the public upon the basis of which appct. has actually subscribed.

(2) The statement of the minimum subscription on which the directors may go to allotment, which the sect. requires to be inserted in the prospectus, must be an express statement, & not one which can be implied from other statements in the prospectus.

The prospectus issued by the co. contained only the following statement as to the minimum subscription: "The minimum subscription is fixed by the arts. of assocn. at 10 per cent. of the shares offered":—Held: there had been in the case of both the arts. of assocn. & the prospectus a sufficient compliance with the requirements of 1900 Act, ss. 4, 10, as to the minimum subscription, there being a statement of an amount as to such minimum subscription which was ascertained as soon as it was known what shares the directors were offering for public subscription.—Re WEST YORKSHIRE DARRACQ AGENCY, LTD. (1908), 25 T. 1649. "Has been subscribed"—Subscription must be effective.]—Deft. co. was registered in 1897, but no public issue of its shares was then made. On May 12, 1904, an agreement was entered into between pltf. & defts. that pltf. should bear the expense of issuing & advertising a prospectus, which had been prepared by defts., in return for certain payments. The prospectus was duly issued. It stated that the minimum number of shares upon which allotment would be made was 40,000. As soon as the subscriptions amounted to 40,000 the directors proceeded to allot shares to appcts., including pltf., & received the application money. It turned out that some of the applications were not effective, & that the minimum subscription had not been reached. The directors of deft. co. proposed to give to each allottee the option to have the allotment cancelled & the application money returned. Pltf. moved for an injunction to restrain them from doing so:—Held: the agreement gave pltf. no right to the injunction; the allotment was irregular under 1900 Act, s. 4, & was voidable; under that sect. the allottees had a right at any time to rescind their contract to take shares; the allottees could also rescind on the double ground that there was an untrue statement in the prospectus, & that the condition with respect to the minimum number of shares had been broken; & the proposed action of the directors was not ultra vires.—*FINANCE & ISSUE, LTD. v. "Paid to & received by the company"—Application money paid by cheque—Cheques not cleared.]—In May, 1905, the directors of a new co. went to allotment on the minimum subscription fixed by the prospectus, & allotted to pltf. the shares for which he had applied. At the date of this allotment the directors had received applications for the full minimum subscription, & cheques for the whole of the application money, but many of these cheques had not then been cleared & three of them were not paid on presentation though they were at once made good by an underwriting co. On an application by pltf. for an interim injunction to restrain the co. from dealing with his application money:—Held: (1) the allotment was irregular & voidable, & pltf. was entitled to an interim injunction; (2) according to the true construction of 1900 Act, s. 4, it is a condition precedent to a valid allotment that the whole of the application money should have been paid to & received by the co. in cash. Any means by which money can be remitted may be used, but the remittances must be cleared & the actual cash received by the co. before allotment.—*MEARS v. Part of the amount required to complete the sum payable on allotment for the minimum subscription consisted of cheques received by the directors before allotment on the day of allotment, but not honoured until a subsequent date:—Held: before allotment the sum payable on application had been "paid to & received by" the co. within Cos. Act, 1900, sect. 4 (1), & the allot-

co." before allotment within 1900 Act, s. 4, although the cheque is duly honoured.

(2) Sect. 5, which renders an allotment to an appct. in contravention of sect. 4 "voidable at the instance of appct. within one month after the holding of the statutory meeting of the co. & not later," does not require actual legal proceedings to be taken within the month as a condition of avoidance. Notice of avoidance within the month followed by prompt legal proceedings after the month is sufficient.

1652. — — — — —.]—A co. issued a prospectus offering 20,000 £1 preference shares to the public & stating that no allotment would be made unless 15,000 shares had been applied for & the application money paid. Pltf. applied for 100 shares. The directors proceeded to allotment when 15,000 shares had been applied for, but in some cases the application money had only been paid by cheques which had not been cleared. Pltf. paid the full amount of his shares. The co. went into liquidation, & it then appeared that the co. was insolvent & the shares worthless. Pltf. brought this action against one of the directors claiming repayment of the money paid on application for the shares under s. 4 & compensation for loss under sect. 5 of 1900 Act. Deft. was not present at the meeting of the board at which the allotment was made, but was present at subsequent meetings at which the minutes were confirmed & a resolution passed to apply for a certificate to commence business:—Held: (1) as payment by cheque was not payment within 1900 Act, s. 4, until the cheque was cleared, there had been a contravention of the Act; (2) on all the evidence, deft. was not aware of the facts & had not knowingly contravened the Act.

(3) Sect. 4 applies only before allotment. After allotment is once made, whether in contravention of the Act or not, it is only voidable at the option of the shareholder, & the co. cannot pay back the application money; the only liability of the directors after allotment is the liability to make good the loss under sect. 5 (2) of the Act. Under that section, "knowingly contravene" means contravene with knowledge of the facts. A director cannot escape liability by ignorance of the law.

(4) But a director does not make himself responsible for an act done at a meeting at which he was not present, & which is complete without further confirmation, merely by voting at a subsequent meeting for the confirmation of the minutes.—*BURTON v. Upon application by the shareholders to have his name removed from the list in respect of such shares:—Held: the board of directors could not delegate their powers; if the shares had been allotted it was ultra vires, & therefore the shareholder's name must be removed from the list in respect of such shares.—Re LEEDS BANKING CO., HOWARD'S CASE (1866), 1 Ch. A letter of application for shares in a co. was put into the post, & was duly received by the directors. The letter was duly received by appct., but before he received it he had sent by post a letter declining to accept any shares:—Held: (1) the contract was completed when the letter announcing the allotment of the shares was put into the post; (2) under the arts. of assocn. of the co., the allotment of shares by a committee instead of by the whole board of directors was valid; (3) the provision for payment of interest on the balance was not a new term introduced into the contract.

1658. — Allotment by three directors—Before quorum determined.]—Shares were allotted to B. at a meeting of three directors & before the number necessary to form a quorum had been determined:—Held: B. could not upon the co. being wound up, insist that the allotment was invalid.—Re ENGLISH, ETC., ROLLING STOCK CO., LYON'S CASE (1866), 35 Beav. 646; 14 L. 1659. — Quorum—Competent to allot—Construction of articles.]—The arts. of assocn. of a limited co. provided that the number of directors should not be less than four, nor more than seven, & four directors were named. It was also provided that two directors should form a quorum, & that the continuing directors might act notwithstanding any vacancy in the board, the directors being empowered to fill up casual vacancies. By a letter dated Nov. 8, A. applied for shares in the co., relying on the statement in the prospectus that B. was to be a director & chairman, & C. a director. At the first meeting of directors only two were present, B. & C. having sent in their resignations. The two directors elected another director, who was not present, & proceeded to allot shares. On Nov. 15 A. received a letter of allotment accompanied by a letter informing him that B. & C. had retired from the board. On Nov. 27 A. wrote withdrawing his application for shares, on the ground that B. & C. were not directors. The co. refused to withdraw his name, but took no further steps to enforce the calls on the shares, & A. took no proceedings to recover his deposit, or to have his name removed from the register. On Feb. 3, 1881, another shareholder obtained an order for the removal of his name in consequence of the resignation of B. & C. (Re Scottish Petroleum Company, Anderson's Case, No. 748, ante), but no agreement was proved that these proceedings should govern the cases of any other allottees. The co. was afterwards wound up, & then A. took out a summons under 1862 Act, s. 35, to have his name removed from the register:—Held: (1) the two directors were competent to allot the shares; (2) the letter which accompanied the allotment letter did not qualify it, so as to prevent it being an unconditional acceptance of A.'s offer to take shares; (3) A. had entered into a complete contract to take shares, but in consequence of the retirement of

B. & C. the contract was voidable; but, (4) as A. had taken no steps before the commencement of the winding up to have his name removed from the register, his name was properly on the list of contributories.

There is a difference between a contract to take shares & other contracts, as in the former case the contractor acquires a status as a member which it requires some active proceeding to alter, repudiation alone not being sufficient.

1660. — — — Directors improperly constituted.]—R. applied for & was allotted shares in a co., the prospectus of which stated that there were three directors, of whom F. was one. The arts. of assocn. of the co. provided that the number of directors should not be less than three, nor more than seven; & three names—including that of F.—were given as the first directors. It was also provided that two directors should form a quorum. The co. having been subsequently ordered to be wound up, R.'s name was placed on the list of contributories. It came to R.'s knowledge that F. never authorised his name to be used as a director of the co., nor ever acted in that capacity. Accordingly R. objected that there had been no duly constituted board of directors; that two directors could not consider themselves a quorum; & that no acts by them were valid. He therefore claimed that the allotment to him of shares was void; & that he was entitled to have his name removed from the list of contributories, & the money paid by him refunded:—Held: (1) the want of a properly constituted board of directors when the shares were allotted to R. rendered the allotment invalid; & the defect was not cured by the provision of the co.'s arts. of assocn. that two directors might form a quorum; (2) R.'s name must be struck off the list of contributories.—*Re BRITISH EMPIRE MATCH CO., LTD., Ex p. 1662. — — —.]—The arts. of assocn. of a co. provided that the number of directors general meeting of the shareholders of pltf. co., incorporated under the Ontario Cos. Act, it was resolved that a board of three directors should be elected to manage the affairs of the co., & three of the five provisional directors were elected as directors. The three directors met & adopted bye-laws, one of which provided that the affairs of the co. should be managed by a board of five directors, & another provided for the terms upon which stock subscriptions should be received. About ten months later, a document in the form of an agreement to purchase stock was signed by pltf., & the words

"accepted by" written at the foot over the signature of one of the three directors, who had been elected president & general manager; & at a meeting of the directors a resolution was passed giving to the president full power to deal with deft.'s "application." On the following day the pre-

should not be less than four or more than eight; that the two vendors should be the first directors; that the first directors should have power before the first general meeting to appoint additional directors but so that the number should not exceed seven; that continuing directors might act notwithstanding any vacancy; that three directors should be a quorum. The two first directors appointed a third, & the three held board meetings & allotted shares, including 2,000 shares which were allotted as fully-paid by way of commission to M., the promoter of the co. M. had transferred some of his shares to H., the solr. of the co., partly as a gift & partly in payment of his costs, & others to bonâ fide purchasers. The co. never really commenced business & was ordered to be wound up compulsorily on the petition of shareholders. The vendors, who had acted honestly, paid all the debts of the co. & repaid the bonâ fide shareholders what they had paid, taking transfers of their shares. The liquidator took out a summons in the name of the co. to rectify the register by striking off the names of M. & H. M. & H. had full notice & knowledge of the arts. & the circumstances, but the effect of striking off their names would be to leave the vendors the only shareholders of the co. & enable them to take back their property:—Held: (1) there never having been a properly constituted board of directors, the allotments made by the three directors could not be justified either because they were a quorum or because they were continuing directors; (2) the original allotment to M. was bad; (3) the liquidator, on behalf of the co., was not estopped from disputing the validity of the allotment.—Re SLY, SPINK & Co., [1911] 2 Ch. 430; 105 L. 1663. ——— Subsequent ratification—After withdrawal of application.—The arts. of assocn. of a co., which was incorporated on Oct. 20, 1888, provided that there should be not more than ten nor less than three directors; that the first directors should be appointed by the subscribers of the memorandum of assocn.; that the directors should hold meetings for the despatch of business at such times & places, & might adjourn & otherwise regulate such meetings as they thought fit, & might determine the quorum necessary for the transaction of business; & that a resolution in writing signed by all the directors should be as valid as if passed at a meeting duly called & constituted. They also provided that the shares should be allotted by the directors to such persons at such times & on such terms as they should think fit. On Oct. 22, 1888, the subscribers of the memorandum of assocn. duly appointed five directors, one of whom was not to take his seat at the board until after allotment. On Oct. 24, a meeting was held at which only two directors were present. The two directors passed a resolution that two directors should be a quorum, & proceeded to allot a number of shares. Among others, they allotted to S. 100 £5 shares, for which he had applied. On Oct. 25, S. withdrew his application. On the same day a third director signed a resolution appointing two directors a quorum; & on Oct. 26, a fourth director handed in his written assent to the same resolution. At the meeting on Oct. 26, the previous allotments were confirmed. S. applied to have his name struck off the register:—Held: (NORTH, J.) (1) there was no properly appointed quorum of directors present at the meeting of Oct. 24, when the allotments were made; the allotment of S. was therefore invalid, & the confirmation on Oct. 29, would only take effect as a fresh allotment on that date, which, being after withdrawal, was ineffectual; S.'s name was therefore removed from the register; (2) on appeal, without deciding the other points, there was no evidence that, I.—a director, who was not present at the meeting of Oct. 24, but who signed the document on Oct. 26—received proper notice of the meeting; he had not waived his right to the notice which he ought to have received; the meeting was a bad one; & the decision of North, J. must be affirmed.—Re PORTUGUESE CONSOLIDATED COPPER MINES, LTD. (1889), 42 Ch. 1664. ——— ——— ——— ———.]—The arts. of assocn. of a co. provided that the shares should be allotted by the directors & that the first directors should be appointed by the subscribers to the memorandum of assocn. On Oct. 22, 1888, the subscribers to the memorandum appointed four persons directors. On Oct. 24, a meeting of directors was held, at which two only attended, & they allotted shares to A. & B. who had sent in applications. The ct. subsequently held that this meeting was irregular, & that the allotments were invalid. Notice of the allotments was sent on the following day to A. & B. A. refused to pay the allotment money on his shares; B. paid his to the bankers under protest; but the evidence failed to prove that either of them revoked his application or repudiated his shares on the ground of the allotment being invalid. On Dec. 24, the co. brought an action against A. for his allotment money & recovered judgment. On Jan. 7, 1889, another meeting of directors was held, at which two only attended, & they passed a resolution that the certificates of the shares allotted should be sealed & issued to the allottees. B. refused to accept the certificates of his shares, but did not distinctly repudiate the allotment. On Jan. 16, another meeting of directors was held, at which all four directors attended, & the chairman signed the minutes of the last meeting. On Mar. 7, a resolution was passed, at a duly constituted meeting of the directors, formally confirming the allotment of the shares made on Oct. 24. Afterwards A. & B. moved for a rectification of the register by striking out their names:—Held: (1) although the original allotment of shares was invalid, it had been ratified by the co., & was binding on the allottees; with respect to A., such ratification was complete on Dec. 24, 1888, when the action against him was commenced; & with sident wrote to deft. notifying him that calls had been made upon the shares subscribed for by him, "which have this day been allotted to you by bye-law of this co." Nothing further was done in the way of allotting shares to deft., & his name did not appear in the register of shareholders. About two weeks after the receipt of the president's letter, deft. wrote to the co. withdrawing & cancelling his application:—Held: in an action for the amount of calls alleged to be due, the directors had no power to delegate to the president their authority as to the allotment of shares or their authority to accept the offer of deft.; there was, therefore, no valid allotment, & the withdrawal was effectual.—TWIN CITY OIL CO. v. CHRISTIE (1909), 18 O. L. R. 324; 13 O. W. R. 756.—CAN.

E.'s name was also entered upon a register of shareholders, after which he paid further moneys in respect of his shares. The co. having gone into liquidation, E.'s name was sought to be placed upon the list of contributories:—Held: the proceedings carried on at the office of the co. could not be treated as the proceedings of the co., & E. was not a contributory, inasmuch as no act had been done by any duly constituted authority to make him one.—Re CITY & DISTRICT BANK OF LONDON, LTD., EWINGTON'S CASE (1884), 1 T. The secretary of the co. posted a letter of allotment of the shares so apportioned to pltf. & requested him to pay the amount due thereon. Pltf. received the letter with knowledge of the mistake, but sent a cheque for the amount claimed therein. On the discovery of the error by the co. which happened shortly after the posting of the letter of allotment, pltf. refused to allow the allotment to be rectified & sued the co. for delivery of the shares allotted to him under the said mistake or their value:—Held: as pltf. had had knowledge of the mistake he was not entitled to take advantage thereof.—*BETZ v. larger nominal value. A. applied for shares on the faith of the memorandum of assocn.; but before allotment a resolution was passed by a majority of two-thirds of the directors increasing the value of the shares from £20 to £40. This resolution was not registered. The letter of allotment received by A. did not specify the value of the shares, & no notice of the increase in nominal value was received by A., nor did he know of it until May, 1866, a year after executing a transfer of his shares:—Held: the increase was not binding upon A., & he was liable on his contract with the co. for £20 shares only.

1673. — Contract to take fully-paid shares—Allotment of shares not fully-paid.]—An amalgamation was agreed on between the P. Co., Ltd., & the U. Co., which was an unlimited insurance co., under which the paid-up shareholders in the P. Co. were to have paid-up shares in the U. Co. to the like amount, & the other shareholders in the P. Co. were to have corresponding shares in the U. Co. It was also agreed that the P. Co. should assign all their assets to the U. Co., & that the U. Co. should indemnify them against all liabilities. An indenture in two parts, embodying these terms, was drawn up & executed by the two cos.; but the covenant of indemnity in the part executed by the U. Co. differed materially from the covenant in the part executed by the P. Co. W. was a paid-up shareholder in the P. Co., & made an application to the U. Co., in pursuance of the amalgamation, for paid-up shares of the same value as his former shares. He received a letter of allotment, signed by a person professing to be the managing director of the U. Co., giving him notice that the directors had allotted him the number of shares applied for, on which he was to be credited with an amount proportionate to the assets of the P. Co. There was no evidence on what authority this letter was written, but W.'s name was placed on the register as an ordinary shareholder. W. received the letter at the end of Aug., while he was on a yachting cruise, & on his return to London, early in Oct., applied personally to the chairman & solr. of the co. for an explanation of the letter, & objected to take the shares, but was informed by them that his name was not on the register. On Oct. 15, he wrote to the secretary, formally repudiating the shares. On Nov. 9, the U. Co. was wound up on a petition presented on Oct. 7:—Held: (1) the variation in the two parts of the indenture rendered the indenture void, & the amalgamation was incomplete; (2) there was no contract between W. & the co. to take shares; (3) under the circumstances, W. was not bound by acquiescence to take shares in the co.; & his name was therefore removed from the list of contributories.—Re UNITED PORTS & GENERAL INSURANCE CO., WYNNE'S CASE (1873), 8 Ch. 1674. — — — — —.]—An amalgamation between two cos. was agreed upon, on the terms that the shareholders in the selling co. should receive in exchange for their shares in that co. shares credited with an equal amount in the purchasing co. In pursuance of this arrangement B., a shareholder in the selling co., applied for 200 shares in the purchasing co. The shares were allotted upon different terms, only an unascertained amount, proportionate to the assets of the selling co., being credited thereon. Notice of allotment upon these terms was sent to B., & his name was placed on the register in Aug. B. thereupon wrote for the share certificates. These were never sent to him, although repeatedly asked for. The co. was wound up in Nov. The amalgamation was afterwards held to have been altogether void:—Held: owing to the variation in the terms of the allotment from those of the application for shares, there never was any contract between B. & the co. to take these shares, & under the circumstances there had been no

o. Change made in amount of capital—Without subscriber's knowledge or acquiescence.]—D. signed his name as subscriber for a certain number of shares at the foot of a prospectus of a proposed co., in which it was stated that the capital was to be $75,000. Without D.'s knowledge or acquiescence, the co., as afterwards incorporated, had a capital of $150,000. In accordance with the terms of the subscription, & before the incorporation of the co., D. paid up half the amount of his shares. There was no allotment of stock to D., no entry of his name in any stockbook, & no acting on his part as shareholder. The co. being in process of liquidation, it was claimed that D. was a contributory:—Held: the change made in the capital of the co. was a material one, & there being no acquiescence or laches on D.'s part, he was not liable as a contributory.—STEVENS v. LONDON STEEL WORKS CO., DELANO'S CASE (1887), 15 O. R. 75.—CAN.

p. Reduction in holding without shareholder's consent.]—Deft. subscribed for 50 shares in pltf. co., signed the share-list & paid a call. By the Act of Incorporation other calls were to be paid as called for. The co. made six other calls, but deft. did not pay them. Before making the calls sued for, the number of deft.'s shares was changed, without his consent, on the share-list from 50 to 25 shares, & the co. having brought this action for the amount of the calls, he pleaded nunquam indebtedus, & an equitable plea setting out the above facts, & contending that by the alteration his contract to become a shareholder was rendered void, & that he thereupon ceased to be a shareholder:—Held: the verdict must be for deft. on all the issues raised.—*STADACONA INSURANCE CO. v. (2) Subject to confirmation by a meeting of shareholders it was agreed by directors of a co. to give, & by A. to accept, fully paid-up shares in satisfaction of his admitted claim against the co. for services rendered. At the shareholders' meeting it was subsequently resolved "that a sum of £—— be voted to A., which he agreed to take in fully paid-up shares." The agreement was not registered under 1867 Act, s. 25, & there was no sufficient evidence that there had been any distinctive allotment or acceptance of shares pursuant to the agreement. On application by the liquidator to place A. on the list of contributories as holder of unpaid shares to the extent agreed to be given:—Held: there had been nothing amounting to a payment in cash for the shares by A.; but as the only contract between the co. & A. was that fully paid-up shares should be given & accepted, a contract to take unpaid shares could not, in the absence of evidence of any assent on the part of A. to vary the original contract, be enforced against A. by the liquidator on behalf of the co.; & accordingly A. was not liable as a contributory for the number of shares mentioned in the agreement.—Re BARANGAH OIL REFINING CO., ARNOT'S CASE (1887), 36 Ch. t. Invalid creation of preference shares.—A limited co. which, by the terms of its memorandum & original arts. of assocn., was precluded from creating preference shares, by special resolution resolved that the remaining unissued shares of the nominal capital should be preference shares subject to these conditions: that they should bear a fixed rate of dividend; that any failure of the annual profits to meet the dividend should be made good from the profits of subsequent years; that after ten years the co. had right to redeem these shares at par; that preference shareholders were not entitled to vote or take part in any meeting, or in the management of the co., or to share in the rights of ordinary shareholders. Preference shares were applied for & allotted. In a special case presented by an allottee of preference shares & the co., the co. contended that, although the preference given to these shares was invalid, the allottee was to be regarded as a holder of ordinary shares:—Held: as the allottee of preference shares had not applied for or agreed to take ordinary shares, he was not to 1681. ————.]—A banking co. having resolved to issue certain reserved shares, a circular was sent to each shareholder offering one new share for each five old ones at £30 a share, & asking whether, if any new shares remained over, the shareholder wished to have any of them allotted to him; it also stated that the amount must be paid before a certain day. A holder of twenty shares, in reply, agreed to take "his proportion of allotment," & "his proportion of shares in addition," if he could have them on the terms stated in the circular. The manager of the bank replied, that the four additional shares for which the shareholder had applied had been allotted to him, in addition to the four previously accepted by him, & that the amount must be paid on or before a certain day, or the shares would be forfeited. The shareholder sent no answer, & made no payment in respect of any of the shares before an order for winding up the bank was made:—Held: the first circular & the shareholder's reply constituted a valid contract with respect to the first four shares, viz., "the proportion of allotment," & the shareholder was therefore liable in respect of them; but as to the second four shares there was no contract, as the manager's reply accepting the shareholder's offer introduced a new term by the clause of forfeiture.—Re LEEDS BANKING CO., ADDINELL'S CASE (1865), L. 1691. General rule.—On Aug. 1, A. wrote a letter to the provisional committee of a co., requesting them to allot him 100 shares in it, & adding that he agreed to accept such shares as might be allotted to him. On Aug. 11 he wrote a letter to the solrs. to the co. consenting to be a provisional committeeman, & added that, if the solrs. would send him a printed form of application, he would fill it up with fifty or more. On Oct. 11, following, he gave his formal consent, in writing, to become a provisional committeeman, & to take one or more share or shares. One of the books of the co. contained an entry of 100 shares, having been allotted to him; & another contained an entry of his being an appct. for fifty shares. On Oct. 17, the secretary to the co. informed him that 100 shares had been allotted to him, & requested to be informed how many of them he intended to take:—Held: he had never bound himself to take any shares at all; & therefore, the Master had erred in placing his name on the list of contributories.

1696. — Seven months.]—R., the chairman of the board of directors of a co. in which he held fifty shares, signed a letter of application for 450 more, striking out the reference to the payment of the deposit which was required on application for shares. There was some evidence to show that this application was made in pursuance of a previous promise by R. to become a holder of 500 shares, & that on the faith of this promise he had been elected chairman. No notice was taken of the application till after seven months, when at a board meeting it was proposed & seconded that 450 shares should be allotted to R. R., who was present, handed in his letter withdrawing his application, & deposed that he had previously withdrawn it verbally. There was no proper evidence that the resolution to allot shares to R. had been carried, but a letter of allotment was sent him on the following day. The co. was at this time in a hopeless state, & a resolution for winding it up was passed a fortnight afterwards:—Held: the offer by R. to take shares was not shown to have been accepted by the co. before it was withdrawn by him, & he was not liable in respect of the 450 shares.—Re UNIVERSAL NON-TARIFF FIRE INSURANCE CO., RITSO'S CASE (1877), 4 Ch. 1697. — Notice of allotment nineteen months after application—Allotment seventeen months after application.]—In July, 1882, B., who was a merchant resident in South Africa, at the request of C., the local agent of a projected co. which was to be established in England, signed an application for 100 shares in the co. B. heard nothing further of the matter until Feb. 1884, when he received notice that, on Dec. 20, 1883, 100 shares had been allotted to him. The co. was registered on Dec. 19, 1883, & the delay had arisen in consequence of the unsettled state of affairs in South Africa. On receiving the notice B. informed C. that he declined to accept the shares because of the lapse of time since his application. C. stated that he had received no instructions, so would do nothing in the matter. B. did not communicate with the co., but he proceeded to England, arriving on May 29, 1884, & on June 6, 1884, he took out a summons, asking that the co.'s register of shareholders might be rectified by striking out his name. In the meantime, on May 23, 1884, a petition for the winding up of the co. had been presented, & a winding-up order—relating back to the date of the presentation of the petition—was made on June 13, 1884:—Held: if B., on receiving the notice of allotment, had forthwith written to the co. repudiating the shares, he would undoubtedly have had a right to be taken off the list of contributories; but, as he had not done this, & before he repudiated, the winding-up order had intervened, whereby the rights of creditors were made paramount, his application must be refused.—*Re LAND LOAN MORTGAGE & GENERAL TRUST CO. 1699. Right to repudiate—Before attaining majority.]—Pltf., while an infant, applied for shares in a co. & paid the amount due on application. The shares were duly allotted to her, & she paid the amount due on allotment. No dividends were received by her, nor did she attend any meetings of the co. Six weeks after allotment, while still under age, she repudiated the contract, & asked for repayment of the money paid by her to the co. She subsequently brought an action to recover the money. The co. then went into liquidation, & the liquidator removed her name from the register of shareholders:—Held: having derived no advantage under the contract, the consideration had wholly failed, & she was entitled to prove in the winding up for the amount paid by her in respect of the shares.—*HAMILTON v. The co. never paid any dividend, & an order for winding it up was made before any of the children had attained 21. The infants were placed on the list of contributories, & an order was made against each for payment of an arrear of calls, but, their infancy having been discovered, no attempt was made to enforce it:—Held: the father was liable to pay the amount of these calls, as a loss occasioned to the co. by his breach of duty as director in having shares allotted to infants.—*Re CRENVER & WHEAL ABRAHAM UNITED MINING CO., Ex p. 1715. ———.]—Before winding up.]—A co. was incorporated in Oct., 1865. On Nov. 9, 1865, before any shares in the co. were allotted, an agreement in writing was entered into between the subscribers of the memorandum of assocn. of the co. & S. & C. to the effect that the co. should appoint S. & C. their agents at certain ports; that S. & C. should enter upon their agencies on the eighth day after the allotment of shares in the co.; that C. should be one of the first directors of the co., & that S. & C. should subscribe for sixty shares in the co. The arts. of assocn. gave the directors power to adopt this agreement, & on Jan. 16, 1866, it was adopted & confirmed by the board of directors. C. acted as a director of the co. until Aug. 27, 1866, when he resigned. S. & C. never acted as agents of the co. under this agreement. The shares of the co. were allotted in July, 1866, but no allotment was then made to S. or C. On June 22, 1866, an agreement was entered into between the co. & S. & C. by which the former agreement was rescinded & in lieu thereof it was stipulated that the co. should appoint S. & C. their agents at the same ports; that S. & C. should enter on their agencies so soon as certain arrangements entered into between the co. & another specified co. should be completed, & that S. & C. should, during the continuance of the new agreement & so long as they should be the agents of the co. hold at least sixty shares in the co. The arrangements with the other co. were never completed, & S. & C. never acted as agents for the co. On Sept. 4, 1866, the directors resolved to allot sixty shares to S. & C., & sixty shares were accordingly registered to their names. No notice of this allotment was given to them, & they did not in fact know of it until after the winding up of the co. commenced, which was in Nov. 1866:—Held: S. & C. were improperly entered on the register of the co., & they were not liable as contributories, as (1) the agreement of Nov. 1865, required, in order to constitute S. & C. owners of shares in the co., an appropriation of shares by the co. to S. & C. & notice to them of such appropriation; & (2) the second agreement only required that S. & C. should hold shares so long as they were agents of the co., & this they never were.—Re ANGLO-DANISH & BALTIC STEAM NAVIGATION CO., SAHLGREEN & CARRALL'S CASE (1868), 3 Ch. 1719. On reconstruction of company—Application by liquidators of old company—Not necessary.]

—Upon the contract between the liquidators of A. co. & the promoters of B. co. for the transfer of the property of A. co. to B. co., part of the consideration agreed upon was that the liquidators of A. co. should receive for themselves or their nominees shares in B. co., which should import a liability of 10s. per share; & it was also agreed that in case of these shares not being taken up, the liquidators of A. co. might re-transfer them to B. co. without incurring any liability. The arts. of B. co. further provided that no person should be deemed to have accepted shares unless he had testified his acceptance in writing or paid a deposit. The contract was registered with the arts. The liquidators of A. co. sent in their application in writing for shares, requesting an allotment to their joint names of 3919 shares, importing a liability of 10s. each. Those shares were allotted to them, & their names registered in respect thereof, but no notice of allotment was sent to them, nor did they ever formally testify acceptance, except by recital & acknowledgment in the deed of assignment whereby the transfer to B. co. was carried out. No re-transfer to B. co. was ever made by them:—Held: the provision in the arts. of B. co. as to acceptances of allotment did not apply, no formal notice of allotment being requisite under the circumstances; & the names of the liquidators of A. co. were rightly registered as members, & their names being still on the register at the winding up of B. co., they must be settled upon the list of contributories to the extent to which the shares allotted to them were unpaid.—Re BASYE CONSOLIDATED SILVER MINING CO., LTD., DYETT & LOUITT'S CASE (1880), 43 L. 1720 ii. ———.]—Resps. signed an application for one £25 share in applt. co. & forwarding £1 deposit undertook to pay the balance by instalments with interest. Under the arts. of assocn. the sum of £10 ought to have been paid on allotment. No notice of allotment was sent to resps., although in fact it had been made & their names had been entered on the register of the co. as the holders of one share. Nearly two and a half years after the date of application, a notice of call in respect of such share was sent to the resps., as was also, after a lapse of a further two years, a notice of another call. Subsequently a meeting of shareholders & creditors, of which resps. were sent notice, having resolved to wind up the

co. voluntarily, the list of contributories was settled by the liquidator including the resps.' names as holders of one share. A notice of a further call made by the liquidator was sent to the resps. All the notices above referred to were ignored by resps. In an action by the co. to recover the balance of application money, the calls & interest in respect of such share the ct. dismissed the claim on the ground that no notice of allotment had been sent & that resps. were entitled to assume that their application had lapsed. This decision was affirmed by the full ct., but on a different ground:—Held: the proper inference to be drawn from the undisputed facts was that resps. had agreed to become, & the co. had accepted them as, members of the co., & they were liable as shareholders to the co.—*FARMERS' MERCANTILE UNION & CHAFF MILLS, LTD. v. "of my or our said respective shares," to pay the co. 10 per cent. of the amount of said shares, & all future calls. The co. subsequently passed a resolution instructing the secretary to issue allotment certificates to each shareholder for the shares held by him. The secretary accordingly prepared such certificates, which respectively represented that the co., "in accordance with your application for shares, have allotted to you shares amounting to," etc. These were handed to the co.'s broker to deliver to the shareholders & collect the 10 per cent. It did not appear that the certificate was ever delivered to deft., or that he was ever expressly notified of the allotment, but he was, with the rest of the shareholders, from time to time notified of the calls, to which he paid no attention, & had never paid anything on the stock; & some years afterwards, on being requested by the secretary to pay up his stock, he stated that he did not consider that he ought to pay anything, but gave no reason why:—Held: there was sufficient evidence of

He formally applied for the shares, & paid a deposit; the shares were accordingly allotted to him, & on the same day he was informed of his appointment, but no notice of the allotment was sent to him. Part of the price was to be paid upon allotment & the balance by instalments; but M. reserved the right to pay for the shares in full upon the allotment on the terms of the prospectus. He made a promissory note for $3,750, payable on demand, to the order of the agent, & took from the agent a receipt for the demand note "in payment of thirty shares, M. to be a provincial director." The note was endorsed by the agent to the bank, & sent to the provisional directors, who duly allotted thirty to M. No formal or direct notice of allotment was given to M., but he was notified by the bank in writing that his note was due & asked to give it his prompt attention. Nothing was paid upon the note; an order was made for the winding-up of the bank; & in the proceedings thereunder the liquidator sought to make M. liable as a contributory:—Held: assuming that allotment & notice of allotment were necessary to bind the bargain, allotment was duly made, & the written demand made upon M. for payment of the note was sufficient notice; he had knowledge of the allotment, & that was all that was necessary.—Re MONARCH BANK OF CANADA, MURPHY'S CASE (1919), 45 O. This allotment letter was unstamped. On Oct. 19 & Nov. 14, S. wrote to the co. declining to pay calls till certain information as to the position of the co. was afforded him. On Dec. 12 a duplicate letter of allotment duly stamped was sent by the co. to S. On Dec. 15, S. wrote to the co. that it was his intention to withdraw his application for shares, & he returned the allotment letters, with a request for the return of his deposit. On Dec. 22, S. was informed by the secretary that his name was entered on the register for fifty shares. From that date till Oct. 1875, several letters were sent by S. to the co., by which he repeated his refusal to take up the shares, & asked for a cancellation of the allotment, & a return of the deposit. The co., however, did not cancel the allotment, nor return the deposit, & S.'s name remained on the register at the date of the winding-up order in Oct. 1875. Upon an application by S. that his name might be removed from the list of contributories:—Held: (1) the first allotment letter, though unstamped, was receivable as evidence that S. had received notice of the allotment, & at any rate, the defect, if any, was cured by the second stamped letter; (2) S. having taken no actual steps for the removal of his name from the register, & allowed it to remain there at the date of the winding-up order, must remain on the list.—Re WHITLEY PARTNERS, LTD., STEEL'S CASE

These certificates were not sent to the shareholders, but were handed to the co.'s brokers for delivery to them. The brokers published a notice in a daily paper that these certificates were lying at their office, but did not send written notices to the subscribers. Deft. never called for or received his certificate of allotment & never paid the 10 per cent. The only evidence of the notices being sent to deft. was the general statement of the secretary, that he directed notices to be sent ten months after the allotment, to those shareholders likely to pay, that their calls were due:—Held: deft. was not liable as the evidence was not sufficient to prove notice of allotment to him.—*NASMITH v. 1743. Conduct amounting to acceptance—Resolution for allotment to members of managing committee—Allotment reported to meeting of committee though no allotment—Minute of resolution signed by chairman.]—A. was one of the provisional committee & also one of the managing committee of a railway co., directed to be wound up under 1844 Act. By a resolution of the committee, it was resolved that the committee of allotment should make an allotment, according to a scheme, under which each of the managing committee should have 500 shares. By a minute made at a meeting of the managing committee, signed by A. as chairman, it was reported that the committee had completed the allotment of shares according to the above-mentioned scheme. Nothing further, however, was done as to this allotment:—Held: A. was properly put on the list of contributories in respect of 500 shares.—*Re OXFORD & WORCESTER EXTENSION & CHESTER JUNCTION RY. o. Conduct amounting to acceptance—Acquiescence in election as director—& insufficient repudiation of invalidly allotted shares.]—An allotment of shares having been made to H. at a meeting of directors in July, 1892, his name was entered on the share register for the shares. The allotment was in fact void, as there had not been a quorum at the meeting. H. was subsequently elected a director as the holder of these shares, & he acquiesced in his election at the time:—Held: (1) there was evidence of a contract to take shares apart from the allotment, & H.'s name must be put on the list of contributories for the shares unless he had been induced to take the shares by misrepresentation & had repudiated the contract previously to the liquidation.

After H. had acquiesced in his election as director he became suspicious that misrepresentations had been made to him, & a week after his election he wrote requesting that his name should be removed from the list of directors & the list of shareholders, without stating the grounds for that request. He took no further step previously to the liquidation:—Held: that did not amount to sufficient repudiation of his contract to take shares, as what was done did not amount to a fresh agreement binding on H. so as to disentitle him to claim any benefit from the shares, & on the co. so as to preclude them from making any claim on H. as a shareholder.—Re NEW SOUTH WALES REFRIGERATING & MEAT EXPORT CO., LTD., HEAD'S CASE (1894), 15 N. S. W. Eq. 121.—AUS.

In Apr., 1877, H. became a director of a co., which was subject to 1862 Act, Table A., by which no share qualification is necessary for a director. On May 1, a resolution was passed by the board, H. not being present, "that the 608 shares applied for be allotted, & that letters of allotment be at once sent out." Fifty of these 608 shares were subsequently entered in the name of H. on the register of shareholders. H. never applied for any shares, & never received any letter of allotment, & never knew that his name was on the register until after the commencement of the winding up of the co., when he at once repudiated his liability:—Held: H. was not bound, as director, to know the contents of the register of the shareholders, & his name must be removed from the list of contributories.—Re WINCHAM SHIP-BUILDING, BOILER & SALT CO., HALLMARK'S CASE (1878), 9 Ch. He attended one board meeting, & so far took part in the business as on that occasion to sign a cheque together with one of the directors. On receiving, a few days afterwards, a letter of allotment of the shares necessary to qualify him, he at once returned it, declining at the same time to act as director, as he was not satisfied upon the two points stipulated for by him. The directors, in purported compliance with applications therefor, subsequently allotted to T. 1,000 shares, & on a later date allotted to M. & to the other appcts. respectively the shares applied for by them, & the names were placed on the register. M. was himself present at, & as a director took part in, the allotment of shares to himself, & he paid the application & allotment moneys in respect thereof but made no further payments. The co. then went into voluntary liquidation. Four months later M. having applied to the ct. to have his name removed from the register & list of contributories in respect of shares allotted to him:—Held: his name having been placed on the register with his consent, he was a person who had agreed to become a member of the co. in relation to those shares, & continuing as such up to the date of liquidation, he was now too late in applying.—*MURRAY v. The co. was not bound by this promise, & had no power to allot paid-up shares except for value received. N. acted as a director of the co., & received fees for his services. He was from time to time present at the sealing of the register, on which his name was entered as the holder of twenty unpaid shares, & at directors' meetings when calls were made. He also received notices of calls due on these shares, but he took no notice of the applications. He also concurred in a report, which spoke of him as eligible for election as director. Subsequently R. procured twenty fully paid-up shares to be transferred to N., & N.'s name then stood on the register as the holder of twenty fully paid-up shares, & twenty other shares on which nothing had been paid. at a premium. The report was approved at a general meeting of shareholders. One of the directors, C., was present at the meetings of the directors when the report was prepared & adjusted & also at the meeting of the shareholders when the report was adopted. After his death, which occurred about 11 months after that meeting, the shares having fallen in value considerably in the meantime, the co. placed his name on the register as holder of an eighth part, there being 8 directors, of the unaccepted shares & demanded payment of the issue price thereof from his representative. In a petition for rectification of the register by the deletion of the entry, on the ground that C. had never agreed to take the shares, it was admitted by the co. that he had never accepted in writing & that no notice of allotment had been sent to him. 1753. ———.]—On June 17, 1892, H. signed & delivered to the promoters of a co. a letter agreeing that upon the public issue of its shares he would, in consideration of a percentage, subscribe for 400 shares. If the whole issue was bonâ fide subscribed for by the public, no allotment was to be made to H. The letter also contained an authority to the promoters, in the event of H. not applying for shares, to apply for them in his name, & an authority to the directors to allot them to him, "This engagement is binding on me for two months from this date." The shares were offered to the public on June 20, 21 & 22, but very few applications were made. On July 1, when the public subscription list was closed, the promoters signed a memorandum at the foot of the letter, dated July 1, 1892, & accepting H.'s offer. The letter with the memorandum thereon & an application by the promoters in H.'s name were on the same day sent to the co., & the shares were thereupon allotted to H. His name was put on the register of shareholders. He knew of this, & he paid the co. the allotment money in respect of the shares, received his certificates & on two occasions voted by proxy; but it was not shown that he knew when the offer was accepted. The name was still on the register when the co. went into liquidation nearly two years afterwards:—Held: (1) (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J.) the promoters could not wait to see the result of the invitation to the public, & after it had failed, accept H.'s offer, & he was not liable as a contributory; (2) (LOPES & KAY, L.J.J., LINDLEY, L.J., dubitante) the expression "This engagement is binding on me for two months" meant that the offer made by the letter was to be open for acceptance for two months; the shares, therefore, were properly applied for in H.'s name, & the allotment to him was valid; (3) whether the application for shares was authorised or not, H., having accepted them without inquiry, & having acted as a shareholder for nearly two years up to the time of the winding up, could not now be heard to contend that he was not a shareholder.—Re HEMP, YARN & CORDAGE CO., HINDLEY'S CASE, [1896] 2 Ch. 121; 65 L. agreed, under circumstances which made it doubtful whether the agreement was binding on the shareholders, to transfer its business to a new co., one of the terms of the agreement being, that each shareholder in the old co. should become a shareholder in the new co. The shareholders in the old co. were accordingly registered as having transferred their shares to the new co., & share certificates in the new co. were sent to each shareholder in the old co. Both the cos. were afterwards wound up:—Held: (1) a shareholder who had acknowledged the receipt of the certificates, & had retained them, was a shareholder in the new co.; (2) a shareholder who had taken no notice of the communication, & had done nothing in relation to the agreement, was not a shareholder in the new co.—Re EMPIRE ASSURANCE CORPN., CHALLIS'S CASE, SOMERVILLE'S CASE (1871), 6 Ch. 1761. — Non-acknowledgment of allotment.

—On Oct. 3, 1889, at a meeting of the directors of a co. "it was resolved that 9242 shares be & are hereby allotted to the following, being the nominees of the vendor." R. was named in the list of nominees as allottee of ten shares. On Oct. 7, 1889, the secretary of the co. by letter informed R. that ten fully paid-up shares had been allotted to him. R. did not reply to this letter. The agreements under which these shares were allotted were not filed with the Registrar of Joint-Stock Cos. No shares were issued under the allotment. On Oct. 28, 1889, an agreement was entered into between the co. & B., the vendor, which provided for the issue to the vendor or his nominees of 60,000 fully paid-up shares. On Nov. 20, 1889, the allotment of the 9242 shares was cancelled, & in pursuance of the agreement of Oct. 28, 1889, the shares were re-allotted to the vendor & his nominees, including R. The agreement of Oct. 28, 1889, was filed with the Registrar of Joint-Stock Cos. In Nov. 1890, the co. was ordered to be wound up, & R. was placed on the list of contributories in respect of ten wholly unpaid shares. On summons to vary the certificate of the chief clerk:—Held: (1) the contract of Oct. 28, 1889, was a sufficient contract in writing within 1867 Act, s. 25; (2) the shares being issued after that date must be regarded as fully paid-up shares; (3) the non-reply by R. to the letter of Oct. 7, 1889, did not constitute acceptance by R. to become a member of the co.

a syndicate to purchase & had purchased a particular piece of land, met together & agreed to form a limited co. to take over the land, certain scrip in the co. to be allotted to each member of the syndicate. At such meeting the question of drawing up the memorandum & arts. of assocn. were discussed, & it was agreed that it should be left to the solr. of the syndicate to draw them up & register the co. The solr. accordingly did so, & included in the objects for which the co. was formed, power to purchase land in any of the Australasian Colonies, & other powers not necessary for a land co. Immediately after the registration, scrip for debt's proportion of shares was sent to him. He did not know of the provisions of the memorandum of assocn. or arts., or make any inquiries as to them for over three years, during which the co. went on dealing with strangers. Meanwhile instalments on his shares became due, which he did not pay. When the co. becoming a failure, eventually pressed him for payment, he refused to pay on the ground that the co. registered was not the co. he had agreed to join, which was a co. to purchase this particular piece of land only. On action brought by the co. for such instalments:—Held: the solr. was the agent of debt., among others, to draw up the memorandum & arts. of assocn., & it was debt's duty to see, within a reasonable time, that the agent had not exceeded his authority & as he had allowed an unreasonable time to go by without objection, he was liable.—OSBORNE PARK LAND & INVESTMENT CO., LTD. v. PEGG (1892), 18 V. L. R. 515.—AUS.

1787. ——— Based on forged transfer—Registered holder a bare trustee.]—C. owned stock in a co. incorporated under 1862 Act. His clerk, P., contracted to sell stock in the co. to S., who was the nominee of B. In order to carry out the contract, P. forged a transfer from C. to S., which was left by S. at the office of the co. for registration. The co. sent a letter to C. inquiring whether the transfer was correct, & as they received no answer from him, they registered the transfer. B. borrowed money from a bank, & by way of security for the loan the stock was transferred by S. at the request of B. to I. as trustee for the bank, & the co. registered I. as owner & issued a certificate accordingly. The money borrowed by B. was afterwards repaid by him to the bank, & the stock was held by I. as a bare trustee for B. The forgery was discovered, & the co. then refused to acknowledge I. as the holder of the stock. In an action brought by B. & I. to compel the co. to recognise their title:—Held: although I., as trustee for the bank, might have acquired a good title by estoppel against the co., yet that title ceased when the loan by the bank was paid off, & no estoppel existed in favour of B. against the co.; for B. in contracting, through S., to buy the stock belonging to C. had acted on the faith of the forged transfer, & had not relied upon any act of the co., & by sending the forged transfer to the co. had induced them to recognise his nominee as the holder, & the action would not lie.—*SIMM v. 1793. Certificate forged by secretary.]—It was the duty of a secretary of a co. to procure the execution of certificates of shares in the co. with all requisite & prescribed formalities, & to issue them to the persons entitled to receive the same. By a resolution of the directors of the co. it was provided that certificates of shares should be signed by one director, the secretary, & the accountant. The secretary of the co. having executed a deed purporting to transfer certain shares in the co. to G., a purchaser of such shares, issued to G. a certificate stating that he had been registered as the owner of the shares. Such certificate was in the usual & authorised form, & sealed with the co.'s seal, but the signature of the director appended thereto was a forgery, & the seal of the co. was, in fact, affixed thereto without the authority of the directors. G. deposited the certificate with pltf. as a security for advances, & subsequently executed a transfer of the shares to pltf. Neither G. nor pltf. had any knowledge or reason to suspect that the certificate was otherwise than a genuine document, or that the matters stated therein were untrue. The co. refused to register pltf. as owner of the shares, stating that there were no such shares standing in G.'s name in their books:—Held: the co. were estopped by the certificate issued by their secretary from disputing pltf.'s title to the shares.—SHAW v. This certificate was, in point of form, in accordance with the co.'s arts. of assocn. inasmuch as it bore the seal of the co., & appeared to be signed by two of the directors & counter-signed by the secretary. The seal of the co. was, however, affixed to it by the secretary fraudulently & without authority, & the signatures of the two directors were forged by him. In an action against the co. for damages for refusing to register applts. as owners of the shares:—Held: in the absence of any evidence that the co. ever held out the secretary as having authority in this behalf to do anything more than the mere ministerial act of delivering share certificates, when duly made, to the owners of shares, the co. was not estopped by the forged certificate from disputing the claim of applts., or responsible to them for the wrongful action of their secretary.—RUBEN v. 1795. General rule.]—In the present case the co. has issued under the seal of the co. a certificate in the form which is set out in the case, in which the co. has asserted that these shares have been fully paid up. These certificates are issued under the directions of the Act of Parliament, & are made prima facie evidence of all that they state; only prima facie evidence. The certificates are given & issued for the very purpose of enabling the person who holds them to go to others for the purpose, amongst others, of selling the shares, & to say: "Here is the certificate; you see I am a shareholder, as the co. has so certified it. Act upon that, & bargain with me upon the supposition that I am." That is the very object with which they are issued under the co.'s seal. Now when the co. has so issued the certificate under the co.'s seal to enable a person to induce others to buy the shares, & more especially when the co. has registered the transfer solely in consequence of that, it would be in the highest degree an injustice to say that the co. shall, as against that person, be permitted to say, "There was a mistake or inaccuracy in the representations that the shares have been fully paid up." You would be fully entitled to say as against everybody else who had acted upon it that it worked an estoppel. I think the liquidator would be exactly in the same position (LORD BLACKBURN).—BURKINSHAW v. NICOLIS, No. 1953, post.

1799. Regulations of company—Reference on certificate.]—The constitution of a joint-stock co. required the rules & regulations to be signed by a person before he could become an adventurer in the concern. H. in 1853 applied verbally, for shares in the co. & received a certificate of shares containing a reference to the rules & regulations. He paid his deposit-money, but neither attended the meetings nor interfered with the management, & never signed the rules or regulations, of the co.

He brought an action to recover his deposit-money, which action was compromised. An order was made for the winding up of the co. & the chief clerk certified that H. was a contributory. A. made the further payment required by the prospectus, & in June, 1865, received in exchange for the banker's receipt a certificate that he was the proprietor of fifteen shares in the co., "subject to the provisions of the memorandum & arts. of assocn., & to the rules & regulations of the said co." The objects of the co. as stated in the memorandum & arts. of assocn. were more extensive than those stated in the prospectus. A. never attended any meeting of shareholders, & did not see the memorandum or arts. of assocn. until May, 1866:—Held: he was entitled to have his name removed from the register, as the terms of the certificate did not amount to notice that he had entered into a new contract, or that the objects of the memorandum & arts. were more extensive than those of the prospectus on the faith of which he applied for shares.—Re RUSSIAN (VYKSOUNSKY) IRONWORKS Co., WEBSTER'S CASE (1866), L. B. fraudulently altered a cheque for £600, drawn by the club in favour of S. or order, by striking out the word "order," & adding the word "bearer"; & then induced the bank to place the £600 to the credit of his own account. In Nov. 1878, pltf. lent B. £1,000 upon the security of the deposit of a share certificate for fifty shares in the bank. The certificate gave the holder thereof notice that the bank had a paramount lien on the shares of any shareholder for whatever might be due from him to the bank. On Mar. 17, 1880, pltf. gave notice to the bank of the deposit of the certificate, & was told by the bank manager, in answer to his inquiry, that the bank had no claim on the shares. In May, 1880, the bank got

SECT. 19.—ISSUE OF SHARES GENERALLY.

1807. What constitutes issue.—The word "issue" was one which had no very definite legal import with reference to shares. It was found in 1867 Act, s. 25, & had given rise to some difficulty. As was shown by Re Heaton's Steel & Iron Co., Blyth's Case, No. 1929, post, shares might be issued within the meaning of that sect. although the certificates were not; & according to Re Ambrose Lake Tin & Copper Co., Clarke's Case, No. 1935, post, an issue took place, in the language of COTTON, L.J., when "the transaction is complete, when the allottee has become complete master of the shares" (STIRLING, J.).—*SPITZEL v. as the directors may think expedient. But if directors require other appcts. for shares to make payments on application & allotment, & issue their own shares for which they have subscribed the memorandum without requiring any such payments to be made, & without disclosing to the other shareholders this difference between their position & that of the directors, they commit a breach of duty, even though in so doing they act without fraud, & in the belief that they are doing nothing wrong.

(3) Directors who so use their powers as to obtain benefits for themselves at the expense of the other shareholders, without informing them of the facts, cannot be allowed to retain those benefits, but must account for them to the co., so that all the shareholders may participate in them.

Validity of—Liability of holder for unpaid balance—Issue by no-liability company.]—The directors of a "no-liability" co. having a nominal capital of £30,000 in 60,000 shares of 10s. of which 10,000 shares had not been issued were authorised by the rules of the co. to issue any unissued shares at a discount, & the directors pursuant to a recommendation contained in a resolution of shareholders resolved that the unissued shares be issued & allotted as paid, up to 5s. on payment of 3s. per share by 12 monthly instalments of 3d. per share. Deft. applied for certain shares on these terms & they were duly allotted to him. After deft. had paid 5 of the monthly instalments his liability to pay the further instalments as they became due was suspended by the co. & the co. then made calls upon the whole of the shares. After paying 2 such calls deft. failed to pay a third call & the shares held by him were forfeited for non-payment of that call. The co. afterwards went into liquidation & upon application being made to deft. to pay the balance of the instalments which he had agreed to pay when he applied for the shares he refused to that partly paid-up shares shall be issued as fully paid up cannot be split up into component elements so as to give effect to one stipulation only which might have been valid if it had been made in express terms & by a separate & substantive condition.

(3) (LORD MACNAGHTEN). The issue of shares at a discount is as much an unauthorised reduction of capital as the purchase by a co. of its own shares.

The whole of the shares in the new co., 500,000 in number, were issued to the shareholders in the old co. in the manner mentioned in the agreement. Prior to their issue a contract providing for their being issued in that way was filed with the Registrar of Joint-Stock Cos., under 1867 Act, s. 25. The co. afterwards increased its capital by the creation of 500,000 more shares of £1 each, of which 50,000 were issued as fully paid up as the consideration for the purchase of other property by the co., & 240,000 were issued at a discount of 15s. per share, a contract being in each case filed, prior to the issue, with the Registrar of Joint-Stock Cos. After this had been done the co. passed a special resolution for the reduction of the capital by cancelling paid-up capital to the extent of 15s. per share, as having been lost or being unrepresented by available assets. The co. petitioned for the confirmation of the resolution by the ct. There was no evidence for any loss of capital otherwise than by reason of the issue of the shares at a discount:—Held: the issue of the shares at a discount was illegal, & the shareholders were still liable to the extent of 15s. per share & therefore the proposed reduction of capital could not be confirmed by the ct.—Re NEW CHILE GOLD MINING Co. B. What constitutes.

1825. Issue in respect of debt owing by company—Plus interest.]—An agreement was entered into between a joint-stock co. & C. whereby it was agreed that the money expended by C. upon certain works should be a debt from the co. to him, & should at his option be a debt payable on demand, with interest at 15 per cent. per annum on each item, or a debt agreed to be extinguished by the allotment to C. of fully paid-up shares of a nominal amount equal to the money expended up to Dec. 31, 1887, without interest, but with the addition of 15 per cent. of such sum. The agreement was filed with the Registrar of Joint-Stock Cos. C. elected to take shares equal in nominal value to the amount expended by him with 15 per cent. addition, & they were accordingly allotted to him. He subsequently moved that the register of shareholders of the co. might be rectified by the removal of his name, on the ground that the transaction amounted to an issue of shares at a discount, & was therefore unlawful:—Held: the shares having been issued with an addition of 15 per cent. beyond the amount expended by C. were issued in respect of something which was not entirely money due, & therefore were issued at a discount & the register must be rectified.—Re MIDLAND ELECTRIC LIGHT & POWER CO., LTD. (1889), 60 L. 1826. Commission on underwriting.]—A. agreed by letter to "underwrite at 15 per cent. discount" a certain number of shares to be issued by a new co., the co. undertaking that all applications for shares received within a specified time should be allotted in full out of the shares underwritten by A.; & A. further agreed to pay within the specified time the application money on the balance of the shares not applied for by the public. The evidence of witnesses expert in such transactions showed that "underwrite" in that connection meant

"agree to take so many of the shares underwritten as were not applied for by the public," & that it did not mean merely "agree to place in the market." A. repudiated the allotment to him by the co. of that portion of the shares which was not taken by the public. On the co. shortly afterwards going into liquidation, A. was placed on the list of contributories in respect of the shares not taken by the public:—Held: (1) the true meaning of the contract was that A. was himself to take, without making any further application for allotment, all the shares not taken by the public, & he was to do this in consideration of receiving a commission of 15 per cent. on the whole number of shares he had agreed to underwrite; (2) the term "discount" was used inaccurately, & the agreement did not really mean that the shares were to be issued "at a discount," which would have been ultra vires, & A. was therefore rightly placed on the list of contributories in respect of that portion of those shares which were not taken by the public.—*Re LICENSED VICTUALLERS' MUTUAL TRADING ASSOCN., Ex p. It was arranged between the patentees & the other shareholders, that the latter should pay an additional 10 per cent on their stock, making 20 per cent, in consideration of which the patentees were to pay up the balance of the unpaid stock of the seven shareholders. Thereafter each of the seven gave his cheque to the 1835. Position of holder—On winding up—Shares in fact not fully paid up.]—The arts. of assocn. of a joint-stock co. stated that certain shares subscribed for by C. should be considered as paid up. By a deed of even date with the arts. of assocn., C. assigned his patent to the co. for a nominal consideration of 10s., there being also a parol agreement that the delivery of the paid-up shares was the consideration for the assignment.

—The promoters of the co. agreed to allot 127,500 out of its total capital of 250,000 $10 shares, all marked fully-paid, to one of their number C., in consideration of his procuring A. to advance $25,000 to the co., & of certain other services, & by the same instrument C. agreed to transfer 85,000 of such shares to A. in consideration of the $25,000:—Held: A. was a purchaser of the 85,000 shares from C., who held them as fully paid up, & could not be treated as a purchaser from the co. of the shares at a discount, & could not be forced, at the instance of another shareholder, to contribute to its funds any part of the difference between the $25,000 which he paid for them, & their face value.—FRASER RIVER MINING & DREDGING CO., LTD. v. GALLAGHER (1896), 5 B. C. R. 82.—CAN.

q. Allotment to man of straw—To knowledge of company.]—Deft. co. allotted 40,000 shares of $10 each to a man of no means who did not pay for them & was not expected to do so:

—Held: the allotment was a "colourable transaction" to enable the co. to issue shares at a discount, & ultra vires.—LINDSAY v. IMPERIAL STEEL & WIRE CO. (1910), 18 O. W. R. 408; 21 O. L. R. 375; 1 O. W. N. 930.—CAN.

r. Issue of new one pound shares—In exchange for same number of less nominal value.]—In exchange for 20,000 shares of 5s. each a co. issued 20,000 new shares of £1 each:—Held: (1) persons who, with knowledge of the facts, took new for old shares, had taken them with only 5s. paid, & were therefore liable on a winding up to be put on the list of contributories for the unpaid balance; (2) the fact that the assets were sufficient to pay the debts made no difference, for if shares are issued at a discount, their holders are liable to pay for them in full to secure the adjustment of the rights of contributories inter se in the co.'s assets.—*SETA DIAMONDS, LTD. s. Position of holder—On winding up—Effect of reincorporation of company subsequent to issue.]—A joint-stock limited liability co. being indebted in a small amount, which was afterwards paid off, & having at the time assets worth more than double the amount of its issued stock & all other liabilities, allotted a number of shares to its shareholders, at a discount. Subsequently the co. was freshly incorporated with the shares so issued treated as fully-paid, & afterwards falling into difficulties, was put into liquidation under R. S. 1836. ——— Distribution of assets.]—A. co. being in need of further capital issued shares at a discount. The original shares were fully paid. In the winding up there were surplus assets:—Held: the assets ought to be distributed upon the footing of returning to the holders of the original shares a sum sufficient to place the holders of both classes of shares upon an equality as to the amount actually paid upon the shares of each, & of dividing the balance in proportion to the shares.—Re WEYMOUTH & CHANNEL ISLANDS STEAM PACKET CO., [1891] 1 Ch. 66; 60 L. 1837. ———.]—By a preliminary agree-ment made before the incorporation of a co. it was agreed that 75 shares fully paid up should be allotted to the vendors as the purchase price of the property to be sold to the co., leaving 25 shares in the co. to be subscribed for in cash. This agreement was adopted by the co. after incorporation, with the modifications that £5,000 in cash, omitted by mistake from the preliminary agreement, should be paid to the vendors in addition to the 75 shares, & that the vendors should distribute 25 out of the 75 shares ratably among the cash subscribers of the first-mentioned 25 cash shares. The co. accordingly allotted 25 of the 75 vendors' shares to the cash subscribers, the certificates of title stating that the shares were fully paid up. There was no question of 1867 Act, s. 25, not being complied with. In the winding up of the co. the liquidator applied to have the allottees of the 25 distributed shares placed on the list of contributories. There was no question of any fraud or impropriety having been committed:—Held: the holders of the 25 distributed shares were liable to contribute the full nominal amount of such shares in cash.—Re ALKALINE REDUCTION SYNDICATE, LTD. (1896), 45 W. 1839. ——— Liability to pay in full—Though contract registered under 1867 Act, s. 25.]—A limited co. issued part of its capital in £10 preference shares at par, every present shareholder to be entitled to one preference share at 25 per cent. discount for each ordinary share held by him. Some of the shareholders took these preference shares, paid the £7 10s. per share, & had certificates given them stating them to be holders of shares fully paid up. No contract was registered under sect. 25 of the above Act. The co. having been ordered to be wound up, the preference shareholders who had taken their shares at a discount were placed on the list of contributories, & calls for the unpaid £2 10s. per share were made on them & paid. Some of them then applied for leave to prove in the winding up "in damages for breach of contract or otherwise in respect of the issue of the preference shares:—"Held: (KAY, J.) if there were any claim for damages the case fell within 1862 Act, s. 38 (7), but appcts. could not have maintained an action for damages against the co. if it had not been wound up, & could not prove for damages in the winding up, either against other creditors, or shareholders, or the co. On appeal:—Held: if the contract between the co. & the shareholders was to be treated as a contract to issue fully paid-up shares, the shareholders might on finding out that the shares were not in point of law fully paid up, have rescinded the contract to take them; but as after an order to wind up there could be no rescission, the shareholders had no remedy, it being settled by Houldsworth v. City of Glasgow Bank, No. 1553, ante, that a shareholder retaining his shares cannot bring an action against the co. for misrepresentations by which he was induced to take them, & the ct. being of opinion that no substantial distinction could be drawn for this purpose between misrepresentation & a breach of a contract that the shares should be fully paid-up shares.

Semble: if the contract was to issue shares at a discount, the allottees took the shares subject to a liability to pay their nominal amount in full, & could not be exonerated from this liability even by a registered contract.—Re ADDLESTONE LINOLEUM CO. (1887), 37 Ch. b. ——— On agreement to take discounted shares—When repudiation justified.]—If a man agrees to purchase from a co. paid-up shares at a price less than their nominal value, he may repudiate the agreement at any time before he actually becomes a shareholder on the ground that the co. cannot legally give him what he bargained for. The moment, however, he does any acts, such as accepting certificates, attending meetings, receiving dividends, etc., which show that the co. treated him as a shareholder, & that he acquiesced in being so treated, he is liable for the amount unpaid on his shares.—BANK OF OTTAWA v. JONES, [1919] 1 W. W. R. 4.—CAN.*

c. ——— Right to rectification of register—& extinguishment of liability on promissory note—Given in payment.]—Where the shares of a co. have been issued at a discount in face of statutory prohibition to do so, such issue is ultra vires of the co. & therefore illegal & void, & the person to whom they are issued is not liable to the co. on a promissory note given for the shares. Such person may become liable on a new implied contract arising from his assent to his name being placed & continued on the register in respect of the shares, but this does not validate the original transaction & cannot be relied on to fix him with liability upon the note.—*PRINCESS COPPER MINES, LTD. v. d. ——— & repayment of amount paid up.]—The memorandum & arts. of assocn. of a co. registered under the Cos. Acts contained provisions to the effect that the co. might issue its shares "at par, or at a discount, or at a premium." A person to whom new shares had been allotted at a discount presented a petition to the ct. for rectification of the register by the deletion of his name therefrom, & for an order on the co. for repayment of the amount paid by him on his shares. 1841. — Issue supposedly lawful—Mistake of law.]—In Jan. 1887, 673 £5 shares in the R. Co. were allotted to S. at a discount of £4 10s. per share. At this time, & until Dec. 1887, it was generally believed that the issue of shares at a discount was lawful. In Mar. 1887, she sold 150 of these shares to a purchaser for value, without notice that the shares were issued at a discount, & under the belief that they were fully paid up; but she subsequently took back the 150 shares from the purchaser, in exchange for 150 fully paid-up shares in the same co. In Apr. & Aug. 1887, she attempted to part with some of the remaining shares. In Jan. 1888, she handed in proxies to be used at a meeting. In Feb. 1888, she wrote to the secretary of the co. protesting against a proposed new issue of shares at a discount on the ground of its illegality. In June, 1888, she repudiated the shares, & in Nov. 1888, she applied to the ct. for removal of her name from the register in respect of the 673 shares, & for repayment of the amount paid thereon:—Held: (1) as regards the 150 shares, inasmuch as she had repurchased them from a purchaser for value without notice, she was entitled to treat them as fully paid up, & her application failed; (2) S. having by her conduct assented to keep the shares other than the 150 shares, although under a misapprehension as to the legal effect of the contract, was bound to pay the full amount thereon, & was not entitled to any relief.—*Re RAILWAY TIME TABLES PUBLISHING Co., Ex p. At the date of the agreement the shares were at a discount, but they rose to a premium before the option expired:—Held: it was not competent for the directors to issue the shares at a discount, & they were liable for the difference between the par value of the shares & the price at which they were allotted, but in the absence of fraud the measure of damages was the difference between the price of allotment & the value of the shares at the date of the agreement, & not at the expiration of the option.—*HIRSCHE v.
